Accessions
151,404

Shelf No.
G.4021.1

Barton Library. V. 7.

Thomas Pennant Barton.

Boston Public Library.
Received May, 1873.
Not to be taken from the Library.

THE WORKS OF Mr. WILLIAM SHAKESPEAR.

The Seventh VOLUME.

CONTAINING

VENUS and ADONIS.
TARQUIN and LUCRECE.
And Mr. Shakeſpear's MISCELLANY POEMS.

To which is Prefix'd,

An ESSAY on the ART, RISE, and PROGRESS of the STAGE, in Greece, Rome, and England.

And a GLOSSARY of the Old Words us'd in theſe Works.

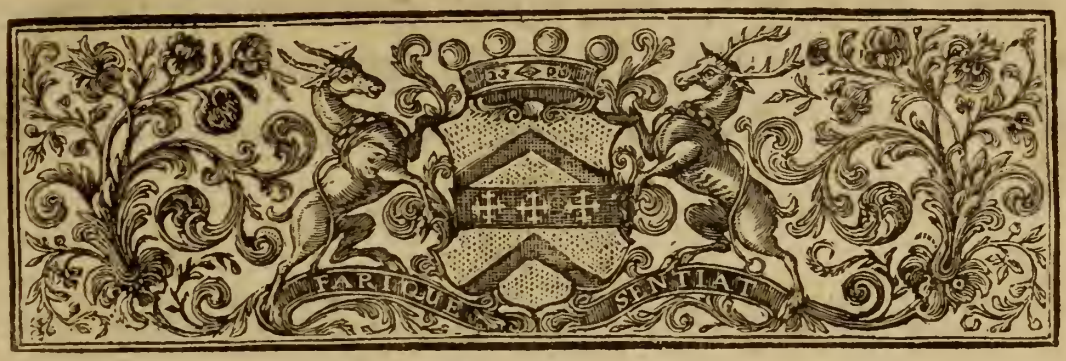
The Whole Revis'd and Corrected, with a PREFACE, By Dr. SEWELL.

LONDON;

Printed by J. DARBY, for A. BETTESWORTH, F. FAYRAM, W. MEARS, J. PEMBERTON, J. HOOKE, C. RIVINGTON, F. CLAY, J. BATLEY, E. SYMON. M.DCC.XXV.

151,404
May, 1873



To the Right HONOURABLE

The Lord WALPOLE.

My LORD,

I SHOULD not have dared to approach Your Lordſhip with a leſs Poet in my Hand than SHAKESPEAR; the dead Ornament of the Engliſh Nation, being the moſt proper Preſent to its Living Glory. He, My LORD, has ſhared the Fate common to every great Genius, receiving very ill Returns for all his Beauties and Benefits; in amends for which, my preſent Endeavour is to wipe off the Duſt of Age, Error and Ignorance, and ſcreen his valuable Remains under Your Lordſhip's Protection.

YOUR Lordſhip knowing his Excellencies, can happily compare them with the Antients, and have thereby a peculiar Right to this Offering. That Nurſe of Arts and Sciences, that Builder and Refiner of Mankind, (with what Pride I ſay our common Mother, ETON!) has furniſhed You with a true Taſte of Letters; ſo that tho SHAKESPEAR might fear You, as a Judge, yet he now prides himſelf in courting You, as a Patron.

IN Your Travels, Your Name, the beſt Harbinger, prepared for You at every Court a Reception ſuitable to the Son of Mr. WALPOLE. You was then the Repreſentative of the Engliſh Genius Abroad, diſplaying that Probity, Integrity, and Openneſs of Soul, that diſtinguiſhes this Nation from all others.

IN the Situation You are now in, My LORD, You have nothing to do but to imitate the Great Pattern

Pattern before You, to the Joy of Your Friends, and the Diſappointment not of Yours, ſo much as of Your Country's Enemies. You have the nobleſt Incentives: For it is with You as with young Aſcanius,

Te pater ÆNEAS & Avunculus excitat HECTOR.

I am,

My LORD,

Your Lordſhip's moſt obedient humble Servant,

G. SEWELL

THE PREFACE.

MEN of Learning and Leiſure have uſually buſied themſelves in reprinting the Works of the celebrated antient Authors in the Greek and Latin Languages: By which means it happens, that of many of theſe we have more than we need, and Numbers of no Uſe at all; the Editors being ſo very inconſiderable, as to drive Gentlemen of Taſte back to the earlieſt Impreſſions of Books, where the genuine Senſe appears in a truer Light than in the idle Comments of our modern Publiſhers. Firſt Editions are rarely to be ſeen, but like Jewels in the Cabinets of the richly Curious; and many new ones bear little Value, either from their Commonneſs, or Coarſeneſs. What then has been done by the really Learned to the dead Languages, by treading backwards into the Paths of Antiquity, and reviving and correcting good old Authors, we in Juſtice owe to our own great Writers, both in Proſe, and Poetry. They are in ſome degree our Claſſics; on their Foundation we muſt build, as the Formers and Refiners of our Language.

IN reforming old Palaces, we find that Time and Careleſneſs have kept equal Pace in ſpreading Ruin; and ſo it fares with with Authors, who carry with the Ruſt of Antiquity, the Blemiſhes of Neglect and ill Uſage. Of this, SHAKESPEAR is a very remarkable Inſtance, who has been handed down from Age to Age very incorrect, his Errors increaſing by Time, and being almoſt conſtantly republiſh'd to his Diſgrace. Whatever were the Faults of this great Poet, the Printers have been hitherto as careful to multiply them, as if they had been real Beauties; thinking perhaps with the Indians that the diſfiguring a good Face with Scars of artificial Brutes, had improv'd the Form and Dignity of the Perſon. A fine Writer thus treated looks like Deiphobus among the Shades, ſo maim'd by his pretended Friend, that the good Æneas hardly knew him again; and with him we may cry out,

Quis tam crudeles optavit ſumere Pœnas?

The Anſwer is eaſy, the Tribe of Editors, Correctors, and Printers, who have uſually as little Pity for a Helen, as ſhe had for her Husband.

THESE Abominations of the Preſs, with ſeveral others, we ſhall no doubt find remov'd in the new Edition of his Plays. When a Genius of ſimilar Fire and Fancy, temper'd with a learned Patience, ſits down to conſider what SHAKESPEAR would Think, as well as what he could Write, we may then expect to ſee his Works anſwer our Idea of the Man.

FAR be it from any Hopes of mine, that this Edition of his Poems ſhould equal his curious Correctneſs: a leſs faulty one than the former is all the Reader is to expect. A ſhort Hiſtory, and ſome few occaſional Remarks will be added, to give Light to ſome Paſſages, as well of the Author, as of Mr. Gildon.

THIS Gentleman republiſh'd theſe Poems from an old Impreſſion, in the Year 1710. at the ſame time with Mr. Rowe's Publi-

Publication of his Plays. He uſes many Arguments to prove them genuine, but the beſt is the Style, Spirit, and Fancy of SHAKESPEAR, which are not to be miſtaken by any tolerable Judge in theſe Matters. Venus and Adonis, Tarquin and Lucrece, are out of Diſpute, they being put to the Preſs, and dedicated by the Author himſelf to the Earl of Southampton his great Patron. So that Mr. Rowe is evidently miſtaken when he ſays, That his Venus and Adonis was the only Piece of Poetry he publiſh'd himſelf; there being the ſame Authority for his Tarquin and Lucrece, as for the other.

IF we allow the reſt of theſe Poems to be genuine (as I think Mr. Gildon has prov'd them) the Occaſional ones will appear to be the firſt of his Works. A young Muſe muſt have a Miſtreſs to play off the beginnings of Fancy, nothing being ſo apt to raiſe and elevate the Soul to a pitch of Poetry, as the Paſſion of Love. We find, to wander no farther, that Spenſer, Cowley, and many others paid their Firſt-fruits of Poetry to a real, or an imaginary Lady. Upon this occaſion I conjecture, that SHAKESPEAR took fire on reading our admirable Spenſer, who went but juſt before him in the Line of Life, and was in all probability the Poet moſt in Vogue at that time. To make this Argument the ſtronger, Spenſer is taken notice of in one of theſe little Pieces as a Favourite of our Author's. He alludes certainly to the Fairy Queen, when he mentions his Deep Conceit; that Poem being entirely Allegorical. It has been remark'd, that more Poets have ſprung from Spenſer than all our other Engliſh Writers; to which let me add an Obſervation of the late Dr. Garth, That moſt of our late ones have been ſpoil'd by too early an Admiration of Milton. Be it to Spenſer then that we owe SHAKESPEAR!

The Faireſt Scyon of the Faireſt Tree.

In Metaphor, Alluſion, Deſcription, and all the ſtrongeſt and higheſt Colourings of Poetry, they both are certainly without Equals. Spenſer indeed trod more in the Paths of Learning, borrow'd, improv'd, and heighten'd all he imitated: But SHAKESPEAR's Field is Nature, and there he undoubtedly triumphs without a Rival. His Imagination is a perpetual Fountain of Delight, and all drawn from the same Source: even his Wildnesses are the Wildnesses of Nature. So that Milton seems to have hit his Character best, when he says,

——Shakespear, Fancy's sweetest Child,
Warbles his native Wood-notes wild.

The Child of Fancy, with the additional Epithet of sweetest, is an Expression perfectly fine, becoming both the Praiser, and the Praised, and exactly after the manner of the antient Poets.

AND yet I cannot place his Learning so low as others have done, there being evident Marks thro all his Writings of his Knowledge in the Latin Language, and the Roman History. The Translation of Ovid's two Epistles, Paris to Helen, and her Answer, gives a sufficient Proof of his Acquaintance with that Poet. Nor are these Letters so very easy for a common Translator: For there is a good deal of the Heathen Mythology and Poetical Fictions, of which SHAKESPEAR misses none, but is ever faithful to the Original. How they may be receiv'd in these Days of flowing Versification I know not; but I have a Translation of the Metamorphoses of the same Age, far inferior to these Epistles.

BUT to return to Mr. Gildon, the Republisher of these Poems. He has prefix'd to them an Essay on the Rise and Progress of the Stage, and added Remarks on all his Plays, in order to let the Reader into the Beauties, and Defects of SHAKESPEAR. As to the Essay, tho there have been many Things wrote in a loose unconnected manner on the same Subject, yet I have seen nothing in our Tongue so regular, so fully explanatory, or so well supported by Instances from the antient Tragic Poets. One may safely say, that this was the Study of his his whole Life, the darling and over-ruling Paſſion of his Soul, which work'd off, and ſhew'd it ſelf on all Occaſions both in Diſcourſe and Compoſition. Sophocles and Euripides were his Idols, whom he look'd upon with a ſort of religious Veneration, and took a Pride in making Converts to his Opinion, by diſplaying their hidden Glories to the reſt of Mankind. This intimate Acquaintance with theſe great Originals, made him an excellent Judge of what deviated from their Standard. Great modern Names and Authorities were never his Guides, but a Conformity to the juſt Rules of the beſt antient Critics, and the firſt Writers. For this Reaſon the Reader will find him in the Courſe of the Remarks, bearing very hard on Mr. Dryden, tho at the ſame time that he condemn'd the Critic, he admir'd the Poet.

THE ſame cannot be ſaid of his Style, as his Senſe; his Expreſſion being often dark, his Sentences long, unequal, and crouded with Words of the ſame Signification. A depreſſion of Fortune, want of Health and Leiſure, allow'd him no Time for the Filings, and Poliſhings of a correct Writer. And yet with all his Imperfections, there is great Matter of Improvement to be pick'd out of his Eſſay, and Remarks.

Cum flueret Lutulentus, erat quod tollere velles.

I muſt not here leave Mr. Gildon without taking notice of an Argument he has brought to prove theſe Poems genuine; which is the Uſe of the Compound and Decompound Epithets, as if this was in a manner peculiar to SHAKESPEAR. Others have carried the matter further, and from thence argu'd SHAKESPEAR into an Underſtanding of the Greek Language, from whence they are deriv'd. Any one who is acquainted with old Engliſh Books, may ſee they were in uſe before our Author's Time; and as for their being taken from the Greeks, that will appear ridiculous, when we conſider how eaſily thoſe Epithets are form'd. For allow but any Number adopted into our Tongue, and a hundred may be coin'd in as many Minutes. For Inſtance, if I read far-ſhooting from the Greek, could not I preſently compound Fire-darting, and twenty others?

BUT ſince we are upon this Subject, let us examine it a little more cloſely. I wiſh the Patrons of this Practice would give us any Reaſon for flinging in this unnatural foreign Mixture into our Language, when we have Words of Signification, and Sound ſufficient to anſwer our Ideas. What occaſion is there for Adulteration, when we have current Coin enough of our own? All our beſt and modeſt Writers have ſtretch'd no farther than the Compound, and thoſe ſparingly, and in Tranſlation, where they will beſt bear. If the Compounds may be bore with Patience, the Decompounds are mere Monſters; as theſe of our Author, the Hot-ſcent-ſmelling Hounds, the Dew-be-dabled Morn, &c. They offend the Ear, and cannot be repeated without uneaſineſs. The Genius of every Tongue is different; and tho the Greek abounds with theſe beautifully extravagant Liberties, neither the ſevere Chaſtity of the Latin, nor our own will allow of them. Vida an excellent Critic is of the ſame Opinion as to the Latin; and as his Words may have ſome Influence, I ſhall give a Tranſlation of a Paſſage or two to this Purpoſe.

" Multa tamen Graiæ fert Indulgentia Linguæ,
" Quæ noſtros minus addeceant graviora ſequentes.

Unnumber'd Liberties may Greece become,
Which ſuit not the ſeverer Tongue of Rome.

But he is fuller ſoon after; as here,

" Verba etiam tum Bina juvat conjungere in unum,
" Mollitèr inter ſe vinclo ſociata jugali:
" Verùm Plura nefas vulgo congeſta coire,

" Ipſaque

" Ipſaque Quadrifidis ſubniti corpora membris.
" Itala nec paſſim fert Monſtra Tricorpora Tellus.
" Horreſco diros ſonitus, ac levia fundo
" Invitus per-terricrepas per Carmina Voces.

Two Single Words in pleaſing Union join,
If gently wedded in a Social Line:
But more nor Rule, nor Decency afford,
Verſe hobbles on a long-four-jointed Word.
The Decompounds of Three, are very rare,
And Monſters foreign to our Latian Air.
Harſh jarring Sounds ſtrike grating on the Senſe,
And give my Reaſon, as my Ear, Offence.
Unwillingly I force in gliding Song
A grumbling Thrice-re-gurgling Word along.

OUR Language, as it now ſtands, bears a near Affinity to the Latin, and moſt of its Rules are become our own. Writers ſhould therefore conſider firſt what our Tongue will bear, know its Original, how it has been improv'd, and from whence it has borrowed, before they begin with ſuch bold Innovations. A ſingle Authority is neither a Rule, nor a Guide. Caſaubon de Linguâ Anglicâ vetere will ſhow them the Excellence, Force, Power and Compaſs of our Mother Engliſh; after which they will hardly ſeek out for harſh and unnatural Imitations of a Dead Language.

BUT enough of this. It is not my Province to ſpeak of SHAKESPEAR's Plays; only I cannot but obſerve that ſome of them do not anſwer their Titles. In Julius Cæſar for Inſtance, there is little of the Man, or his memorable Exploits, unleſs what is ſaid after his Death; and if any one were to form an Idea of him from what SHAKESPEAR makes him ſpeak, he would would make but an indifferent Figure for the Foremoſt of Mankind. Hear only his Character from Tully, an Enemy—— " Fuit in " illo Ingenium, Ratio, Memoria, Litteræ, Cura, Cogitatio, " Diligentia : res bello geſſerat, quamvis Reipublicæ calamitoſas, " attamen Magnas. Multos annos regnare eſt meditatus: mag- " no labore, magnis periculis, quod cogitaverat, effecerat : mune- " ribus, monumentis, congiariis, epulis multitudinem impe- " ritam deliniebat: ſuos præmiis, adverſarios Clementiæ Specie " devinxerat. Quid multa ? attulerat jam liberæ Civitati, par- " tim metu, partim patienti, Conſuetudinem Serviendi."

A Cæſar thus qualified, and ſhown in all theſe Lights, were fit for the Pen of an Addiſon, or a Congreve; and then we might cry out with Anthony,

Here was a Cæſar— when comes ſuch Another ?

I THOUGHT to ſay no more to his Plays; but the Character my Lord Shaftesbury gives them is too conſiderable to be omitted. He was himſelf a fine Writer, and an excellent Judge of Nature, ſo that his Teſtimony will bear a juſt ſway with the Reader. His words are, " Our old Dramatic Poet, SHAKESPEAR, " may witneſs for our good Ear and manly Reliſh. Notwithſtand- " ing his natural Rudeneſs, his unpoliſh'd Style, his antiquated " Phraſe and Wit, his want of Method and Coherence, and his De- " ficiency in almoſt all the Graces and Ornaments of this kind of " Writing; yet by the Juſtneſs of his MORAL, the Aptneſs of " many of his Deſcriptions, and the plain and natural Turn of " ſeveral of his Characters, he pleaſes his Audience, and often " gains their Ear, without a ſingle Bribe from Luxury or Vice. " That Piece of his, (the Tragedy of HAMLET) which ap- " pears to have moſt affected Engliſh Hearts, and has perhaps " been oftneſt acted of any which have come upon our Stage, " is almoſt one continu'd Moral : a Series of deep Reflections, " drawn from one Mouth, upon the Subject of one ſingle Acci- " dent and Calamity, naturally fitted to move Horror and Com-

" paſſion. It may be properly ſaid of this Play, if I miſtake " not, that it has only ONE Character or principal Part. It " contains no Adoration or Flattery of the Sex: no ranting at " the Gods: no bluſtering Heroiſm: nor any thing of that cu- " rious mixture of the Fierce and Tender, which makes the " hinge of modern Tragedy, and nicely varies it between the " Points of Love, and Honour."

I HAVE already run this Preface to a great length, otherwiſe I ſhould have taken notice of ſome beautiful Paſſages in the Poems; but a Reader of Taſte cannot miſs them.

FOR my own part, as this Reviſal of his Works obliged me to look over SHAKESPEAR's Plays, I can't but think the Pains I have taken in correcting, well recompenſed by the Pleaſure I have receiv'd in reading: And if after this, I ſhould attempt any thing Dramatic in his Vein and Spirit, be it owing to the Flame borrow'd from his own Altar!

Hampſtead
Nov. 24.
1724.

VENUS

AN ESSAY ON THE ART, RISE, and PROGRESS of the STAGE,

In Greece, Rome, and England.

BEFORE I come to the Art and Riſe of the Stage, I ſhall ſay a Word or two of Shakeſpear, the Engliſh Ornament of it, and of his Works. I confeſs that I have nothing to add to his Life, written by Mr. Rowe, who has perfectly exhauſted that Subject; yet he has, by declining a general and full Criticiſm, left me room enough to diſcourſe both of the Author's Genius, and his Writings. As I ſhall give many more Examples of his Beauties, than thoſe few which his Editor has but ſlightly glanc'd on in his Life; ſo ſhall I lay down ſuch Rules of Art, as that the Reader may be able to diſtinguiſh his Errors from his Perfections, now too much, and too unjuſtly confounded by the fooliſh Bigotry of his blind and partial Adorers. For there are a ſort of Men, who deal by him, as ſome of our modern Dedicators do by their Patrons; denying them all Defects, and at the ſame time dawbing them with ſhining Qualities, which they do not only not poſſeſs, but have no need of, to compleat their Character: By ſo childiſh a Conduct not only bringing into queſtion thoſe which are really their Due, but making their Patrons as ridiculous, as themſelves. For an unjuſt or ill-grounded Praiſe of the Living, is no better than fulſom Flattery; and of the Dead, only a mere aſſuming Compliment to ourſelves, as Men of greater Genius, Diſcernment, and Penetration than others, in the Diſcovery of Beauties, which they are not able to find out. This is the very Fault which thoſe Moderniſts lay to the Charge of the Admirers of the Antients: For while they would perſuade us, that theſe have given Beauties to Homer, Virgil, Horace, &c. which thoſe Poets never thought of, or deſign'd, they have advanc'd ſo unreaſonable a Bigotry to our Poet, that if a Man, by Art and Reaſon, but queſtion the greateſt and moſt abſurd of his Faults, with the Romans of old, on the ſame occaſion------Clamant periiſſe Pudorem.

'Tis my Opinion, that if Shakeſpear had had thoſe Advantages of Learning, which the perfect Knowledge of the Antients would have given him; ſo great a Genius as his would have made him a very dangerous Rival in Fame to the greateſt Poets of Antiquity: So far am I from ſeeing, how this Knowledge could either have curb'd, confin'd, or ſpoil'd the natural Excellence of his Writings. For tho I muſt always think our Author a Miracle, for the Age he liv'd in, yet I am oblig'd, in Juſtice to Reaſon and Art, to confeſs that he does not come up to the Antients, in all the Beauties of the Drama; yet it is no ſmall Honour to him, that he has ſurpaſs'd them in the Topicks or Common Places.

But to put his Errors and his Excellencies on the ſame Bottom, is to injure the latter, and give the Enemies of our Poet an

an Advantage againſt him, of doing the ſame; that is, of rejecting his Beauties, as all of a piece with his Faults. This unaccountable Bigotry of the Town to the very Errors of Shakeſpear was the Occaſion of Mr. Rymer's Criticiſms, and drove him as far into the contrary Extreme. I am far from approving his Manner of treating our Poet: Tho Mr. Dryden owns that all, or moſt of the Faults he has found, are juſt; yet he adds this odd Reflection: "And yet, ſays he, who minds the Cri-"tick, and who admires Shakeſpear leſs?" That was as much as to ſay, "Mr. Rymer has indeed made good his Charge, and yet "the Town admir'd his Errors ſtill:" Which I take to be a greater Proof of the Folly and abandon'd Taſte of the Town, than of any Imperfections in the Critick. And this, in my Opinion, expos'd the Ignorance of the Age he liv'd in; to which, Mr. Rowe very juſtly aſcribes moſt of his Faults. It muſt be own'd, that Mr. Rymer carry'd the Matter too far, ſince no Man, who has the leaſt Reliſh of Poetry, can queſtion his Genius: For, in ſpite of his known and viſible Errors, when I read Shakeſpear, even in ſome of his moſt irregular Plays, I am ſurpriz'd into a Pleaſure ſo great, that my Judgment is no longer free to ſee the Faults, tho they are ever ſo groſs and evident. There is ſuch a Witchery in him, that all the Rules of Art, which he does not obſerve, tho built on an equally ſolid and infallible Reaſon, as intirely vaniſh away in the Tranſports of thoſe that he does obſerve, as if I had never known any thing of the Matter. The Pleaſure, I confeſs, is as peculiar as ſtrong; for it comes from the admirable Draughts of the Manners, viſible in the Diſtinction of his Characters, and his ſurprizing Reflections and Topicks, which are often extremely heighten'd by the Expreſſion and Harmony of Numbers: For in theſe no Man ever excell'd him, and very few ever came up to his Merit. Nor is his nice touching the Paſſion of Joy, the leaſt Source of this Satisfaction; for he frequently moves this, in ſome of the moſt indifferent of his Plays, ſo ſtrongly, that it is impoſſible to quell the Emotion. There is likewiſe ever a Sprightlineſs in his Dialogue, and often a Genteelneſs, eſpe-

cially in his Much ado about Nothing, which is very ſurprizing for that Age, and what the Learned BEN could not attain by all his Induſtry: And I confeſs, if we make ſome ſmall Allowance for a few Words and Expreſſions, I queſtion whether any one has ſince excell'd him in that Particular.

Tho all theſe Beauties were owing chiefly to a natural Strength of Genius in him, yet I can never give up his Acquaintance with the Antients, ſo intirely as Mr. Rowe has done; becauſe I think there are many Arguments to prove, that he knew at leaſt ſome of the Latin Poets, particularly Ovid; two of his Epiſtles being tranſlated by him: His Motto to Venus and Adonis is another Proof. But that he had read Plautus himſelf, is plain from his Comedy of Errors, which is taken viſibly from the Menœchmi of that Poet; as will be evident, when we come to conſider that Play. The Characters he has in his Plays drawn of the Romans, is a Proof, that he was acquainted with their Hiſtorians; and Ben himſelf, in his commendatory Verſes before the firſt Folio Edition of Shakeſpear's Works, allows him to have a little Latin, and leſs Greek; that is, he would not allow him to be as perfect a Critick in the Latin, as he himſelf was; but yet that he was capable of reading at leaſt the Latin Poets; as is, I think, plainly prov'd. For I can ſee no manner of Weight in that Conjecture, which ſuppoſes that he never read the Antients, becauſe he has not any where imitated them; ſo fertile a Genius as his, having no need to borrow Images from others, which had ſuch Plenty of his own. Beſides, we find by Experience, that ſome of our modern Authors, nay, thoſe who have made great Figures in the Univerſity for their Wit and Learning, have ſo little follow'd the Antients in their Performances, that by them a Man could never gueſs that they had read a Word of them; and yet they would take it amiſs, not to be allow'd to be very well read both in the Latin, and Greek Poets. If they do this in their Writings out of Pride, or want of Capacity; may we not as juſtly ſuppoſe, that Shakeſpear did it out of an Abundance of his own natural Stock? I contend not here to prove, that he was a perfect Maſter of either the Latin, or Greek

Authors;

Authors; but all that I aim at, is to ſhew, that as he was capable of reading ſome of the Romans, ſo he had actually read Ovid, and Plautus, without ſpoiling or confining his Fancy, or Genius.

" Whether his Ignorance of the Antients were a Diſadvan-
" tage to him or no, may admit of a Diſpute." I am ſurpriz'd at the Aſſertion; unleſs Mr. Rowe means, That all things may be argu'd upon; and that the Problems of Euclid, ſo long admitted as indiſputable, may, by a new ſort of Scepticiſm, be call'd in queſtion. The Reaſon he aſſigns for this, is thus: " For tho the Knowledge of them might have made him more
" correct, yet it is not improbable but that the Regularity and
" Deference for them, which would have attended that Correct-
" neſs, might have reſtrain'd ſome of that Fire, Impetuoſity,
" and even beautiful Extravagance, which we admire in Shake-
" ſpear." I muſt own, that I am not capable of comprehending his Proof, or indeed of finding that it is any Proof at all: For if the Knowledge of the Antients would have made him correct, it would have given him the only Perfection he wanted; and that is certainly an Advantage not to be diſputed. But then this " Correctneſs might have reſtrain'd ſome of that Fire,
" Impetuoſity, and even Beautiful Extravagance, &c." We do not find, that Correctneſs in Homer, Virgil, Sophocles, Euripides, &c. reſtrain'd any Fire that was truly celeſtial: And why we ſhould think, that it would have had a worſe Effect on Shakeſpear, I cannot imagine; nor do I underſtand what is meant by Beautiful Extravagance: For if it be ſomething beyond Nature, it is ſo far from being admir'd by Men of Senſe, that it is contemn'd and laugh'd at. For what there is in any Poem, which is out of Nature, and contrary to Veriſimilitude and Probability, can never be beautiful, but abominable. The Buſineſs of Poetry is to copy Nature truly, and obſerve Probability and Veriſimilitude juſtly; and the Rules of Art are to ſhew us what Nature is, and how to diſtinguiſh its Lineaments from the unruly and prepoſterous Sallies and Flights of an irregular, and uninſtructed Fancy. So that as I think it is plain, that Shakeſpear was not

not intirely ignorant of the Antients; ſo, I believe, it is as evident, that he would have been much more, not leſs, perfect than he is, had his Ignorance of them been much leſs, than it really was. A judicious Reader of our Author will eaſily diſcover thoſe Defects, that his Beauties would make him wiſh had been corrected by a Knowledge of the whole Art of the Drama. For it is evident, that by the Force of his own Judgment, or the Strength of his Imagination, he has follow'd the Rules of Art in all thoſe Particulars in which he pleaſes. I know, that the Rules of Art have been ſufficiently clamour'd againſt by an ignorant and thoughtleſs ſort of Men of our Age; but it was becauſe they knew nothing of them, and never conſider'd, that without ſome Standard of Excellence, there could be no Juſtice done to Merit, to which Poetaſters, and Poets muſt elſe have an equal Claim, which is the higheſt Degree of Barbariſm. Nay, without an Appeal to theſe very Rules, Shakeſpear himſelf is not to be diſtinguiſh'd from the moſt worthleſs Pretenders, who have often met with an undeſerv'd Applauſe, and challeng'd the Title of great Poets from their Succeſs.

Nature, Nature is the great Cry againſt the Rules. We muſt be judg'd by Nature, ſay they; not at all conſidering, that Nature is an equivocal Word, whoſe Senſe is too various and extenſive ever to be able to appeal to; ſince it leaves it to the Fancy and Capacity of every one, to decide what is according to Nature, and what not. Beſides, there may be a great many things natural, which Dramatick-Poetry has nothing to do with. To do the Needs of Life, is as natural as any Action of it; but to bring ſuch a thing into a Piece of Hiſtory-Painting, or Dramatick-Poetry, would be monſtrous and abſurd, tho natural; for there may be many things natural in their proper Places, which are not ſo in others. It is therefore neceſſary, there ſhould be Rules to let the Poet know not only what is natural, but when it is proper to be introduc'd, and when not. The Droll-Pieces of the Dutch are all very natural; yet I dare believe there is no Man ſo very ignorant of the Decorum of Hiſtory-Painting, as to think, that in the Tent of Darius, by Monſieur Le Brun, or the Jephtha's

Sacrifice,

Sacrifice, it wou'd be natural or proper to introduce one of thoſe Droll-Pieces, either of drinking, dancing, ſnick-or-ſnee, or the like. For tho both the Painters have propos'd Nature for their Copy, and have drawn her perfectly well; yet Grief and Laughter are ſo very incompatible, that to join theſe two Copies of Nature together, wou'd be monſtrous, and ſhocking to any judicious Eye. And yet this Abſurdity is what is done ſo commonly among us in our Tragi-Comedies; this is what our Shakeſpear himſelf has frequently been guilty of, not only in thoſe Mixtures which he has given us of that kind, but in many other Particulars, for want of a thorow Knowledge of the Art of the Stage.

After this, I hope no Man will aſſert, that Criticiſm is an ill-natur'd Work, unleſs he will declare for all the Extravagancies of Ignorance, and that Abſurdities ought to be indulg'd for the ſake of a great Name. For if Truth and Reaſon may be of any Account, to point out the real Errors of any Man, muſt be thought a good-natur'd Office; ſince it is to bring Men to a juſt Senſe of things, and a true Knowledge and Taſte of Nature, and Art. Did ever any Man think it an ill-natur'd thing to tell a Friend of his Miſtakes in Conduct? Much leſs muſt it be thought ſo in the Diſcoveries of the Errors of writing; becauſe by the Correction many are inform'd how to direct themſelves juſtly, and not to follow the Ignes Fatuos of a diſtemper'd Fancy, without ever conſulting Judgment; which muſt make its Deciſion by the Rules of Art. I confeſs, that there is a Decency in doing this, which to forſake, is to become liable to this Cenſure, as Mr. Rymer has done; who was not content to point out the Faults of Shakeſpear, but would deny him all manner of Excellence: The like has been done by the Remarker on Cato. This indeed ſavours of Ill-nature and Envy: But ſure no body will accuſe Ariſtotle of the ſame Crime, for thoſe he diſcovers in Sophocles, Euripides, and ſome other Greek Poets, whoſe Beauties and Perfections he recommends to our Imitation. Notwithſtanding that he forms from theſe his Poeticks, and tho they were of ſuch great Authority and Eſteem; yet this Father of all Criticks makes no

Difficulty

Difficulty of ſhowing in what they tranſgreſs'd the Rules, which he founds on Reaſon, and Nature: Which the Athenians rightly look'd on, as a piece of Juſtice, not Ill-nature. For if, as he allow'd them their Excellencies, he had not pointed out their Defects; he had left room for a Bigotry to a Name, to have made their Vices paſs for Virtues, to the prejudice of the juſt Improvement of ſo noble an Art. Thus I ſhall all along recommend the Beauties of Shakeſpear; but muſt beg leave to lay down the Rules of the Drama, leſt we fall into an erroneous Imitation of his Faults. The Anſwer of Dionyſius to Pompey the Great, will be juſt, to all who ſhall be of his mind, -------- Pompey complain'd, that he had found fault with Plato, to which he replies in this manner, -------- " Your Veneration for Plato is juſt, but your Ac-
" cuſation of me unjuſt. When a Man writes to ſhow what is " good or bad in a Subject, he ought, with the utmoſt Exactneſs,
" to point out its Virtues, and Vices, becauſe that is a certain way
" to come at the Truth, which is the moſt valuable of all things.
" Had I wrote againſt Plato, with a Deſign to decry his Works,
" I ought to have been accounted as envious as Zoilus; but, on
" the contrary, my Deſign was to praiſe him: Yet if in doing
" this, I have diſcover'd and improv'd any of his Errors or De-
" fects, I have done nothing that merits a Complaint, &c.'

This, I hope, is ſufficient to clear juſt Criticiſm from the Imputation of Ill-nature: And I am of opinion, that ſince Poetry has always been eſteem'd, in all civiliz'd and polite Countries, a noble Art; there is a Neceſſity to free it from that Barbariſm it has hitherto lain under in this Nation, eſpecially in its moſt valuable and uſeful Part, the Drama; to lay down thoſe Rules which may form our Judgment, and bring it to a Perfection, that it has not yet known among us.

There is indeed a very formidable Party among us, who are ſuch Libertines in all manner of Poetry, eſpecially in the Drama, that they think all regular Principles of Art an Impoſition not to be born; yet, while they refuſe in Poetry juſt Rules, as a Teſt of their Performance, they will allow no Man a Maſter in any other, that follows not the Rules of his Art, be it

Painting,

Painting, Statuary, Architecture, &c. tho the Precepts of Poetry are not leſs founded on Nature, and Reaſon, and muſt indeed be the only Diſtinction betwixt an Artiſt, and a Pretender. This falſe Notion has open'd a Door to all the abominable Scriblers, who have ſo often won a Reputation from the Ignorance of the Town (to the Scandal of the Nation) nay, who have paſs'd for Authors of the firſt Rank; tho their Writings, as Ben Johnſon, in his Diſcoveries, has it, A Man would not wrap up any wholeſome Drug in, &c. For if Poetry have no certain Standard of Excellence, no fix'd Rules to go by; then it muſt of conſequence be an arbitrary Licence of writing what extravagant thing ſoever one pleaſes; and that Meſs of Madneſs, that is moſt plauſibly cook'd up by the Players, and goes beſt down with the Mob, that is, the Ignorant of all Degrees and Stations, is the beſt Poetry: A Notion ſo very whimſical, that it was never entertain'd in any City in the Univerſe, but London (and perhaps Madrid,) for it levels all Men, makes Settle and Durfey as good Poets as Otway, and Addiſon: Which is to deter Men of Learning and Genius from writing, ſince they are liable to Cenſures, almoſt as ſcandalous as thoſe the Poets of Madrid are ſubject to; as we have the Account from The Lady's Travels into Spain: Which, becauſe it bears ſome Proportion to the State of our Stage, I ſhall tranſcribe.

------'The fineſt Comedy in the World, (ſays ſhe) I mean 'thoſe acted in the Cities, very often receive their Fate from 'the weak Fancy of ſome ignorant Wretch or other. But there 'is one particularly, a Shoe-maker, who decides the Matter, and 'who has gain'd ſo abſolute an Authority ſo to do, that when 'the Poets have made their Plays, they go to him, and as it 'were, ſue to him for his Approbation: They read to him their 'Plays; and the Shoe-maker, with grave Looks thereupon, utters 'abundance of Nonſence; which nevertheleſs the poor Poet is 'forc'd to put up. After all, if he happens to be at the firſt 'acting of it, every body has his Eyes upon the Behaviour and 'Action of this pitiful Fellow: The young People, of what 'Quality ſoever, imitate him; if he yawns, they yawn; if he 'laughs, ſo do they. In a word, ſometimes he grows angry or

'weary, and then takes a little Whiſtle, and falls a whiſtling; 'at the ſame time you hear an hundred Whiſtles, which make 'ſo ſhrill a noiſe that 'tis enough to confound the Heads of all the 'Spectators. By this time, our poor Poet is quite ruin'd; all his 'Study and Pains having been at the Mercy of a Blockhead, accord-'ing as he was in good or bad Humour.'

This perhaps may ſeem a harder Fate, than what our Poets here are liable to: But whilſt Ignorance is to be Judge of Art, and the Direction of the Theatre is in ſuch Hands, it is certain, the Caſe is much the ſame. For the Fate of a Play depends on theſe Gentlemen's Opinion of it, who have nothing to guide them but Fancy, which leads them ten times into an Error, for once that it hits right; and then it is by wondrous chance. Nay, it is no new Defect of the Stage; for when the Poets, that is, the Maſters of the Art, left off ordering the Stage, and directing the Actors, as the admirable Critick Monſieur Dacier obſerves in his Notes on the laſt Chapter of Ariſtotle's Art of Poetry, the Players being left to themſelves, immediately ſpoil'd the acting, and degenerated from that Wiſdom and Simplicity, by which they had been maintain'd.

Theſe are the Gentlemen particularly that bring their Arguments againſt regular Plays, which had been as falſly urg'd before the Reformation of the French Stage; as is plain from the Academy's Animadverſions on the Cid of Corneille, p. 22: Let their Words juſtify my Aſſertion ------ Que ſi au contraire, quelques Pieces regulaires donnent peu de Satisfaction; il ne faut pas croire, que ce ſoit la Faute des Regles, mais bien celles des Auteurs; dont le Sterile Genie na pu fournir a l'Art, une que fuſt aſſez Riche: i. e. 'If, on 'the contrary, ſome regular Pieces give but little Satisfaction, 'you ought not to believe, that this is the Fault of the Rules, 'but of the Authors; whoſe barren Genius cannot ſupply Art 'with what is rich and noble.' The Rules of Art indeed are not for any Man, to whom Nature has not given a Genius; without which it is impoſſible to obſerve, or indeed perfectly to underſtand them.

The

The ingenious Michael Cervantes, the celebrated Author of Don Quixot, tells us, that the ſame Objection was made to him in Defence of irregular Plays, that had uſurp'd the Spaniſh Stage under the Direction of the Actors. Which I ſhall tranſcribe, becauſe it ſhows that Stage to be like ours; that the Opinion of a Man of his Wit and Judgment, may have a juſt Influence on thoſe, who look more on Authority, than Reaſon.

In the 50th Chapter of his firſt Part, the Canon and the Curate are diſcourſing to this purpoſe, ------- 'If theſe Plays, that 'are now in vogue, as well thoſe that are mere Fiction, as 'thoſe that are taken out of Hiſtory, are all or the greateſt part 'of them, plain viſible Fopperies, and things without Head or 'Tail; yet the Multitude delights in, and thinks them good, 'tho they are ſo far from it. And if the Poets who write, and 'the Players who act, ſay they muſt be ſuch, becauſe the Mul-'titude will have them ſo, and no otherwiſe; and that thoſe 'which are regular, and carry on the Plot according to Art, are 'only of uſe to a few wiſe Men, who underſtand them, and all 'the reſt make nothing of them; and that it is better for them 'to get their Bread by Many, than to be look'd on by a Few ------ 'If this be ſo, I ſay, the ſame will be the Fate of my Book; 'after I have crack'd my Brain to obſerve the Rules I have ſpo-'ken of, I ſhall loſe my Labour. And tho I have ſometimes 'endeavour'd to perſuade the Actors, that they are in the wrong 'in following that Opinion; and that they would draw more 'People, and gain more Reputation by acting Plays, that are 'according to the Rules of Art, than by thoſe Mad ones: They 'are ſo fond of their own Opinion, that there is no bearing 'them out of it. I remember I once ſaid to one of theſe obſti-'nate Men ------ Tell me, don't you remember that a few Years 'ago, there were three Plays acted in Spain, written by a fa-'mous Poet of this Kingdom, which were ſo excellent, that 'they aſtoniſh'd, pleas'd, and ſurpriz'd all that ſaw them, as 'well ignorant, as wiſe; the Multitude, as better Sort? And 'thoſe three alone yielded the Actors more Money than thirty

'of the beſt that have been made ſince. Doubtleſs, Sir, ſaid 'the Poet I ſpeak of, you mean the Iſabella, Phillis, and Alexan- 'der? I mean the ſame, quoth I, and ſee whether thoſe did not 'obſerve the Rules of Art; and did not pleaſe all People? So 'that the Fault is not in the Multitude, who require Follies; 'but in thoſe, who know not how to ſhow them any thing elſe. 'Nor was the Play of Ingratitude Reveng'd a Foppery; nor was 'there any in that of Numantia; nor the Amorous Merchant; 'much leſs in the Favourable She-Enemy; nor in ſome others, 'that have been written by judicious Poets, to their great Re- 'putation and Renown, and to the Advantage of thoſe that acted 'them. Much more I urg'd; which, in my Opinion, confounded, 'but did not convince him, ſo as to make him recede from his 'erroneous Conceit.'

'You have hit on a thing, Maſter Canon, (anſwer'd the Curate) 'that has ſtir'd up the old Grudge I bear the Plays now in uſe; 'which is not inferior to my Averſion to Books of Knight-Erran- 'try. For whereas the Drama, according to Tully, ought to be 'a Mirror of human Life, a Pattern of Manners, and a lively 'Image of Truth; thoſe, that are acted now-a-days, are Mirrors 'of Extravagancies; Patterns of Follies; and lively Images of 'Lewdneſs. For what greater Extravagancies can there be, than 'to bring on a Child in its Swadling-bands, in the firſt Scene of 'the firſt Act; and in the ſecond to have him walk in, as grown 'up to a ſtout Man? And what greater Folly than to repreſent 'to us a fighting old Fellow, and a cowardly young Man; an 'haranguing Footman; a Page taking on him to be a Privy- 'Counſellor; a King a mere Clown; a Princeſs an errant Cook- '-Wench? What ſhall I ſay to the Time and Place, that theſe 'Accidents may or might have happen'd in? For I have ſeen a 'Play, whoſe firſt Act began in Europe, the ſecond in Aſia, and 'the third in Africa; and had it held out four Acts, the fourth 'would have ended in America; and ſo it would have been acted 'in all the four Quarters of the World.

'And if Imitation be the principal Part of the Drama, how 'is it poſſible that any tolerable Underſtanding ſhould be pleas'd

'to

'to ſee, that when they are acting a Paſſage, that happen'd in 'the Days of King Pepin, or Charlemagne; the ſame Man, who 'acts the Hero of the Play, ſhould be made the Emperor Hera- 'clius, who carry'd the Croſs to Jeruſalem, in order to recover the 'Holy Sepulchre, as Godfrey of Bulloin did, when there are many 'Years diſtance betwixt thoſe Actions? Or when the Play is 'grounded on Fiction, to apply it to Truths out of Hiſtory; or 'patch it up with Accidents, that happen'd to ſeveral Perſons, 'and at ſeveral Times; and this not with any Contrivance to 'make it appear probable, but with manifeſt Errors altogether in-'excuſable? And the worſt of it is, there are ſome Blockheads 'who call this Perfection, and all the reſt Notion and Pe- 'dantry, &c.'

And after ſome Reflections on the monſtrous Miracles forg'd for their religious Plays, he proceeds ------

------'All this is an Affront to Truth, a Diſcredit to Hiſtory, 'and a Shame to the Spaniſh Wits. Becauſe Foreigners, who are 'very ſtrict in obſerving the Laws of the Drama, look on us as 'ignorant and barbarous, when they ſee the Abſurdity, and 'enormous Folly of theſe we write. And that is not excus'd by 'ſaying, that the chief Deſign of well-govern'd Commonwealths, 'in permitting Plays to be acted, is to divert the Commonalty 'with ſome lawful Recreation, to diſperſe the ill Humours 'that Idleneſs often breeds; and that ſince this is done by any 'Play good, or bad, there is no Occaſion to preſcribe Laws, or 'confine thoſe that write, or thoſe that act them, to make 'them ſuch as they ought to be: For, as I ſaid, any of them 'ſerve to compaſs the End deſign'd by them. To this I would 'anſwer, that the End would be infinitely better attain'd by 'good Plays, than theſe that are not ſo. For a Man, after ſee-'ing a good and well-contriv'd Play, would go away pleas'd with 'the Comedy, inſtructed by the ſerious Part, ſurpriz'd at the 'Plot, improv'd by the Language, warn'd by the Frauds, in-'form'd by the Examples, diſguſted at Vice, and in love with 'Virtue: For a good Play muſt work all theſe Effects upon him 'that ſees it, tho he be never ſo rude, and unthinking. And

'it

'it is abſolutely impoſſible, but that a Play, that has all theſe 'Qualifications, muſt pleaſe, divert, ſatisfy, and content be-'yond that which wants them; as for the moſt part thoſe do 'that are now acted. And the Poets that write them are not in 'the Fault; for ſome of them are very ſenſible of the Errors 'they commit, and know what they ought to do. But Plays 'being become venal, they ſay, and are in the right on't, that 'the Actors would give nothing for them, if they were not of 'that Stamp. And therefore the Poet endeavours to ſuit himſelf 'to what the Actor, who is to pay for it, requires, &c.'

This is ſo near an Image of our Dramatick State, in this Nation, that I hope the Obſervation of ſo receiv'd a Wit as Michael Cervantes, will have ſome weight with our Men of Figure, who are, or would be thought Men of Senſe and Politeneſs. Yet, if they ſhould think Authority inſufficient, becauſe againſt their wretched Goûſt; I ſhall ſhew, that Reaſon is as much againſt them: and then ſhew the Source of our ill Taſte, and the Corruption of our Stage, by giving a View of the Original and Riſe of the Drama, in Greece, in Rome, and in this Nation.

To come therefore to Reaſon, againſt thoſe blind Enemies to Regularity, and without which there can be no Harmony, we muſt prove that Poetry is an Art.

As the Injuſtice of Men was the Cauſe of Laws, ſo the Decay of Arts, and the Faults committed in them (as Dacier obſerves) oblig'd Men firſt to make Rules, and afterwards to revive them. The Laws of Legiſlators place all their Reaſon in their Will, or the preſent Occurrences; but the Rules of Poetry advance nothing but what is accompany'd with Reaſon, and drawn from the common Sentiments of Mankind: ſo that Men themſelves become the Rule and Meaſure of what theſe preſcribe.

All Arts are certain Rules or Means of arriving at, or doing ſomething that is good and beneficial to Mankind; now Poetry aiming at the Inſtruction of Men by Pleaſure, it propoſes a certain End for the Good of Men: it muſt therefore have certain Rules or Means of obtaining that End; and is therefore an Art.

Poetry

Poetry is not only an Art, but its Rules are known, and it is impoſſible to ſucceed without them. The certain Conſequence of this is, that the Rules, and what pleaſes, are never contrary to each other, and that you can never obtain the latter, without the former. Secondly, That Poeſy being an Art, can never be prejudicial to Mankind: for when any Verſes are ſo, they deviate from the Rules, and are no longer Poetry, which was invented, and improv'd for their advantage only. Poeſy owes its Riſe to Religion: Hymns in the praiſe of, and Thankſgiving to Heaven for Bleſſings receiv'd, was the original Poetry; for Men, naturally inclin'd to Imitation, employ'd their native Tendence to Muſick and Song, to the Praiſes of their Gods: And had Man continu'd in his primitive Simplicity, Hymns and Divine Songs, as among the Hebrews, had been all our Poetry. But in the Heathen Syſtem, Men ſoon deviated from this Purity; admitting firſt the Praiſe of Men, and then Satire, or Raillery on one another at their drunken Meetings, at Harveſt-home, or the like. Thus Poetry being corrupted ſoon, ſcarce retain'd any Footſteps of Religion, whence it firſt ſprung.

The ſucceeding Poets, being the Divines and Philoſophers of thoſe times, obſerving the invincible Bent of the People to theſe Feaſts and Shows, and that it would be a fruitleſs Labour and Endeavour to reſtore their primitive Simplicity; took an admirable and wiſe care to turn this Inclination of theirs to Pleaſure, to their advantage; by making that Pleaſure convey Inſtruction to them, in ſo agreeable a manner.

To paſs over the various Changes of Poetry, we muſt remember that we owe to Homer the Epick Poem; and in that, the Origin of Tragedy, more excellent for the Regulation of the Paſſions, than the Epopee, which only reach'd to Cuſtoms. The Invention of Comedy ſome attribute to the Corruption and degenerate Luxury of the People, ſome to the Margites of Homer; but both theſe Opinions are eaſily reconcil'd: for the Opprobria Ruſtica, as Horace calls them, the lewd Railleries of the Country-People at their drunken rural Feſtivals, gave the Ground-work, which the Margites of Homer reduc'd into a more decent Form and Order, and gave the Idea, whence after-Poets deriv'd the antient Comedy.

and

But hence it is plain, as I have ſaid, that Poeſy is an Art, becauſe we ſee from its Riſe it has propos'd a certain End, and muſt neceſſarily have certain Means to be conducted to that End. For where there is a Right and a Wrong, there muſt be ſome Art or Rules to avoid the one, and arrive at the other. But then perhaps it may ſtill be queſtion'd, whether theſe Rules are fix'd and known, and whether they are thoſe preſcrib'd by Ariſtotle? That they are known, will be plain from what follows; and that they are thoſe of Ariſtotle, at leaſt in the Drama (which I ſhall chiefly inſiſt on in this Eſſay) will be as plain, if we conſider, 1*ſt*, Who gives the Rules: 2*dly*, When he gave them: and 3*dly*, The Manner in which he gave them. Ariſtotle's Character for Knowledge in all the politer Arts, will be of ſome Force; for his Genius and Capacity are ſufficiently known to the Learned. 2*dly*, The Age he liv'd in, was in almoſt the firſt Regulation, if not Riſe of Tragedy; learning the Art with Sophocles, and Euripides, who brought it to Perfection, and ſeeing the effect it had on the moſt polite and knowing People of the World. 3*dly*, The Manner in which they are deliver'd, is ſo evident and conformable to Nature, as that I cannot but be ſenſible of their truth. To confirm this, I conſider the effects they have had in all Nations where they were known; for all the Beauties of Homer, Sophocles, Euripides, and the other Greek Poets of any note, are perfectly conformable to them: and theſe being five hundred years after reviv'd, in the time of Auguſtus, at Rome, we find the Beauties of Virgil, and the Latins owing to them. Nay, two thouſand Years after they were written, we obſerve that by them the beſt Tragedies of France and Spain, nay, I may ſay of England too, are thoſe in which they are perfectly follow'd: in which all that pleaſes, is according to the Rules; and all that diſguſts, or is inſipid, wild, or extravagant, contrary to them: for good Senſe and right Reaſon are of all Countries. Human Laws indeed which regard the State, alter according to the Circumſtances and Intereſts of the Men for which they were made: but theſe are always always the ſame, and ever ſupport their Vigour, becauſe they are the Law of Nature, which always acts uniformly, revives them continually, and gives them a perpetual Exiſtence.

From hence it follows, that theſe Rules are known, and that they are thoſe deliver'd by Ariſtotle, and that they are never oppoſite to what pleaſes; ſince they were made to ſhew us the Path we ought to tread, that we may arrive at what pleaſes. Were the Rules and what pleaſes oppoſite, we could never pleaſe but by chance; which is abſurd. As there are certain Rules, therefore, that teach us to pleaſe, ſo we ought to make it our buſineſs to ſtudy and learn them, both for the reading and judging part: for theſe Rules are drawn from the Pleaſant and the Profitable, and lead us to their Source. The Pleaſant and the Profitable are what naturally pleaſe; and that, in all Arts, is what we always conſult. In this moſt perfect and ſure Model of Imitation, we find perfect UNITY, and ORDER; for it is it ſelf the Effect of Order, and the Rule to conduct us to it: while there is only one way to find Order, but many to fall into Confuſion.

'There would be nothing bad (ſays Dacier very juſtly) in the 'World, if all that pleas'd were good; for there's nothing ſo ab-'ſurd, but will have ſome Admirers. You may ſay indeed, 'that it is not true that what is Good pleaſes, becauſe we daily 'ſee Diſputes about the Good and the Pleaſant; that the ſame 'thing pleaſes ſome, and diſpleaſes others; nay, it pleaſes and 'diſpleaſes the very ſame Man at different times. From 'whence then proceeds this difference? It comes either from 'an abſolute Ignorance of the Rule, or that the Paſſions alter it. 'Rightly to clear this Truth, I believe, I may lay down this 'Maxim, That all ſenſible Objects are of two ſorts; ſome may be 'judg'd of by the Senſe independently of Reaſon (I call Senſe that Im-'preſſion which the animal Spirits make on the Soul) and others can't 'be judg'd of, but by Reaſon exercis'd in Science. Things ſimply a-'greeable or diſagreeable, are of the firſt Sort; all the World 'may judge alike of theſe. For example, the moſt Ignorant in 'Muſick perceives very well when a Player on the Lute ſtrikes

‘ one String for another; becauſe he judges by his Senſe, and ‘ his Senſe is the Rule. On ſuch occaſions we may, therefore, ‘ very well ſay, That all that pleaſes, is good; becauſe that ‘ which is good does pleaſe, or that which is ill never fails to ‘ diſpleaſe: for neither Paſſion, nor Ignorance dull the Senſes, ‘ but ſharpen them. It is not thus in things that ſpring from ‘ Reaſon: Paſſion and Ignorance work very ſtrongly in them, ‘ and choke the Judgment; and for this cauſe we ordinarily ‘ judge ſo ill, and differently in thoſe things of which Reaſon is ‘ the Rule, and the Cauſe. Why what is bad often pleaſes, and ‘ that which is good does not always do ſo, is not the Fault of ‘ the Object, but of the Judge: But what is good will infallibly ‘ pleaſe thoſe who can judge, and that's ſufficient. By this we ‘ may ſee, that a Play, that ſhall bring thoſe things which are ‘ to be judg'd by Reaſon within the Rules, and alſo that which ‘ is to be judg'd by Senſe, ſhall never fail to pleaſe both the ‘ Learned, and the Ignorant. Now this Conformity of Suffra- ‘ ges is the moſt ſure, or, according to Ariſtotle, the only mark ‘ of the Good and Pleaſant. But theſe Suffrages are not to be ob- ‘ tain'd but by the obſerving of the Rules, and conſequently ‘ theſe Rules are the only cauſe of the Good and the Pleaſant; ‘ whether they are follow'd methodicaly and with deſign, or ‘ only by hazard or chance. For 'tis certain, there are many ‘ Perſons who are intirely ignorant of theſe Rules, and yet do ‘ not miſs of Succeſs in many things. But this is far from de- ‘ ſtroying the Rules, ſince it only ſerves to ſhew their Beauty, ‘ and proves how far they are conformable to Nature, ſince thoſe ‘ often follow them, who know nothing of them.

The latter end of this is perfectly prov'd by our Shakeſpear, who in all that pleaſes is exactly conformable to the Rules, tho 'tis evident by his Defects, that he knew nothing of them. I hope this is enough to ſatisfy any reaſonable Man, not only that as Poeſy is an Art, it propoſes certain Means to arrive at a certain End; but that theſe Rules are abſolutely neceſſary for the judging, and writing juſtly. If any one deſire to ſee this Argument handled more at large, it will be worth his while to read Monſieur ſieur Dacier's admirable Preface to his Remarks on the Poeticks of Ariſtotle; from which, what I have ſaid on this Head is but an Abridgment.

Since therefore the Neceſſity of Rules is thus evident, I think I cannot be more juſt to the Art, and to thoſe Poets who may hereafter ariſe worthy the Name, than to lay down, in as few Words as poſſible, the Rules of the Drama: to which I ſhall ſubjoin ſome relating to the Epigram, under which laſt Head moſt of the Miſcellanies of Shakeſpear will fall; that by this means the ingenious Reader may diſtinguiſh betwixt his Errors, and Beauties, and ſo fix his Praiſe on a juſter ground, than the blind Caprice of every ignorant Fancy. And if by this he will not appear ſo praiſe-worthy in many things, as he may now be thought, yet his Praiſe will be greater and more valuable when it is founded on Reaſon and Truth, and the Judgment of Men of Senſe and Underſtanding.

Before I come to the particular Rules of the Stage, as Ariſtotle has laid them down, I ſhall ſet down what an Engliſh Nobleman has given us on this Subject in Verſe; becauſe there are ſome Things relating eſpecially to the Diction, which Ariſtotle has not meddled with; and others, which tho conformable to him, yet being in Verſe, ſink eaſier into the Memory, and will lead the Reader better to the Apprehenſion and retaining the particular Rules in Proſe, and perhaps give him a better reliſh of them. For when by Pleaſure we are firſt let into the View of Truth, it has ſuch Charms, as to engage our Purſuit after it, thro ways not altogether ſo ſmooth and delightful. The Verſes I take out of the Eſſay on Poetry written by the late Duke of Buckingham, at a Time when the Town run away with as ſtrange Monſters as have pleas'd ſince; tho thoſe were dreſs'd a little more gayly, and went by there Chime a little more glibly off the Tongue.

On then, my Muſe, advent'rouſly engage,
To give Inſtructions that concern the Stage.

The Unities of Action, Time, and Place,
Which if obſerv'd give Plays ſo great a Grace,
Are, tho but little practis'd, too well known,
To be taught here, where we pretend alone
From nicer Faults to purge the preſent Age,
Leſs obvious Errors of the Engliſh Stage.
Firſt then Soliloquies had need be few,
Extremely ſhort, and ſpoke in Paſſion too.
Our Lovers talking to themſelves, for want
Of others, make the Pit their Confident.
Nor is the matter mended yet, if thus
They truſt a Friend, only to tell it us:
Th' Occaſion ſhould as naturally fall,
As when * Bellario confeſſes all. [* In Philaſter]
Figures of Speech, which Poets think ſo fine,
Art's needleſs Varniſh to make Nature ſhine,
Are all but Paint upon a beauteous Face,
And in Deſcriptions only can have place.
But to make Rage declaim, and Grief diſcourſe,
From Lovers in Deſpair fine things to force,
Muſt needs ſucceed: for who can chuſe but pity
A dying Hero miſerably witty?
But O! the Dialogue, where Jeſt and Mock
Are held up like a Reſt at ſhuttle-cock!
Or elſe like Bells eternally they chime,
They ſigh in Simile, and die in Rhime.
What Things are theſe, who would be Poets thought?
By Nature not inſpir'd, nor Learning taught?
Some Wit they have, and therefore may deſerve
A better Courſe, than this by which they ſtarve.
But to write Plays! Why 'tis a bold Pretence
To Judgment, Breeding, Wit, and Eloquence.
Nay more, for they muſt look within, to find
Theſe ſecret Turns of Nature in the Mind.
Without this Part, in vain would be the Whole,
And but a Body all, without a Soul.

All

All this together yet is but a Part
Of * Dialogue, that great and powerful Art
Now almoſt loſt, which the old Grecians knew,
From which the Romans fainter Copies drew,
Scarce comprehended ſince, but by a few:
Plato and Lucian are the beſt Remains
Of all the Wonders which this Art contains:
Yet to our ſelves we muſt ſome juſtice do,
Shakeſpear, and Fletcher are our Wonders now.
Conſider them, and read them o'er and o'er,
Go ſee them play'd, then read them as before:
For tho in many things they often fail,
Over our Paſſions ſtill they ſo prevail,
That our own Grief by theirs is rock'd aſleep,
The Dull are forc'd to feel, the Wiſe to weep.
Their Beauties imitate, avoid their Faults.
† Firſt on a Plot employ thy careful Thoughts;
Turn it with Time a thouſand ſeveral ways,
This oft alone has given Succeſs to Plays.
Reject that vulgar Error, which appears
So fair, of making perfect Characters:
There's no ſuch thing in Nature, and you'll draw
A faultleſs Monſter, which the World ne'er ſaw.
‡ Some Faults muſt be, that his Misfortunes drew,
But ſuch as may deſerve Compaſſion too.
Beſides the main Deſign compos'd with Art,
¶ Each moving Scene muſt be a Plot apart.

---

* His Grace here refers to Comedy, as the Inſtances of Plato and Lucian ſhow; for the Art of Tragick Dialogue is to expreſs the Sentiments naturally in proper Words: elſe his Grace had miſtaken; for certainly in the Tragick Dialogue, Sophocles and Euripides, nay, even Æſchylus, muſt have been preferr'd. Nay, it will not hold of Tragedy; for Fletcher's Dialogue is intolerable in that, and could not be otherwiſe, becauſe he ſeldom draws either his Manners or Sentiments from Nature.

† Exactly conformable to Ariſtotle.

‡ Involuntary Faults, that is, the Effects of violent Paſſions, not ſuch as are voluntary and ſcandalous; as will appear in our Rules.

¶ His Grace means not, that the Scenes ſhould not be a Part of the Plot; but that the Poet ſhould, beſides the main Deſign, conſider well the working up of every particular Scene which is juſt.

Contrive

Contrive each little Turn, mark every Place,
As Painters firſt chalk out the future Face.
Yet be not fondly your own Slave for this,
But change hereafter what appears amiſs.
Think not ſo much where ſhining Thoughts to place,
As what a Man ſhould ſay in ſuch a caſe.
Neither in Comedy will this ſuffice,
The Player too muſt be before your Eyes:
And tho 'tis Drudgery to ſtoop ſo low,
To him you muſt your utmoſt Meaning ſhow.
Expoſe no ſingle Fop, but lay the Load
More equally, and ſpread the Folly broad.
The other way is vulgar; oft we ſee
A Fool derided by as bad as he.
Hawks fly at nobler Game; in this low way
A very Owl may prove a Bird of Prey.
Ill Poets ſo will one poor Fop devour:
But to collect, like Bees, from every Flower,
Ingredients to compoſe that precious Juice,
Which ſerves the World for Pleaſure, and for Uſe;
In ſpite of Faction this would Favour get:
But Falſtaff ſeems inimitable yet, &c.

In what I have to ſay of the Rules, I ſhall confine my ſelf to them, without going into the Controverſy, yet I ſhall ſometimes add the Reaſon and Foundation, that being the Extremity my Bounds will admit.

To begin therefore with the Definition of Tragedy (for the Rules of that I ſhall firſt inſiſt on, much of Comedy depending on them) it is this——'Tragedy is the Imitation of one grave and 'entire Action of a juſt Length, and which, without the Aſſi-'ſtance of Narration, by the means of Terror and Compaſſion, 'perfectly refines in us all ſorts of Paſſions, and whatever is like 'them.'

This is explain'd by a Piece of Hiſtory-Painting (which is very near a-kin to Tragedy) for the Painter takes one grave and entire tire Action, and mingles nothing else with it. For example, Raphael painted the Battel of Constantine, but he brought not into that one Action of Constantine, all that he had done in his Life; for that had been monstrous, and contrary to Nature and Art. Thus a Tragedy is the Imitation of some one grave Action, but not all the Actions of a Man's Life.

From hence it is plain, that there is no place in Tragedy for any thing but grave and serious Actions. Comedy imitates the witty, and the pleasant, and the ridiculous Actions of Mankind. Next, this Action must be entire; that is, it must have a Beginning, Middle, and End, and be of a just Length: not so long as that of the Epopee, nor so short as a single Fable. The excluding Narration, and the confining its Aim to Terror, and Compassion, distinguishes it from the Epick Poem, which may be perfect without them, and employs Admiration.

By the refining the Passions, I mean not their Extirpation, which is impossible; but the reducing them to just Bounds and Moderation, which renders them as useful as they are necessary: for by representing to us the Miseries of those who have yielded too much to them, it teaches us to have a stricter guard over them; and by beholding the great Misfortunes of others, it lessens those that we either do, or may feel our selves.

This Imitation mention'd in the Definition being made by the Actors, or Persons representing, the Scenes are to be regarded by the Poet: For the Decoration is not only for Pomp and Show, as it is generally design'd, but to express the Nature of the things represented, and the Place where; since there is no Action that does not suppose a Place, and Actors dress'd in one Habit or other proper to that Place.

As Tragedy is the Imitation of an Action, not Inclinations or Habits; so there is no Action, that does not proceed from the Manners and the Sentiments: therefore the Manners and Sentiments are essential Parts of Tragedy. For nothing but the Manners and Sentiments can distinguish and characterize an Action: the Manners form, and the Sentiments explain it, exposing its Causes

Cauſes and Motives; and thoſe being the Producers of Actions, are the Cauſes of Good and Evil to Mankind.

The Imitation of an Action is properly call'd the Fable; that is, the Compoſition of all the Parts and Incidents of this Action is the Fable. The Manners diſtinguiſh the Qualities of the Perſons repreſented; that is, characterize Men, denote their Inclinations either good or bad. The Manners of Achilles were Choler, and Temerity; thoſe of Æneas ſweet Temper, and Piety. The Sentiments are the Diſcourſes or Speeches of the Dramatick Perſons, diſcovering their Thoughts, and making known their Actions: by which they ſpeak agreeably to their Manners or Characters, that the Auditors may know their Manners before they ſee their Actions.

There is no Subject of a Tragedy where theſe following five Parts are not found, viz. The Fable, the Manners, the Sentiments, the Diction, and the Decoration. Ariſtotle adds the Muſick, becauſe the Greek Poets directed that too. But the chief and moſt conſiderable is the Fable, or the Compoſition of the Incidents, which form the Subject of the Tragedy; both in the Opinion of Ariſtotle, and of all thoſe who know any thing of the Reaſon of Things. For Tragedy is in imitation of an Action, not of Men; whence it follows, that Action conſtitutes the Tragedy, and that there can be no Tragedy where there is no Action. The good or evil Fortune of Men depends on their Actions, and the End that every Man propoſes to himſelf, is an Action, not a Quality: what Qualities Men purſue, are only as Mediums to ſome Action. Thus the general End that Mankind propoſe, is to live happily; but to live happily, is an Action, not a Quality. Man being therefore happy or miſerable by his Actions, not Manners or Qualities; Tragedy propoſes not to imitate the Manners, but adds them for the Production of Actions. So that the Fable (which is the Imitation of the Action) being the End of Tragedy, it muſt be of the moſt importance, and chiefly to be conſider'd; for ſo the End in all things is. Another Proof, which Ariſtotle brings for the Preference of the Fable to all the other Parts of the Play, is, That the beſt and moſt taking Tragedies (of his Time)

Time) are thoſe which have their Peripeties, Revolutions, or Changes of Fortune, and Diſcoveries, as in the Oedipus of Sophocles: But theſe Diſcoveries are inſeparable from the Subject, and conſiſt intirely in Action. The Fable therefore furniſhing the moſt efficacious Means of arriving at the End, muſt neceſſarily in Reaſon be the moſt important part of Tragedy.

Ariſtotle indeed, and his beſt Commentators, are very large on this Head, to prove that all the fine Diction, the Manners well expreſs'd, and the Sentiments natural and juſt, are of no manner of value, if the Fable be faulty, or the Action maim'd. This is, I ſuppoſe, ſufficient to let the Reader ſee, that this is not only the firſt Thing that comes under our Conſideration, as ſome would without any ground in Reaſon inſinuate; but the moſt noble and moſt important thing that he is to ſtudy, if he wou'd ever hope to deſerve the Name of a Tragic Poet: to which indeed we have very few of thoſe, who have made a conſiderable noiſe in the World for a little time, who have any Pretence. Beſides, it is much eaſier to ſucceed in the Stile, or what the leading Fools call fine Diction (which is deriv'd, by the way, from Grammar and Rhetorick, not Poetry) than the forming of the Subject, or Fable juſtly, and with Art. Nature enabled Shakeſpear to ſucceed in the Manners and Diction often to perfection; but he could never by his Force of Genius, or Nature, vanquiſh the barbarous Mode of the Times, and come to any Excellence in the Fable; except in the Merry Wives of Windſor, and the Tempeſt.

Next to the Fable, the Manners are the moſt conſiderable (and in theſe Shakeſpear has generally excell'd, as will be ſeen when we come to his Plays;) for as Tragedy is the Imitation of an Action, ſo there are no Actions without the Manners, ſince the Manners are the Cauſe of Actions. By the Manners we diſcover the Inclinations of the Speaker, what Part, Side, or Courſe he will take on any important and difficult Emergence; and know how he will behave himſelf, before we ſee his Actions. Thus we know from the Manners of Achilles, what Anſwer he will give the Ambaſſadors of Agamemnon, by what the Poet has told us of his Hero. And when Mercury brings Jove's Orders to Æneas, we know that the Piety of the Hero will prevail over his Love. And the Character of Oedipus makes us expect his extravagant Paſſions, and the Exceſſes he will commit by his Obſtinacy. Theſe Diſcourſes therefore that do not do this, are without the Manners. The Character of Coriolanus, in Shakeſpear, prepares us to expect the Reſolution he will take to diſoblige the People; for Pride naturally contemns Inferiors, and over-values itſelf. The ſame may be ſaid of Tybalt, in Romeo and Juliet; and moſt of the Characters of this Poet.

The Sentiments are the next in degree of Excellence to the Fable, and the Manners, and juſtly demand the third place in our Care and Study; for thoſe are for the Manners, as the Manners for the Subject or Fable. The Action can't be juſtly imitated without the Manners, nor the Manners expreſs'd without the Sentiments. In theſe we muſt regard Truth and Veriſimilitude; as when the Poet makes a Madman ſpeak exactly as a Madman does, or as 'tis probable he would do. This Shakeſpear has admirably perform'd in the Madneſs of King Lear; where the Cauſe of his Frenzy is ever uppermoſt, and mingles with all he ſays or does. But Beaumont and Fletcher have perform'd abominably in their Mad-houſe, in the Pilgrim, and our modern Alterer of that Play, has increas'd the Abſurdities.

The Diction, or Language, obtains but the fourth Place of the eſſential Parts of a Tragedy, and is of the leaſt importance of any of them, in the Opinion of Ariſtotle, the beſt of Criticks, and Reaſon: tho our modern Poetaſters, or vile Pretenders to this noble Poem, have plac'd their chief Excellence in it. But the Reaſon of it is, becauſe this was what they thought they could in ſome meaſure obtain, while the reſt were intirely above their Reach and Capacity. For the Subject may be well conducted, the Manners well mark'd, and the Sentiments fine, tho ill expreſs'd. It is indeed, as Dryden obſerves, the firſt Beauty that ſtrikes the Ear, and enhances the Value of the Piece, but comes not into Competition with any of the other three.

The

The Decoration I have already mention'd, and how far that is to be regarded by the Poet.

Having thus seen the several Parts of Tragedy, and their Excellence in regard of each other, I come to give the Directions necessary for the making each of 'em perfect.

The first and chief of them I have prov'd to be the Fable or Subject; or, as we generally call it in English, the Plot. I shall begin with that, in the forming of which, the Poet's principal Care ought to be employ'd.

Every Action that is fit for a Tragick Imitation, or that can be made use of in Tragedy, ought not only to be intire, but of a just length; that is, it must have a Beginning, Middle, and End. This distinguishes it from momentaneous Actions, or those that happen in an instant, without Preparation, or Sequel; which wanting Extension, may come into the Incidents, not the Fable. The Cause or Design of undertaking an Action, is the Beginning; and the Effects of that Cause, and the Difficulties we find in the Execution, are the Middle; the unravelling and dissolving these Difficulties, is the End.

The Anger of Achilles is the Action propos'd by Homer in the two first Verses of the Ilias. The Quarrel betwixt him and Agamemnon is the Beginning; the Evils this Quarrel produc'd, are the Middle; and the Death of Hector, giving perfect Satisfaction to Achilles, leads to the unravelling the Action, and disposing Achilles to relent at the Tears and Prayers of Priam, and restores him to his first Tranquillity, which is the End. The Departure of Ulysses from Troy, begins the Action of the Odysses; the Hardships and Obstacles of his Voyage make the Middle; and his Arrival and Establishment in Ithaca the End.

The true Beginning to an Action, is that which does not necessarily require or suppose any thing before it, as part of that Action. Thus the Beginning of an Epic, or Dramatic Poem may be the Sequel of another Action: for the Quarrel of Agamemnon and Achilles, which is the Beginning of the Action of the Ilias, is Agamemnon's Injustice, which provok'd the Anger of Achilles, when all was quiet before in the Camp; so we may consider this Affair the Sequel of, but not depending neceſſarily on any thing precedent, tho it come not to paſs without it, and requires ſomething elſe to follow it, depending on it, preſent or remote. The Retreat of Achilles to the Ships, the Trojans routing the Greeks on that Retreat, were the preſent Effects of his Anger; the remote, the Death of Patroclus, Reconcilement of Agamemnon and Achilles, and the Death of Hector, which ſatisfies and reſtores Tranquillity by the Tears of Priam. The End is juſt oppoſite to the Beginning; for it neceſſarily ſuppoſes ſomething to have gone before, but nothing to follow it: as the End of the Anger of Achilles naturally ſuppoſes a Beginning of it, but nothing to come after. The Tranquillity of Achilles is reſtor'd by the Death of Hector, for then the Action is compleat; and to add any thing farther, would be to begin a new Action.

To inſtance in a Dramatic as well as Epic Action, tho they perfectly agree in this, let us conſider the Action of the Antigone of Sophocles. The Beginning of this Action has no neceſſary Dependence on the Death of her Brother Polynices; for tho as to that, the Decree of Creon might have been or not have been, yet it follow'd that Death, nor could it have happen'd without it. The Action begins with the impious and partial Decree of Creon againſt the burying the Body of Polynices; the Middle is the Effects produc'd by that Decree in Antigone's Puniſhment, the Death of Æmon and Euridice; which produce the End, in breaking the Obſtinacy of Creon, and making him penitent, and miſerable.

The Middle is that which neceſſarily ſuppoſes ſomething gone before, and ſomething to follow: Thus all the Evils that the Anger of Achilles produc'd, neceſſarily ſuppoſe that Anger as their Cauſe and Beginning, from whence they did proceed. So theſe Evils, that is, the Middle producing the Satisfaction and Revenge of Achilles in the Death of Hector, furniſh'd the End, in his relenting at the Miſery of Priam. This is a perfect Example of an Epic and Dramatic Action, and ſhews, that the Poet cannot begin or end it where he pleaſes, if he would manage his Subject with true Oeconomy, and Beauty. For there muſt be the

Cauſe

Cauſe or Beginning; the Effect of that Cauſe, which is naturally the Middle; and the unravelling or finiſhing it, which is the End produc'd by the Middle, as that by the Beginning.

I have been the larger upon this Head, becauſe ſo much Beauty depends upon it, and it is a Doctrine not ſo common, but that it needs a thorow Explication.

The Subject of the Drama ſhould be of a juſt Extent, neither too narrow, nor too large; but that it may be ſeen, view'd, and conſider'd at once, without confounding the Mind, which if too little and narrow, it will do, or make it wander, or diſtract it; as it will do, if it be too large and extenſive. That is, the Piece ought to take up juſt ſo much time, as is neceſſary or probable for the introducing the Incidents, with their juſt Preparation. For to make a good Tragedy, that is, a juſt Imitation, the Action imitated ought not in reality to be longer than the Repreſentation; for by that means it has the more Likeneſs, and by conſequence is the more perfect: but as there are Actions of ten or twelve Hours, and their Repreſentations cannot poſſibly be ſo long; then muſt we bring in ſome of the Incidents in the Intervals of the Acts, the better to deceive the Audience, who cannot be impos'd on with ſuch tedious and long Actions, as we have generally on the Stage; as whole Lives, and many Actions of the ſame Man, where the Probable is loſt as well as the Neceſſary: and in this our Shakeſpear is every where faulty, thro the ignorant Mode of the Age in which he liv'd; and which I inſtance not as a Reproach to his Memory, but only to warn the Reader, or young Poet to avoid the ſame Error.

Having ſhewn what an Action is, we now come more cloſely to the Subject; and firſt to the Unity of the Action, which can never be broken without deſtroying the Poem. This Unity is not preſerv'd by the Repreſentation of ſeveral Actions of one Man; as of Julius Cæſar, or Anthony and Brutus. Thus in the Cæſar of Shakeſpear, there is not only the Action of Cæſar's Death, where the Play ought to have ended, but many other ſubſequent Actions of Anthony and Brutus, even to the Overthrow and Death of Brutus and Caſſius; and the Poet might as well have have carry'd it down to the ſettling of the Empire in Auguſtus, or indeed to the Fall of the Roman Empire in Auguſtulus. For there was no more reaſon for the ending it where he does, than at the Eſtabliſhment of Auguſtus. Natural Reaſon indeed ſhow'd to Shakeſpear the Abſurdity of making the Repreſentation longer than the Time, and the Place more extenſive than the Place of acting; as is plain from his Chorus's in his Hiſtorical Plays, in which he apologizes for the Abſurdity: as in the beginning of the fourth Act of the Winter's Tale, among other things, Time, the Chorus ſays;

---------Your Patience this allowing,
I turn my Glaſs, and give my Scene ſuch growing,
As you had ſlept between, &c.

And the ſecond Act of Henry V. begins another Chorus, excuſing the Variation of the Place:

Thus with imagin'd Wings our firſt Scene flies
In Motion of no leſs Celerity
Than that of Thought. Suppoſe that you have ſeen
The well-appointed King at Dover-Peer, &c.

And ſo goes on to deſcribe all his Paſſage, &c. introducing a Narration to ſupply the Gap of the Action, or rather, of the Actions.

But the Chorus of the fifth Act is plainer on this Head:

Vouchſafe to thoſe, that have not read the Story,
That I may prompt them; and of ſuch as have,
I humbly pray them to admit th'Excuſe
Of TIME, of Numbers, and true Courſe of things,
Which cannot in their huge, and proper Life
Be here preſented, &c.

In

In Pericles Prince of Tyre, the Chorus's excuſe the rambling from place to place, and the like: But 'tis pity that his Diſcovery of the Abſurdity did not bring him to avoid it, rather than make an Apology for it. But this is not the only Fault of the way of writing in his time, which he did not correct; for in the Chorus of the third Act of Henry V. he concludes in this manner:

And ſo our Scene muſt to the Battel fly;
Where, O! for pity, we ſhall much diſgrace
With four or five moſt vile and ragged Foils
(Right ill-diſpos'd, in Brawl ridiculous)
The Name of Agincourt: Yet ſit and ſee,
Minding true things by what their Mock'ries be.

Hence it is plain, that Shakeſpear's good Senſe perceiv'd the ridiculous Abſurdity of our fighting Senſes, our Drum and Trumpeting Scenes; but he choſe to go on in the way that he found beaten to his hands, becauſe he unhappily knew no better road.

But to return from this ſhort Digreſſion.------This Unity of Action does not exclude the Epiſodes or various Under-Actions, which are dependent on, and contribute to the chief, and which without it are nothing. Thus a Painter repreſents in a Battel-Piece the Actions of every Particular that makes up the Army; but all theſe compoſe that main Action of the Battel. But this does not excuſe the faulty Epiſodes or Under-plots (as they call them) of our Engliſh Plays, which are diſtinct Actions, and contribute nothing at all to the principal. Of this kind is Creon and Euridice, and Adraſtus in our lamentable Oedipus. But indeed we have few Plays free from this Abſurdity; of which the Orphan is one, where the Action is one, and every Epiſode, Part, or Under-Action, carries on and contributes to the main Action or Subject.

Thus the different Actions of different Men are not more diſtinctly different Actions, than thoſe of one Man at different times. And we might as well make a Unity of all the Actions in the World, as of thoſe of one Man. No Action of the ſame Man can be brought into a Tragedy, but that which neceſſarily or probably relates relates to that Action, which the Tragedy imitates. The Wound of Ulyſſes, which he receiv'd in Parnaſſus, was neceſſary to his Diſcovery; but his Madneſs to avoid the War, was not: and therefore Homer takes notice of the former, but not of the latter. For as in all other Imitations, ſo in Tragedy, the thing imitated muſt be but One. This Action, with its Epiſodes or Under-Actions, ought to be ſo link'd together, that to take any part away, or to endeavour to tranſpoſe them, deſtroys the whole: for theſe Epiſodes or Under-Actions ought either neceſſarily or probably to be produc'd by the main Action, as the Death of Patroclus by the Anger of Achilles. For whatever can be put in or left out, without cauſing a ſenſible Change, can never be part of the Action. This is a ſure Rule to diſtinguiſh the true Epiſodes from the falſe: And this Rule will indeed condemn moſt of our Engliſh Tragedies, in ſome of which, the very principal Character may be left out, and the Play never the worſe. But more of that hereafter.

From what has been ſaid of the Actions, main, and Epiſodic, it is plain that the Poet is not oblig'd to relate things juſt as they happen, but as they might, or ought to have happen'd: that is, the Action ought to be general and allegorical, not particular; for particular Actions can have no general Influence. Thus Homer, in the Action of Achilles, intends not the Deſcription of that one individual Man, but to ſhow what Violence and Anger would make all Men of that Character ſay or do: As therefore Achilles is a general and allegorical Perſon, ſo ought all Heroes of Tragedy to be; where they ſhould ſpeak and act neceſſarily or probably, as all Men ſo qualify'd, and in thoſe Circumſtances would do: differing from Hiſtory in this, that the Drama conſults not the Truth of what any particular Perſon did ſay or do, but only the general Nature of ſuch Qualities to produce ſuch Words and Actions. 'Tis true that Tragedy employs true Names, but that is to give a Credibility to the Action; the Perſons ſtill remaining general and allegoric. I would therefore recommend to the Poet the intire Invention of his own Fable; there being very few Actions in Hiſtory, that are capable of being made general and allegoric, which is the Beauty and Eſſential of both both an Epic and Dramatic Action: not but the Poet may take Incidents from Hiſtory and Matter of Fact; but then they muſt have that Probability, and Veriſimilitude that Art requires.

But all theſe Properties of the Action, which we have given, are not ſufficient; for the Action that is to be imitated in Tragedy, muſt alſo be ſuch as excites Terrour and Compaſſion, and not Admiration, which is a Paſſion too weak to have the Effect of Tragedy. Terrour and Pity are rais'd by Surprize, when Events are produc'd out of Cauſes contrary to our Expectation; that is, when the Incidents produce each other, not merely follow after each other: for if it do not neceſſarily follow, 'tis no Incident for Tragedy. The Surprize muſt be the Effect of Deſign, not Chance, of precedent Incidents; allowing ſtill, that there are Accidents that are by Chance, which yet ſeem done by Deſign, as the Fall of the Statue of Mitys on his Murderer, which kill'd him, for that Accident looks like the Work of Providence. Thoſe Fables, where this is obſerv'd, will always appear the fineſt. Thus Oedipus is the beſt Subject for Tragedy that ever was; for all that happen'd to him is the Effect of Fortune: yet every body may ſee, that all the Accidents have their Cauſes, and fall out according to the Deſign of a particular Providence.

As the Actions imitated by Tragedy, ſo are all its Fables Simple, or Implex. The Simple is that, in which there is neither Change of the Condition or State of the principal Perſon or Perſons, which is call'd the Peripetie, or Diſcovery; and the unravelling the Plot is only a ſingle Paſſage of Agitation, or Trouble, or Repoſe and Tranquillity; as in the Medea and Hecuba of Euripides, and the Philoctetes, and Ajax of Sophocles: the ſame is the Fable of the Ilias, and that of the Æneis. The Implex Fable is that, which has a Peripetie, or a Diſcovery, or both; which is the moſt beautiful, and the leaſt common. In the Antigone of Sophocles, there is the Change of the State and Fortune of Creon, and that produc'd by the Effect of his own barbarous Decree and Obſtinacy. But in his Oedipus and Electra, there is both a Peripetie and Diſcovery; the firſt to Miſery, the latter to Revenge, and Happineſs. Oedipus, with his Change of Fortune, diſcovers, that he is the Son of Jocaſta and Laius, and ſo guilty of Inceſt, and Parricide. Electra diſcovers Oreſtes to be her Brother, and changes her Miſeries into Happineſs, in the Revenge of her Father's Death. In the Iphigenia in Tauris, Iphigenia making a Diſcovery that Oreſtes is her Brother, changes both their Fortunes from Deſpair to a happy Eſcape from the barbarous Altars of Taurica. But the Peripetie can neither be neceſſary nor probable (without which Qualities they are good for nothing) if they are not the natural Reſult, or at leaſt the Effect of the previous Actions, or the Subject it ſelf. The Oedipus and Electra of Sophocles are the moſt excellent in this kind, and ought to be thorowly ſtudied by the Poets, who wou'd excel in their Art.

But not to give you Terms without a thorow Explanation; A Peripetie is a Change of one Fortune into another, either from Good to Bad, or from Bad to Good, contrary to our Expectations: and this Change (as I have obſerv'd) ought to happen either neceſſarily, or probably; as in the Oedipus of Sophocles: for he who comes to bring him agreeable News, which ought to deliver him from thoſe Apprehenſions, into which his fear of committing Inceſt with his Mother had thrown him, does quite the contrary, in making it out to him who, and what he is. The Matter lies thus------A Meſſenger from Corinth brings Oedipus word of the Death of Polybus, and invites him to go and take poſſeſſion of that Kingdom: but Oedipus afraid to commit the Inceſt the Oracle had told him of, believing Polybus his Father, declar'd, that he never wou'd go to the Place where his Mother was. The Corinthian told him that he did not know himſelf, diſturbing his Head about nothing; and thinking to do him a ſignal Piece of Service, in delivering him from his Fears, informs him, that Polybus and Merope were not his Father and Mother: which began the Diſcovery, that caſt him into the moſt horrible of all his Misfortunes.

But becauſe Diſcovery is here a Dramatic Term, and ſo ſignifies ſomething more than in its vulgar Acceptation, I muſt inform the Reader, that here it means a Diſcovery, which is made by the principal Characters on remembring either one another, or ſomething thing of Importance to their Change of Fortune, and is thus defin'd by Ariſtotle---- 'The Diſcovery is a Change, which cauſing us to paſs 'from Ignorance to Knowledge, produces either Love or Hatred in 'thoſe whom the Poet has a deſign to make happy, or miſerable:' that is, it ought not to be in vain, by leaving thoſe, who remember one another, in the ſame Sentiments they were in before; it muſt produce either Love, or Hatred in the principal, not inferior Characters. But thoſe Diſcoveries, which are immediately follow'd by the Peripetie, are the moſt beautiful, as that of Oedipus; for the Diſcovery of his being the Son of Jocaſta and Laius, immediately makes him, of happy, the moſt miſerable of Men. The Diſcovery in Electra is not near ſo fine, becauſe their Condition and Fortune is not chang'd till ſome time after: but this, where the Peripetie and Diſcovery join, will always produce Terror or Pity, the End and Aim of Tragedy. What I have to add, of the ſeveral ſorts of Diſcoveries, I ſhall defer till I have treated of the Manners, becauſe thoſe have ſome Intereſt in them.

The next thing that we are to conſider, are the Characters. Thoſe, which are to compoſe a perfect Tragedy, muſt not be either perfectly Virtuous and Innocent (as the Duke of Buckingham has obſerv'd) nor ſcandalouſly wicked. To make a perfectly virtuous and innocent Character unfortunate, excites Horror, not Pity, nor Terror. To puniſh the wicked, gives a ſort of ſatisfaction indeed, but neither Pity nor Terror, the Buſineſs of Tragedy; for what we never think our ſelves capable of committing, we can never pity. But the Character of perfect Tragedy ſhou'd be the Mean betwixt both; but rather Good, than Bad. The Character, that has this Mean, ſhou'd not draw his Misfortunes on him by ſuperlative Wickedneſs, or Crimes notoriouſly ſcandalous, but by involuntary Faults; that is, Frailties proceeding from the Exceſs of Paſſion; involuntary Faults, which have been committed either by Ignorance or Imprudence againſt the natural Temper of the Man, when he was tranſported by a violent Paſſion, which he cou'd not ſuppreſs; or by ſome greater, or external Force, in the Execution of ſuch Orders, which he neither cou'd, nor ought to diſobey. The Fault of Oedipus is of the firſt ſort, tho he be likewiſe guilty of the ſecond;

cond; that of Thyeſtes is of the ſecond only; thoſe of Oreſtes and Alcmæon of the third; that is, in Obedience to the Oracle of the Gods: which clears Sophocles of the Fault laid to his charge by Mr. Rowe. In the Plays of the Antients, of this middle Character, were Oedipus, Thyeſtes, Alcmæon, Meleager, Telephus, &c. I ſhall only give a Draught of the firſt, being confin'd to great Brevity, ſince that Example will make the Precept plain.

Corneille, Mr. Dryden, and Lee have quite miſtaken this Character: they have made him perfectly Good, whereas Sophocles does not praiſe him for any thing but his Courage, his good Fortune, and Judgment; Qualities equally common to the Good and the Bad, and to thoſe, who are made up of Virtues and Vices. His Fault was his Curioſity; his being tranſported to Anger by the Inſolence of a Coach-man for not giving him the way, which made him kill ſome Men two days after the Oracle had forewarn'd him, that he ſhou'd kill his Father. This Action alone ſufficiently denotes his Character; but Sophocles has ſhown him by all his Manners ſo conformable to this, that he appears in every reſpect a Man that is neither Good nor Bad, having a Mixture of Virtue and Vice. His Vices are Pride, Violence, Anger, Temerity, and Imprudence; ſo that it is not for his Parricide, nor his Inceſt, that he is made unhappy: thoſe, as they were the Effects of his Curioſity, and his Raſhneſs, Violence, and Anger, were the Puniſhment of them; and thoſe are the Vices that Sophocles wou'd correct in us by this Example of Oedipus.

From what has been ſaid, it appears, that a Fable, with a ſingle Cataſtrophe, is better than that which has one that is double; and that the Cataſtrophe, that is unhappy, is better than that which is happy; provided the Unhappineſs be the Conſequence of ſome of theſe Faults, or Frailties, which I have mention'd; and not the Effect of groſs and remarkable Crimes: for theſe merit the Correction of the Axe, not the Muſe.

The Fable that is of the next Excellence, is that which has a double Conſtitution, and Cataſtrophe, viz. one happy for the Good, and one unhappy for the Guilty. Tho this is more proper for Comedy; where the greateſt Enemies go off reconcil'd.

Terror

Terror and Compaſſion being the chief End of Tragedy, and that being produc'd only by the Fable, let us conſider what Incidents (which compoſe the Fable) are the moſt productive of theſe two Paſſions.

All Incidents are Events, that happen betwixt ſome body or other; and all Incidents, that are terrible or pitiful, happen betwixt Friends, Relations, or the like; for what happens betwixt Enemies has no Tragical Effect. As when a Brother is going to kill, or kills his Brother; the Father his Son, or the Son his Father; the Mother the Son, or the Son the Mother. And theſe are the proper Incidents that a Poet ſhou'd employ all his Search and Study to find out.

Now all theſe Actions may be divided thus: into thoſe, which the Actor performs with an entire Knowledge of what he does, or is going to do, as Medea when ſhe kill'd her Children; Alcmæon, when he kill'd his Mother, and the like: And into thoſe done, or about to be done, when the Heinouſneſs of the Crime, which they are going to commit, or do commit, is not known to the Actors till after the Deed is done; when they, that did it, come to diſcover the Relation of the Perſons they have deſtroy'd: as Alcmæon in the Aſtydamas, knew not that Eryphile was his Mother, whom he had kill'd, till after her Death; and Telegonus diſcover'd that it was his Father Ulyſſes he had mortally wounded, after the Fact was done. The third ſort of Incident, and the moſt beautiful, is, when a Man or Woman is going to kill a Relation, who is not known to him or her, and is prevented by a Diſcovery of their Friendſhip and Relation. The firſt is the worſt, the laſt the beſt, and the ſecond next to the third in Excellence, becauſe here is nothing flagitious and inhuman, but is the Sin of perfect Ignorance; for then the Diſcovery is very pathetic and moving, as that of Oedipus killing Laius.

In thoſe Incidents of the third kind, to make them perfectly beautiful, like that of Merope and Iphigenia in Euripides, it will be neceſſary, that the Poet take care to let the Audience know the Relation of his Dramatic Perſons, tho the Perſons themſelves muſt not know it till the Diſcovery. For thoſe Stories of Merope

and

and Iphigenia were perfectly known to the Audience, which gave them all along a Concern for the Danger of the Brother and the Son; and rais'd their Joy and Satisfaction, when the Diſcovery came and prevented the Event. 'Tis true, that it is no eaſy matter to meet with ſuch a Story, or indeed to form it without Obſcurity and imperfect Beauty; yet if it be done, it anſwers the Labour and Pains of the Study and Search.

We come now to the Manners, which is the next thing to the Fable in Excellence and Conſideration. The Manners diſtinguiſh the Characters; and if the Manners be ill expreſs'd, we can never be acquainted with them, and conſequently never be terrify'd by foreſeeing the Dangers they will produce to the Characters, or Dramatic Perſons; nor melt into Pity by feeling their Sufferings. All Dramatic therefore, as well as Epic Perſons, ought to have the Manners; that is, their Diſcourſe ought to diſcover their Inclinations, and what Reſolutions they will certainly purſue. The Manners therefore ſhou'd have four Qualities; they muſt be, (1.) Good; (2.) Like; (3.) Convenient; (4.) Equal. Good is when they are mark'd; that is, when the Diſcourſe of the Perſons makes us clearly and diſtinctly ſee their Inclinations, and what good or evil Reſolutions they are certain to take. Like relates only to known and publick Perſons, whoſe Characters are in Hiſtory, with which the Poetic Characters muſt agree; that is, the Poet muſt not give a Perſon any Quality contrary to any that Hiſtory has given him. Convenient, that is, theſe muſt be agreeable to the Age, Sex, Climate, Rank, and Condition of the Perſon that has them.

Reſpicere Exemplar Vitæ, Morumq; jubebo
Doctum Imitatorem, veraſque hinc ducere voces.

Thus Horace adviſes to ſtudy Mankind, and from the Obſervation of them to draw the Proprieties of Characters or Manners. But a thorow Conſideration of Ethicks, will be a very great help to the Obſervation: for when you have once got the true Knowledge of the various Habits of the Mind in their juſt Order, and the nature of their ſeveral Blendings, Mixtures, and Compoſition; you you will with much greater eaſe make an advantage of your Study of Men, in regard to that, of which we are now diſcourſing.

As to the Likeneſs, you muſt remember, that the evil Qualities, given by Hiſtory to Princes and Great Men, ought to be omitted by the Poet, if they are contrary to the Character of a Prince, &c. but the Vertues oppoſite to thoſe known Vices, ought not to be impos'd.

Equal, that is, Conſtant and Conſiſtent.

Qualis ab incepto proceſſerit, & ſibi conſtet. Hor.

But if any Character be of unequal Manners, as in Nature, ſo in Poetry, which is an Imitation of Nature, the Variety and Inequality of the Manners muſt be equal. The Fearful muſt not be Brave, nor the Brave, Fearful; the Avaritious muſt not be Generous, and the like.

The Manners therefore of the principal Perſons at leaſt ought to be ſo clearly and fully mark'd, as to diſtinguiſh them from all other Men: for Nature has made as great a Diſtinction between every individual Man by the Turn of his Mind, as by the Form of his Countenance. In this Shakeſpear has excell'd all the Poets; for he has not only diſtinguiſh'd his principal Perſons, but there is ſcarce a Meſſenger comes in, but is viſibly different from all the reſt of the Perſons in the Play. So that you need not to mention the Name of the Perſon that ſpeaks, when you read the Play; their Manners will ſufficiently inform you who it is ſpeaks; whereas in our modern Poets, if the Name of the Perſon ſpeaking be not read, you can never by what he ſays, diſtinguiſh one from the other.

But beſides theſe four Qualities of the Manners, there is a fifth eſſential to their Beauty, viz. that they be neceſſary: that is, that no vicious or baſe Quality or Inclination ought to be given to any Poetic Perſon, unleſs it appear to be abſolutely neceſſary and requiſite for the carrying on of the Action.

To make this a little plainer-----There are three ſorts of Qualities compoſe the Character of a Hero. Firſt, Such as are abſolutely

lutely neceſſary for the Fable and Action; and thoſe are moſt to appear, and evidently prevail above the reſt, ſo that the Hero is to be known and diſtinguiſh'd by them. The Second are to imbelliſh the firſt, and the Third are to ſuſtain both: but an Example will explain this. The firſt of theſe in Æneas is the tranſcendent Goodneſs of his Nature: The ſecond, that beautifies this, is his ſolid Piety, and entire Reſignation to the Will of the Gods: The third, that ſuſtains both, is an Heroic Fortitude, which is abſolutely neceſſary to the carrying on of any great Deſign. Thus in Ulyſſes we find Diſſimulation ſet off by Prudence, and ſuſtain'd by Valour: In Achilles, Rage ſet off by a noble Vehemence, and ſuſtain'd by a wonderful Courage. This firſt Quality, as Goodneſs in Æneas, is to appear thro his whole Character; Rage thro Achilles, and Diſſimulation thro Ulyſſes.

Having thus run thro the Manners, as briefly as I cou'd to give the Reader any juſt Idea of their Nature; I ſhall now conclude my Diſcourſe on the ſeveral ſorts of Diſcoveries, becauſe, well manag'd, they add a wonderful Beauty to the Piece; tho it is a Beauty indeed almoſt entirely unknown to our Stage.

The firſt Sort of Diſcovery is, by certain Marks in the Body, either natural, or accidental, as ſome Families have Marks peculiar to them; as the Founders of Thebes and their Iſſue had a Lance naturally in their Bodies. Accidental, as the Wound Ulyſſes had formerly receiv'd in his Thigh by a Boar in Parnaſſus: Or Tokens, ſuch as the Caſket of Ion, which makes the Diſcovery of his Mother Creuſa, whom he was going to kill. Tho this be the leaſt beautiful and artful Diſcovery, yet it may be more or leſs artfully manag'd, as that of Ulyſſes is in the Odyſſes, where the Nurſe waſhing his Feet, diſcovers the Wound, and by that Ulyſſes; but when he is oblig'd to ſhew it to the Shepherds, to confirm them that he was Ulyſſes, it is leſs artificial.

The ſecond Sort of Diſcovery, and that likewiſe unartful, is when it is made by certain Tokens; as when Oreſtes had come to the knowledge of his Siſter Iphigenia, by a Letter which ſhe gave Pylades to carry to Oreſtes at Argos, and told him the Contents by word of mouth, leſt the Letter ſhou'd be loſt; he diſcovers himſelf

ſelf to her by mentioning her working a fine piece of Tapeſtry, that was in her Apartment, and the Lance of Pelops, &c. for theſe Tokens are no great matter of Invention, ſince it might have made them twenty other ways.

The third ſort of Diſcoveries is what is made by Remembrance; that is, when the Sight or Hearing of any thing makes us remember our Misfortunes, &c. as when Ulyſſes heard Demodocus ſing his Actions at Troy, the memory ſtruck him, and drew Tears from him; which diſcover'd him to Alcinous.

The fourth ſort of Diſcoveries are made by Reaſoning. Thus Iphigenia argues in the Cœphores of Æſchylus; Hither is a Man come like me; No body is like me but Oreſtes, it muſt therefore be Oreſtes. That of Polyides is beautiful and pathetic; for in the Iphigenia of that Poet (as we have it in Ariſtotle) Oreſtes kneeling at the Altar, and juſt opening his Boſom to receive the ſacred Knife, cries out, 'Tis not ſufficient that my Siſter has been ſacrific'd to Diana, but I muſt be ſo too.

The fineſt Sort is that which riſes from the Subject, or the Incidents of the Fable; as that of Oedipus from his exceſſive Curioſity; and the Letter of Iphigenia, for it was very natural that ſhe ſhould write to her Brother.

Having thus conſider'd the two main Points of the Theory, I ſhall ſay a word or two of the Practice. As the Duke of Buckingham has obſerv'd, the firſt buſineſs of a Tragic Poet, is to draw a Plan of his Deſign; and having plac'd it in a juſt Light, and in one View, he may beſt judge of its Probability. But then he muſt conſider, that in this Plan muſt firſt be drawn the Fable in general, before he thinks of the Epiſodes that particularize and circumſtantiate it. I'll give you that which is drawn up by Ariſtotle himſelf, becauſe it may have the greater Authority with you----'A young Princeſs is plac'd on the Altar to be ſacrific'd, 'diſappears of a ſudden from the Eyes of the Spectators, and is 'carry'd into another Country, where the Cuſtom is to ſacrifice 'Strangers to the Guardian Goddeſs of that Country: They make 'her Prieſteſs of that Temple. Some years after, the Brother 'of that Princeſs arrives at the ſame Place, in obedience to an 'Oracle;

'Oracle; he is no ſooner arriv'd, but taken, and as he is going 'to be ſacrific'd, the Diſcovery is made that he is Brother to the 'Prieſteſs, which ſaves his Life.'

This is the general and univerſal Fable without Names, and which may yet receive any Names the Poet pleaſes; who, adding the Epiſodes circumſtantiates, and makes it particular; as the adding the Madneſs of Oreſtes, and the like, makes it proper to that Story.

When the Poet comes to write and work up his Scenes, Ariſtotle adviſes, which Otway's Practice confirms, that he ſhou'd put himſelf into the ſame Paſſion he writes, and imitate the Geſtures, and Actions of thoſe whom he makes to ſpeak.

The Poet ought to take care in the unravelling the Plot, in which many miſcarry: the Plot is all the Play from the Beginning to the Diſcovery or Unravelling, which is beſt towards the laſt Scene of the Play; for if the Unravelling be in the fourth Act, the reſt muſt be dull and heavy. But when the Peripetie and Diſcovery come together, and all at the End of the Play, the Audience go away with Pleaſure and Satisfaction.

Having ſaid ſo much of the Fable, Incidents, Manners, &c. I ſhall add a word or two on the Sentiments; in which we muſt follow the Advice of the Duke of Buckingham.

'Nay more, for they muſt look within, to find
'Thoſe ſecret Turns of Nature in the Mind.'

But then the Poet muſt not be content to look into his Mind, to ſee what he himſelf ſhou'd think on ſuch an Occaſion, but he muſt put himſelf into the Paſſion, Quality, and Temper of the Character he is to draw; that is, he muſt aſſume the Manners he gives his Dramatic Perſon, and then ſee what Sentiments or Thoughts ſuch an Occaſion, Paſſion, or the like, will produce. And the Poet muſt change his Perſon, as a different Perſon, and Character ſpeaks: or he will make all ſpeak alike, without any diſtinction of Character. Gaffarel gives you an Account of Campanella, which will illuſtrate this Place. He ſays, 'That going

'to

'to ſee him when in the Inquiſition, he found him making ſe-
'veral odd Faces, which he took to be the Effect of the Pains he
'had endur'd there; but on his asking Gaffarel what ſort of
'Man ſuch a Cardinal was, and enquiring into his Features, he
'found that Campanella was framing himſelf by the force of Ima-
'gination to the Likeneſs of the Cardinal, to know what Anſwer
'he ſhou'd have to a Letter he had ſent him.'

Now if the forming our outward Figure cou'd be of ſuch Uſe, as to make us think like another, certainly when the Imagination proceeds by its own Strength and Force to liken the Soul as well as the Body, it muſt have a wonderful Effect: yet this cannot be done but by a great Genius.

I ſhall ſay no more of the Sentiments here, becauſe they are to be learn'd from the Art of Rhetoric more than that of Poetry. For the Sentiments being all that make up the Diſcourſe, they conſiſt in proving, refuting, exciting and expreſſing the Paſſions, as Pity, Anger, Fear, and all the others; to raiſe, or debaſe the Value of any thing. The Reaſons of Poets and Orators are the ſame when they would make things appear worthy of Pity, or terrible, or great, or probable; tho ſome things are render'd ſo by Art, and others by their own Nature.

The Diction or Language is that which next comes under our Conſideration; which, tho made ſo conſiderable a Part by our modern Play-wrights, (who indeed have little elſe to value themſelves upon) was by Ariſtotle thought of the leaſt Importance; tho it is confeſs'd, when the Elocution is proper and elegant, and varies as it ought, it gives a great and very advantageous Beauty to a Play. The Fable, the Manners, and the Sentiments are without doubt the moſt conſiderable; for, as Ariſtotle obſerves, a Tragedy may be perfect without the Aſſiſtance of Elocution: for the Subject may be well manag'd, the Manners well mark'd, and the Sentiments may be juſt and fine, tho ill expreſs'd. An ill Elocution renders the Diſcourſe flat, but that deſtroys not the Beauty of the other Parts. Beſides, a Tragedy may be written in Proſe as well as Verſe; that is, thoſe other three Parts may be as well expreſs'd in Proſe as Verſe; but Verſe is made uſe of, becauſe more harmonious, and by conſequence more agreeable.

But as we err as much in this part of Tragedy, as in the other three, it wou'd be neceſſary to give ſome Rules of Diſtinction on this Head: but that I have not room to do in this place; and Propriety and Elegance of Diction muſt be learn'd from Grammar and Rhetoric. However, I will not paſs this entirely in ſilence, but ſhall lay down two or three Rules which are abſolutely neceſſary to give any true Beauty to a Dramatic Diction.

Some have been betray'd by their Ignorance of Art and Nature to imagine, that becauſe the Stile of Milton's Paradiſe Loſt is admirable in the Epic Poem, it will be ſo in Tragedy; not conſidering that Milton himſelf has vary'd his Stile mightily in his Sampſon Agoniſtes, from that of his Paradiſe. And Mr. Dryden's Criticiſm is very juſt, in his Epiſtle to the Marquiſs of Normandy, (the late Duke of Buckingham) before the Æneis; where quoting from Segrais and Boſſu------That the Stile of an Heroic Poem ought to be more lofty than that of the Drama-------' The Critick is in the right, ſays 'he, for the Reaſon already urg'd. The Work of Tragedy is on 'the Paſſions in Dialogue: both of them abhor ſtrong Metaphors, 'in which the Epopee delights; a Poet cannot ſpeak too plainly 'on the Stage, &c.'

And Boileau, a judicious Critic, as well as Poet, has Words to this effect------' Wou'd you deſerve the Applauſe of the Pub-'lic? In writing, diverſify your Stile inceſſantly: too equal, 'and too uniform a Manner ſhines to no purpoſe, and inclines us 'to ſleep. Rarely are thoſe Authors read, who are born to plague 'us, and who appear always whining in the ſame ingrateful 'Tone. Happy the Man, who can ſo command his Voice, as to 'paſs without any Conſtraint from that which is Grave, to that 'which is Moving; and from that which is Pleaſant, to that which 'is Severe, and Solemn.' Every Paſſion has its proper way of ſpeaking, which a Man of Genius will eaſily derive from the very Nature of the Paſſion he writes. Anger is proud, and utters haughty words, but ſpeaks in words leſs fierce and fiery when it debates:

debates: Grief is more humble, and ſpeaks a Language like it ſelf, dejected, plain, and ſorrowful.

Projicit Ampullas, & ſeſquipedalia Verba,

As Horace juſtly obſerves. From theſe few Obſervations it is evident how far from fine Language ſome of our Poets are, who have had Succeſs even for that alone, in ſpight of all the Abſurdities of the Fable, Manners, and Sentiments; tho in reality they were no more excellent in this, than in thoſe.

Thus have we ſeen that Tragedy is an Imitation of an Action of a juſt Extent, i. e. that has a Beginning, Middle, and End, and which ſhall produce Pity, and Terrour. But this Action not being to be perform'd or repreſented without human Agents in that Action, it neceſſarily brings in an Under-Imitation of thoſe Men in that Action; that is, of their Manners, as they contribute to that Action: and this makes a Neceſſity of imitating the Men that are introduc'd in the Drama.

We muſt not expect many Inſtances of Shakeſpear's Perfection in the Fable, tho perhaps we may find ſome extraordinary Strokes that way likewiſe; but the Beauties of the Manners we ſhall find every where, as I ſhall ſhew in my Examen of his Plays.

It may perhaps be expected, that I ſhould ſay ſomething of Comedy. But I have inſenſibly ſwell'd this Diſcourſe to a greater Bulk than I at firſt deſign'd; ſo that I ſhall only ſay in general, that Comedy participates in many things of the Rules of Tragedy: that is, it is an Imitation both of Action and Manners; but thoſe muſt both have a great deal of the Ridiculum in them, and indeed Humour is the Characteriſtic of this Poem, without which a Comedy looſes its Name; as we have many of late who fall from the Ridiculum into a mere Dialogue, diſtinguiſh'd only by a pert ſort of Chit-Chat, and little Aims at Wit. Ben Johnſon is our beſt Pattern, and has given us this Advantage, that tho the Engliſh Stage has ſcarce yet been acquainted with the the Shadow of Tragedy, yet we have excell'd all the Antients in Comedy.

There is no Man has had more of this Vis Comica than our Shakeſpear in particular Characters; and in the Merry Wives of Windſor, he has given us a Play that wants but little of a perfect Regularity. Comedy in England has met with the Fate of Tragedy in Athens, for that only has yet been cultivated; whereas the polite Athenians took firſt care of Tragedy, and it was late e'er the Magiſtrate took any notice of Comedy, or thought it worthy their Inſpection.

All Arts indeed improve as they find Encouragement; our Stateſmen have never yet thought it worth their while to reſcue the Drama from the Hands of the Ignorant, and the Benefit of private Perſons, under which Load of Obſtacles it can never riſe to any Perfection; and place ſuch Men in the Management of it, as may turn it to the Advantage of the Public. Whether this be any Proof of their good Politics or not, I ſhall not here determine; but I am ſure, that very politic Nations, that is, the Greeks and the Romans, had far other Sentiments.

This naturally leads me to the Riſe of the Sage in Greece, where it was entirely rais'd by Tragedy. For Theſpis firſt made a moving Stage for that Poem, tho it was not then, as it is now, pure and unmix'd: for the ill Subjects that Theſpis choſe, threw him upon a ſort of Tragi-Comedy; which Error Æſchylus corrected, by chuſing only noble Subjects, and an exalted Stile, that being before too burleſque. So that as far as we may gueſs, the Plays of Theſpis were not unlike ſome of thoſe of our Shakeſpear. For it was ſome time before the Stage came to its Magnificence and Purity, even in Greece it ſelf, at leaſt in Comedy: For the People are generally the ſame in all Countries, and obſtinately retain licentious and obſcene things; and it is the Property of Roughneſs and Barbariſm to give place to Politeneſs with a great deal of difficulty. Nay, Sophocles was the firſt that purg'd Tragedy it ſelf entirely, and brought it to its true Majeſty and Gravity. For, as Dacier obſerves, the Changes that Tragedy and Comedy underwent, were brought about by little and little, becauſe becauſe it was impoſſible to diſcover what was proper for them at once; and new Graces were added to them, as the Nature of theſe Poems came better to be underſtood.

'Tis true, that the Idea of Tragedy was taken from the Iliads and Odyſſes of Homer; and of Comedy from his Poem call'd Margites: but that was after theſe Poems had been in uſe in a ruder manner; then indeed Homer inſpir'd the Improvers and Reformers of the Stage with this noble Idea. Tragedy truly had a very advantageous Riſe in Greece, falling immediately under the Inſpection of the Magiſtrate, being founded on Religion: and this carry'd it ſo ſoon to Perfection, to which it wou'd never have arriv'd, had it been in the hands of private Perſons, and mercenary Players, ignorant of its Beauties and Defects, and whoſe Thoughts reach no farther than what they are us'd to; which turning to a tolerable Advantage to their Pockets, they believe there is no greater Perfection. But Athens was too wiſe, too polite a State to let that fade, and remain uſeleſs in the hands of the Ignorant, which, by the care of the wiſe and knowing, might be turn'd to the Public Advantage, and Glory.

Tragedy, as I have ſaid, had the Advantage of being grafted on the Goat-ſong, or Vintage-ſong, in the Honour of Bacchus; which, being a Recitation only, Theſpis firſt made a Stage, and introduc'd one Actor. Æſchylus added a ſecond Actor, and fix'd his Stage, and adorn'd it in a more magnificent manner; but then the ſame Ornaments ſerv'd all Plays. Sophocles added a third Actor, and vary'd the Ornaments, and brought Tragedy to Perfection, and into ſuch Eſteem with the Athenians, that they ſpent more in the Decorations of the Theatre, than in all their Perſian Wars; nay the Mony appropriated to that uſe, was look'd on as ſo ſacred, that Demoſthenes, with Difficulty and a great deal of Art, attempted to alienate ſome of it to the Defence of Greece againſt Philip of Macedon.

The Alterations that were made in this Poem in ſo little a time, were almoſt in every Part of it; in the very Numbers as well as in the Subject, Manners, and Diction: For the firſt Verſe of the earlieſt Tragedies were Tetrameters, or a ſort of Burleſque,

Burleſque, and fit for Countrymens Songs, and not unlike our Doggrel. But on the reforming the Stage, it was turn'd into Trimeter Iambics: For, as Dacier from Ariſtotle obſerves, thoſe Numbers were fitted for Tragedy, which were moſt like our common Diſcourſe, and conſequently it was Trimeter Iambics, for that was moſt us'd in familiar Converſation: and Tragedy, ſays he, being an Imitation, ought to admit nothing but what is eaſy and natural.

But as this ſeems to relate chiefly to the Greek and Latin Diction, ſo it will not be amiſs to give you ſomething like it in the Engliſh, at the Riſe of the Drama here. I ſhall take the Examples of both from Shakeſpear alone, to ſhow this Error mended by himſelf, and brought to ſuch a Perfection, that the higheſt Praiſe is to imitate his Stile.

What they call'd their Tetrameters may be anſwer'd by the Doggrel in the Comedy of Errours, and Love's Labour Loſt.

Bal. Good Meat, Sir, is common, that every Churle affords.
E. Ant. And Welcome more common, for that's nothing but Words.
S. Drom. Either get thee from the Door, or ſit down at the Hatch:
Doſt thou conjure for Wenches, that thou call'ſt for ſuch Store?
When one is one too many, go get thee from the Door.

But leſt this ſhou'd be thought paſſable in the Mouths of the Dromios, and their Maſters, we ſhall ſee, in thoſe of Lords and Princes, in Love's Labour Loſt; firſt Boyet, of the Retinue of the Princeſs of France, and the Princeſs her ſelf.

Princeſs. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boyet, I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board.
Maria one of the Ladies of Honour. Two hot Sheeps, Marry, and therefore not Ships.

Princeſs.

Boyet. No Sheep, ſweet Lamb, unleſs we feed on your Lips.
Princeſs. Good Wits will be jangling, but Genteels agree----
The civil War of Wits were much better us'd
On Navarre, and his Book-men, for here 'tis abus'd.

In ſhort, theſe falſe Numbers and Rhimes are almoſt thro the whole Play; which muſt confirm any one, that this was one of his firſt. But that Verſe, which anſwers both the Latin and the Greek is our Blank Verſe, which generally conſiſts of Iambics, and ſo fit for the Drama, that tho Mr. Dryden had once brought rhiming on the Stage ſo much into faſhion, that he told us plainly in one of his Prefaces, that we ſhou'd ſcarce ſee a Play take in this Age without it; yet as ſoon as The Rehearſal was acted, that violent and unnatural Mode vaniſh'd, and Blank Verſe reſum'd its place. A thouſand beautiful Examples of this Verſe might be taken out of Shakeſpear, there ſcarce being a Play of his which will not furniſh us with many; I ſhall ſatisfy my ſelf here with an Inſtance or two out of the Much Adoe about Nothing.

And bid her ſteal into the pleaſed Bower,
Where Hony-Suckles, ripen'd by the Sun,
Forbid the Sun to enter; like Favourites
Made proud by Princes, that advance their Pride,
Againſt that Power that made it, &c.
The pleaſanteſt Angling is to ſee the Fiſh
Cut with their Golden Oars the Silver Stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous Bait.

Comedy, on the other hand, lay long uncultivated in private Hands, among the Mob or Country Fellows, without any regard of the Government; till at laſt Epicharmus and ſome others taking the Idea from the Margites of Homer, and having purg'd the Country Railleries from their Licentiouſneſs, the Magiſtrates of Athens took it into their Conſideration, that it might be of uſe to the State in the Hands, and under the Management of the Publick. And thus by the Encouragement and Inſpection of the Government, the Drama of both kinds arriv'd to Perfection in not many Years after their Appearance in the World.

But it was not ſo in Rome, it was in the 399th Year of the City, when any thing like a Stage got into Rome; and tho it was introduc'd to appeaſe a great Plague, which cou'd not be averted by any other Propitiation, yet they being originally perform'd by Strangers, the Romans had little regard to them. For on this Occaſion they ſent for Players out of Etruria, which in their Language they call Hiſter, from whence the Romans call'd their Actors Hiſtriones. Nor did theſe make uſe of any Verſe, but danc'd to the Tunes of their Pipes, with Meaſures not indecent, after the Thuſcan manner. The young Sparks began to imitate them by rallying one another in undigeſted Verſes. With their Voices their Motions agreed; ſo that the Matter was receiv'd, and by often Repetition came into a Mode. But the Players did not, as in the Feſcennine Verſes, rally one another with extempore Verſes; but repreſenting Paſtorals, call'd Satires with Vocal Muſic, ſet to the Inſtrumental, and a regular Action, perform'd their Parts. But Livius Andronicus, a Greek by Nation, was the firſt (ſome Years after this) who ventur'd to mingle a Fable with theſe Songs, acting himſelf in theſe Performances, as then all the Poets did. This Livy tells us, and the ſame we find in Valerius Maximus, Lib. 2. Cap 4. 'From which 'we ſee, from what ſmall Beginnings the Scenic Plays aroſe: 'Firſt, Players were ſent for out of Etruria, who danc'd with-'out either Verſe or Piper: After this, rude and unpoliſh'd 'Verſe came in, and Motions ſomething agreeable to the Voice; 'but at laſt all things were improv'd by Art.' Tho theſe two Accounts do not agree in every Particular, we eaſily ſee the low Riſe of the Stage in this City; which tho brought in at firſt for the appeaſing a raging Peſtilence, yet the Players, who belong'd to the Drama, had their Names put out of the Liſt of their Tribe, ſome ſay by way of Diſgrace, and were never permitted to have the Honour to go to the Wars, but on the greateſt Extremity;

yet

yet this might be in reſpect to their Preſervation, as the Athenians made a Law when Eupolis was kill'd in a Sea-Fight, that Poets ſhou'd go no more to the Wars. But be this as it will; yet in time, when it had work'd it ſelf out of the Dreggs of the People, the State took notice of it, and no Play was permitted to be acted, which was not approv'd by the Ædile, who had the ſame Care of the Stage in Rome, as the Choragus had in Athens; Agrippa was Ædile in Rome, and the great Themiſtocles was Choragus in Athens.

But notwithſtanding the Ædiles took Care at laſt of the Roman Stage, yet that never came to the Excellence of that of Athens; at leaſt if we may judge of their Tragedies by thoſe of Seneca, which are in nothing comparable to thoſe of the Greek Poets. The Medea of Ovid, (had it been extant,) might perhaps have ſhown us ſomething more perfect, for he was much better qualify'd for that, than the Philoſopher.

In England Plays begun at the very bottom of the People, and mounted by degrees to the State we now ſee them in, the yet imperfect Diverſion of Ladies, and Men of the firſt Quality. Queen Elizabeth firſt diſtinguiſh'd Actors, from Strollers and Vagabonds, by making them Gentlemen of her Bed-Chamber, as ſome ſay, at leaſt her Domeſtic Servants: and then it was that Shakeſpear ennobled the rude Scene, giving it a Grace, which it knew not before, and ſufficient to pleaſe ſo wiſe and good a Princeſs. But the Glory of giving it Perfection, yet remains for a no leſs excellent King; and the Muſes have reaſon to hope, that He, that is ſo univerſal a Patron of Liberty, will not leave them in their old Bondage. For while the Poet's Succeſs depends ſo much upon the injudicious Taſte of the Managers, and the Whim of the unjudging Town, it is impoſſible that this glorious Art can ever be brought to that Excellence to which it arriv'd in Greece; Opinion or Chance, and the Addreſs of the Players having given many of our modern Tragedies a ſort of temporary Succeſs. But becauſe in a little time theſe Plays, which were cry'd up without Merit, loſe ground, and grow neglected, ſome of our Play-wrights have pretended that our Taſte of Tragedy is loſt, and that the Beſt will not do. But certainly that is a very ill Argument, for we ſee that The Orphan, Venice Preſerv'd, and good Tragedies, increaſe in Eſteem, and bring as good Audiences as any Comedies. But the ſame Argument will hold againſt Comedies; for after Opinion or Whim have given them a ſort of Run at their firſt Appearance, they flag in a little time for want of innate Merit, and ſink, ſo that in a year or two they will not bring ten Pounds. And tho an ingenious Gentleman has told us, that Tragi-Comedies will do better than Tragedies, I muſt ſay that the ſame Reaſon will hold againſt them; for I know ſcarce one of them, except Shakeſpear's, that bring any great Audiences. But I am confident, had we good Tragedies written, according to the Art I have laid down, and that they had fair Play at firſt from the Managers, the Diverſion is ſo noble and great, they wou'd find another ſort of Succeſs than our Trifles have met with, and laſt for ever. At leaſt we have Reaſon to think ſo, for all that we have yet ſeen to the contrary in Experience.

Thus have I given my Thoughts on Shakeſpear, laid down the Rules of true judging and judicious Writing, and given a View of the Riſe and Progreſs of the Drama in Greece, Rome, and England; from whence it is plain, that the only way to make the Stage flouriſh, is to put it into the Hands of the Magiſtrate, and the Management of Men of Learning and Genius; which wou'd once again bring this admirable Art to its antient Perfection.

An Explanation of the Old Words us'd by SHAKESPEAR in his Works.

A

ACknown. known, acknowledg'd, &c.
Agnize. acknowledge, confeſs, avow, &c.
Argoſies. Ships, &c.
Aroint. avant, be gone, ſtand off, &c.
Aſſubjudicate. ſubdue, &c.

B

Ballow. Pole, long Stick, Quarter-ſtaff, &c.
Betrims. adorns, decks, &c.
Bevel. crooked, awry.
Beteem. to bring forth, or breed,
Beſmirch'd. daub'd, &c.
Biggen. a Child's Coif, or Quoif.
Biſſon-Rheum. blind Rheum.
Blenches. Faults.
To Blench. ſin, fear.
Blood-bolter'd. ſmear'd with dry Blood.
Bourn. Limits, Bounds, &c.
Bosky. fat, ſwell'd, &c.
Busky. id. or woody.
Braid. trim, finical, wove, &c.
Brach. a kind of Hound, &c.
A Broch. a Buckle, Bracelet, Nooſe, Spit, &c.

C

Cleeps. calls, names, &c.
Copeſmate. Companion.
Congeſt. heap'd together.
Cautleſs. incautious.
Canary'd to it. danc'd to it, or was joyful at it.
To Carol. to ſing.
A Callet. a Whore.
Ceſs. a Tax.
Clake or Clack. to make an ingrateful Noiſe, &c.
Congreeing. for agreeing, &c.
Cleap, haunt, attend, brood on, &c.
Clinquant. ſounding, &c.
The Cranks, Offices.
Coſtard. Head, or Blockhead.

Cringes.

Cringes. Hinges.
Chuſherel. Whore-maſter, Debauchee, &c.

D

Dank. moiſt, raw, &c.
Dowle. A Feather, or rather the ſingle Particles of the Down.
To Daffe. to baffle, banter, cheat, &c.
Dulcet. ſweet.
Down-gyved. turn'd or ty'd down with Fetters.
Dearn. Solitude, &c.
Dumps. Melancholy, fix'd Sadneſs, &c.

E

Eld. Age, Antiquity, Forefathers, old Times, &c.
Empleached. bound together, interwove, &c.
Empatron'd. got a Patron.
Enfeoffed himſelf. took poſſeſſion of the Inheritance, &c.
Exuflicate. blown.

F

Foyzon. Plenty, Abundance, Strength, Heart-Juice, Moiſture, &c.
Fends. defends, guards, &c.
Famouſed. made famous.
Frampol'd. troubleſome, uneaſy, &c.
Foining Fence. maſterly Defence.
Flouriets or Flourets. ſmall Flower, or Beds of Flowers.
Franklin. a Freeman, or Gentleman, &c.
To Fatigate. to tire, weary, &c.
Foemen. Enemies.
Fineleſs. without End.

G

Guerdon'd. pay'd, rewarded with, given to, &c.
Gawds. Bawbles, gawdy Things, or ridiculous Jeſts, &c.
To Gleek. Jeer, &c.
Glyke. id.
Geck, or Gull. to cheat, defraud, &c.
The Geſt. a Bed, Couch, &c.
Grimmals. a Ring of two Rounds.
Gariſh. gay, glaring, &c.
Gleeful. merry, laughing, &c.
God-eyl'd us. God defend or do us good.
Gouts of Blood. great Drops of Blood.
To Gibber. to flout, chatter, &c.
Gaſted. frighted.
To Gallow. to fright.
Gaſtneſs. Fright.

Graff.

Graff. Graft, &c.
Goſemore. a little light Down, that flies about in the Air, by every Wind blown about.

H

Hied, or Hyed. made haſte to.
Heſts. commands.
Hent. took hold of.
Hight. call'd.
Hefted. as tender-hefted, tenderly diſpos'd, &c.
Harried. daunted, ſcolded at, frighted, handled ſo roughly.

I

Intendment. Intention.
Ingirts. ſurrounds.
An Incony Wit. a mimicking Wit, &c.
Imboſt him. noos'd him, circumvented him, &c.
Immoment. of no value.

K

Kam. awry, quite from the Matter. Clean Kam. quite from the purpoſe.

L

Luſh. Luxury, Lewdneſs, &c.
Laſs-lorn. depriv'd or deſerted by his Laſs or Miſtreſs.
Leaman. a Gallant, Stallion, &c.
Lover'd. have a Lover.
Lither-Sky. lower, lazy, plain.
Liefeſt. Deareſt, &c.

M

Moody, or Mood. angry, and Anger, &c.
Meed. Reward.
Murky. obſcure, dark, &c.
A Maund. a Basket, Scrip, &c.
Murk. dark, &c.
To Mell. to meddle with, or mingle, &c.
Manakin. a little Man.
Mammering. Muttering.

N

Nill. will not.
Nole. an Aſſes Nole. Aſſes Head and Neck.
Nay Word. a Word of Infamy or Contempt.

O

Orts. Scraps, Leavings, &c.
Orgillous. proud.
Ourſhutt. Eſcape.

P

Palmers. Pilgrims, &c.

Poleclipt.

Poleclipt. clipt in the Head.
Phraſeleſs Hand. a Hand whoſe Beauty no Phraſe can expreſs.
A Priſer, one that fights Prizes, or wreſtles for Prizes, &c.
Pight upon or over. Pight to do it, prop'd, ſettled, caſt, &c.
Palliament. a Garment, Robe, &c.
To Palter, to trifle, banter, &c.
Paragon, Peer or Equal.
Pannelled me. follow'd, attended me, &c.

Q

Quern. Churn.
Quarrellous. quarrelſome, full of Complaint, &c.
A Quintine. a Meaſure.

R

Rank. full, a River rank, full.
Recketh, or wrecketh. values, thinks, reflects.
Rigol. a Clavicord, or what makes merry, diverts, &c.
Recheate. a manner of blowing the Horn to call the Dogs together.
Rebato. or Head-dreſs.
Reft. bereft, depriv'd of, &c.
Raide. dreſs'd.
Roiſting. bullying, noiſy &c.
Ribald. crows, noiſy, impudent, &c.
Ronyon. a Rake, &c.
The Romage of the Land, Diſturbances, &c,
To Reverb. repeat, return, reply, &c.
To Renege. to deny.
Riggiſh, rampant, ruttiſh, &c.

S

Sneap'd Birds. beak'd, bill'd, &c.
Siege. Excrement.
Suggeſted, tempted, provoked, prompted.
Sea-Marge. a Cliff, or the Banks of the Sea.
Stell'd. ſtor'd, contain'd.
To Shrive. to meet, revel, confeſs, or hear ones Confeſſion, liſted in a Roll, &c.
Smoog'd. ſmoak'd.
Sheen, Shine.
To Square, to quarrel, &c.
Saws. Maxims, Proverbs, Sayings, &c.
A Bed-Swarver. one inconſtant to his Bed, a Rover, a Debauchee, &c.
Scath. Miſchief, Loſs, Wrong, Harm, Prejudice, &c.
Scroyls. Corſairs.
To Sker or Skir. to glide or move ſwiftly.
Soilure. a Blot.

To

To Scale a thing. to weigh it in Scales, &c.
To Sowle. to lugg one by the Ears.
Shrift. Confeſſion, &c.
Siar. Decay.
To Sag. to waver, be diſmay'd, &c.
Scar. Care, or Value, &c.

T

To Traſh, to lop, &c.
Teen. Pain, Anguiſh, Wrath, Anger, &c.
Totter'd. ſhaken, tottering, weak, tumbling, &c.
To Tar. to ſet on, provoke, &c.
Trenchant Sword. the Sword that cuts a gap, or wounds, indenture, &c.
Trickſey. brisk, active, nimble, &c.
Thewes. Sinews, or Modes, Manners, Cuſtoms, &c.

U

Umberd Face. a Face ſmeer'd with Umber, or a yellowiſh Face.
Unhoſted. without the Sacrament.
Unknell'd. without the Paſſing-Bell going for a dying Man.
Unhouſed. free, unconfin'd, &c.
Unkin'd. without Children.

W

Welkin. the Heavens, Sky, &c.
Whileare. lately.
Wend. go.
Wrecks. thinks of, cares for, or values.
Withers. the Shoulders of a Horſe.
Wother. Merit, Beauty, &c.
With a Winnion. with a Vengeance, &c.

Y

Ycliped. call'd.

VENUS AND ADONIS.

Vilia miretur vulgus, mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Caſtaliâ plena miniſtret aquâ.
Ovid. Amor. l. 1. El. 15.

To the Right Honourable

Henry Wriothesly,

Earl of SOUTHAMPTON,

AND

Baron of TICHFIELD.

Right Honourable,

I Know not how I shall offend, in Dedicating my unpolished Lines to your Lordship; nor how the World will censure me, for chusing so strong a Prop to support so weak a Burden: Only if your Honour seem but pleased, I account my self ſelf highly praiſed, and vow to take advantage of all idle Hours, till I have honoured you with ſome graver Labour. But if the firſt Heir of my Invention prove deformed, I ſhall be ſorry it had ſo noble a Godfather, and never after ear ſo barren a Land, for fear it yield me ſtill ſo bad a Harveſt. I leave it to your honourable Survey, and your Honour to your Heart's Content; which I wiſh may always anſwer your own Wiſh, and the World's hopeful Expectation.

Your Honour's in all Duty,

WILL. SHAKESPEAR.

VENUS and ADONIS.

EVEN as the Sun, with purple-colour'd Face,
Had ta'en his laſt Leave of the weeping Morn,
Roſe-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the Chaſe:
Hunting he lov'd, but Love he laugh'd to ſcorn.
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd Suitor 'gins to woo him.

Thrice fairer than my ſelf! (thus ſhe began)
The Fields ſweet Flower! ſweet above compare!
Stain to all Nymphs! more lovely than a Man!
More white and red, than Doves or Roſes are!
Nature, that made thee, with her ſelf at ſtrife,
Saith, that the World hath ending with thy Life.

Vouchſafe thou Wonder! to alight thy Steed,
And rein his proud Head to the Saddle-Bow;
If thou wilt deign this Favour, for thy Meed,
A thouſand honey Secrets ſhalt thou know.
Here come and ſit, where Serpent never hiſſes,
And being ſet, I'll ſmother thee with Kiſſes.

And yet not cloy thy Lips with loathed Satiety,
But rather famiſh them amid their Plenty;
Making them red and pale with freſh Variety:
Ten Kiſſes ſhort as one, one long as twenty.
A Summer's Day will ſeem an Hour but ſhort,
Being waſted in ſuch Time-beguiling Sport.

With

With this ſhe ſeizeth on his ſweating Palm,
The Preſident of Pith and Livelihood,
And trembling in her Paſſion calls its Balm;
Earth's Sovereign Salve to do a Goddeſs good.
Being ſo enrag'd, Deſire doth lend her Force,
Courageouſly to pluck him from his Horſe.

Over one Arm the luſty Courſer's Rein,
Under the other was the tender Boy,
Who bluſh'd and pouted in a dull Diſdain,
With leaden Appetite, unapt to toy.
She red and hot, as Coals of glowing Fire;
He red for Shame, but froſty in Deſire.

The ſtudded Bridle, on a ragged Bough,
Nimbly ſhe faſtens (O how quick is Love!)
The Steed is ſtalled up, and even now
To tie the Rider ſhe begins to prove.
Backward ſhe puſh'd him, as ſhe would be thruſt,
And govern'd him in Strength, tho not in Luſt.

So ſoon was ſhe along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their Elbows and their Hips:
Now doth ſhe ſtroke his Cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gins to chide, but ſoon ſhe ſtops his Lips:
And kiſſing ſpeaks, with luſtful Language broken,
If thou wilt chide, thy Lips ſhall never open.

He burns with baſhful Shame; ſhe with her Tears,
Doth quench the maiden burning of his Cheeks:
Then with her windy Sighs, and golden Hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again ſhe ſeeks.
He ſays ſhe is immodeſt, blames her miſs;
What follows more, ſhe ſmothers with a Kiſs.

Even as an empty Eagle, ſharp by Faſte,
Tires with her Beak on Feathers, Fleſh and Bone,
Shaking her Wings, devouring all in Haſte,
Till either Gorge be ſtuft, or Prey be gone:
Even ſo ſhe kiſt his Brow, his Cheek, his Chin,
And where ſhe ends, ſhe doth anew begin.

Forc'd to conſent, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breathing in her Face:
She feedeth on the Steam, as on a Prey,
And calls it heav'nly Moiſture! Air of Grace!
Wiſhing her Cheeks were Gardens full of Flowers,
So they were dew'd with ſuch diſtilling Showers.

Look how a Bird lies tangled in a Net,
So faſten'd in her Arms Adonis lies:
Pure Shame and aw'd Reſiſtance made him fret,
Which bred more Beauty in his angry Eyes.
Rain added to a River that is rank,
Perforce will force it overflow the Bank.

Still ſhe entreats, and prettily entreats:
For to a pretty Ear ſhe tunes her Tale.
Still he is ſullen, ſtill he lowers and frets,
'Twixt crimſon Shame, and Anger aſhy Pale.
Being red ſhe loves him beſt, and being white,
Her Breaſt is better'd with a more Delight.

Look how he can, ſhe cannot chuſe but love,
And by her fair immortal Hand ſhe ſwears,
From his ſoft Boſom never to remove,
Till he take Truce with her contending Tears;
Which long have rain'd, making her Cheeks all wet,
And one ſweet Kiſs ſhall pay this countleſs Debt.

Upon this Promiſe did he raiſe his Chin,
Like a Dive-dapper peering thro a Wave,
Who being look'd on, ducks as quickly in:
So offers he to give what ſhe did crave;
  But when his Lips were ready for his Pay,
  He winks and turns his Lips another Way.

Never did Paſſenger, in Summer's Heat,
More thirſt for Drink, than ſhe for this good Turn;
Her Help ſhe ſees, but Help ſhe cannot get,
She baths in Water, yet in Fire muſt burn.
  Oh Pity, gan ſhe cry, flint-hearted Boy!
  'Tis but a Kiſs I beg, why art thou coy?

I have been woo'd, as I intreat thee now,
Ev'n by the ſtern and direful God of War,
Whoſe ſinewy Neck in Battel ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every Jar:
  Yet hath he been my Captive and my Slave,
  And begg'd for that, which thou unask'd ſhalt have.

Over my Altars hath he hung his Lance,
His batter'd Shield, his uncontrolled Creſt;
And for my ſake hath learn'd to ſport and dance,
To coy, to wanton, dally, ſmile and jeſt;
  Scorning his churliſh Drum, and Enſign red,
  Making my Arms his Field, his Tent my Bed.

Thus he, that over-rul'd, I over-ſway'd;
Leading him Priſoner in a red-Roſe Chain.
Strong temper'd Steel, his ſtronger Strength obey'd,
Yet was he ſervile to my coy Diſdain.
  Oh be not proud, nor brag not of thy Might,
  For maſtring her, that foil'd the God of Fight!

Touch but my Lips with thoſe fair Lips of thine,
(Tho mine be not ſo fair, yet they are red)
The Kiſs ſhall be thine own, as well, as mine;
What ſeeſt thou on the Ground? Hold up thy Head:
Look in mine Eye-balls, where thy Beauty lies,
Then why not Lips on Lips, ſince Eyes on Eyes?

Art thou aſham'd to kiſs? Then wink again,
And I will wink, ſo ſhall the Day ſeem Night,
Love keeps his Revels, where there be but twain;
Be bold to play, our Sport is not in ſight.
Theſe blue-vein'd Violets, whereon we lean,
Never can blab, nor know they what we mean.

The tender Spring, upon thy tempting Lip,
Shews thee unripe; yet may'ſt thou well be taſted:
Make uſe of Time, let not Advantage ſlip,
Beauty within it ſelf would not be waſted.
Fair Flowers, that are not gather'd in their Prime,
Rot and conſume themſelves in little time.

Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled old,
Ill-natur'd, crooked, churliſh, harſh in Voice,
O'erworn, deſpiſed, rheumatic and cold,
Thick-ſighted, barren, lean, and lacking Juice:
Then mightſt thou pauſe, for then I were not for thee,
But, having no Defects, why doſt abhor me?

Thou can'ſt not ſee one Wrinkle in my Brow,
Mine Eyes are grey, and bright, and quick in turning;
My Beauty, as the Spring, doth yearly grow;
My Fleſh as ſoft and plump, my Marrow burning;
My ſmooth moiſt Hand, were it with thy Hand felt,
Would in thy Palm diſſolve, or ſeem to melt.

Bid me diſcourſe, I will inchant thine Ear,
Or, like a Fairy, trip upon the Green;
Or, like a Nymph, with long diſhevel'd Hair,
Dance on the Sands, and yet no footing ſeen.
Love is a Spirit all compact of Fire,
Not groſs to ſink, but light, and will aſpire.

Witneſs this Primroſe Bank, whereon I lie,
The forceleſs Flowers, like ſturdy Trees, ſupport me:
Two ſtrengthleſs Doves will draw me thro the Sky
From Morn till Night, even where I liſt to ſport me.
Is Love ſo light, ſweet Boy, and may it be,
That thou ſhouldſt think it heavy unto thee?

Is thine own Heart to thine own Face affected?
Can thy right Hand ſeize Love upon thy left?
Then wooe thy ſelf, be of thy ſelf rejected,
Steal thine own Freedom, and complain of Theft.
Narciſſus ſo himſelf, himſelf forſook,
And dy'd to kiſs his Shadow in the Brook.

Torches are made to light, Jewels to wear,
Dainties to taſte, freſh Beauty for the uſe,
Herbs for their Smell, and ſappy Plants to bear;
Things growing to themſelves are Growth's Abuſe:
Seeds ſpring from Seeds, and Beauty breedeth Beauty;
Thou wert begot, to get it is thy Duty.

Upon the Earth's Increaſe why ſhouldſt thou feed,
Unleſs the Earth with thy Increaſe be fed?
By Law of Nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live, when thou thy ſelf art dead:
And ſo in ſpight of Death, thou doſt ſurvive,
In that thy Likeneſs ſtill is left alive.

By

By this the Love-ſick Queen began to ſweat,
For, where they lay, the Shadow had forſook them;
And Titan, tired in the Mid-day Heat,
With burning Eye did hotly overlook them:
  Wiſhing Adonis had his Team to guide,
  So he were like him, and by Venus Side.

And now Adonis with a lazy Spright,
And with a heavy, dark, diſliking Eye,
His low'ring Brows o'erwhelming his fair Sight,
Like miſty Vapours, when they blot the Sky;
  Souring his Cheeks, cries, Fie, no more of Love,
  The Sun doth burn my Face, I muſt remove.

Ah me! (quoth Venus) young, and ſo unkind!
What bare Excuſes mak'ſt thou to be gone?
I'll ſigh Celeſtial Breath, whoſe gentle Wind
Shall cool the Heat of this deſcending Sun.
  I'll make a Shadow for thee of my Hairs,
  If they burn too, I'll quench them with my Tears.

The Sun that ſhines from Heaven ſhines but warm,
And, loe, I lie between the Sun and thee!
The Heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine Eye darts forth the Fire that burneth me.
  And, were I not immortal, Life were done,
  Between this Heav'nly, and this Earthly Sun.

Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as Steel?
Nay more than Flint, for Stone at Rain relenteth:
Art thou a Woman's Son, and canſt not feel
What 'tis to love, how want of Love tormenteth?
  Oh! had thy Mother born ſo bad a Mind,
  She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

What am I, that thou ſhouldſt contemn me this?
Or what great Danger dwells upon my Suit?
What were thy Lips the worſe for one poor Kiſs!
Speak fair: But ſpeak fair Words, or elſe be mute.
Give me one Kiſs, I'll give it thee again,
And one for Int'reſt, if thou wilt have twain.

Fie, lifeleſs Picture, cold and ſenſeleſs Stone,
Well-painted Idol, Image dull and dead;
Statue contenting but the Eye alone,
Thing like a Man, but of nó Woman bred.
Thou art no Man, tho of a Man's Complection,
For Men will kiſs even by their own Direction.

This ſaid, Impatience choaks her pleading Tongue,
And ſwelling Paſſion doth provoke a Pauſe;
Red Cheeks and fiery Eyes blaze forth her Wrong,
Being Judge in Love, ſhe cannot right her Cauſe.
And now ſhe weeps, and now ſhe fain would ſpeak,
And now her Sobs do her Intendments break.

Sometimes ſhe ſhakes her Head, and then his Hand:
Now gazeth ſhe on him, now on the Ground;
Sometimes her Arms infold him like a Band;
She would, he will not in her Arms be bound;
And when from thence he ſtruggles to be gone,
She locks her Lilly Fingers one in one.

Fondling, ſaith ſhe, ſince I have hemm'd thee here,
Within the Circuit of this Ivory Pale,
I'll be the Park, and thou ſhalt be my Deer,
Feed where thou wilt, on Mountain, or in Dale.
Graze on my Lips; and if thoſe Hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleaſant Fountains lie.

Within this Limit is Relief enough,
Sweet bottom Graſs, and high delightful Plain,
Round riſing Hillocks, Brakes obſcure and rough,
To ſhelter thee from Tempeſt and from Rain.
Then be my Deer, ſince I am ſuch a Park,
No Dog ſhall rouze thee, tho a thouſand bark.

At this Adonis ſmiles, as in Diſdain,
That in each Cheek appears a pretty Dimple;
Love made thoſe Hollows, if himſelf were ſlain,
He might be buried in a Tomb ſo ſimple:
Foreknowing well if there he came to lie,
Why there Love liv'd, and there he cou'd not die.

Theſe loving Caves, theſe round enchanted Pits,
Open'd their Mouths to ſwallow Venus liking:
Being mad before, how doth ſhe now for Wits?
Struck dead at firſt, what needs a ſecond ſtriking?
Poor Queen of Love, in thine own Law forlorn,
To love a Cheek, that ſmiles at thee with Scorn.

Now which Way ſhall ſhe turn? What ſhall ſhe ſay?
Her Words are done, her Woes the more increaſing:
The Time is ſpent, her Object will away,
And from her twining Arms doth urge releaſing.
Pity ſhe cries, ſome Favour, ſome Remorſe!
Away he ſprings, and haſteth to his Horſe.

But, lo! from forth a Copp's that neighbours by,
A breeding Jennet, luſty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling Courſer doth eſpy,
And forth ſhe ruſhes, ſnorts, and neighs aloud:
The ſtrong-neck'd Steed, being ty'd unto a Tree,
Breaketh his Rein, and to her ſtrait goes he.

Imperiouſly he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven Girts he breaks aſunder;
The bearing Earth with his hard Hoof he wounds,
Whoſe hollow Womb reſounds like Heaven's Thunder:
The Iron Bit he cruſhes 'tween his Teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His Ears up-prick'd, his braided hanging Mane
Upon his compaſs'd Creſt now ſtands an end:
His Noſtrils drink the Air, and forth again,
As from a Furnace, Vapours doth he lend:
His Eye, which gliſters ſcornfully like Fire,
Shews his hot Courage, and his high Deſire.

Sometimes he trots, as if he told the Steps,
With gentle Majeſty, and modeſt Pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who ſhould ſay, lo! thus my Strength is try'd:
And thus I do to captivate the Eye
Of the fair Breeder, that is ſtanding by.

What recketh he his Rider's angry Stir,
His flatt'ring Holla, or his Stand, I ſay?
What cares he now for Curb, or pricking Spur?
For rich Capariſons, or Trappings gay?
He ſees his Love, and nothing elſe he ſees,
For nothing elſe with his proud Sight agrees.

Look when a Painter wou'd ſurpaſs the Life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd Steed,
His Art, with Nature's Workmanſhip at Strife,
As if the Dead the Living ſhould exceed:
So did his Horſe excell a common one,
In Shape, in Courage, Colour, Pace, and Bone.

Round-

Round-hooft, ſhort-jointed, Fetlocks ſhag and long,
Broad Breaſt, full Eyes, ſmall Head, and Noſtril wide,
High Créſt, ſhort Ears, ſtrait Legs, and paſſing ſtrong,
Thin Mane, thick Tail, broad Buttock, tender Hide.
Look what a Horſe ſhould have, he did not lack,
Save a proud Rider on ſo proud a Back.

Sometimes he ſcuds far off, and there he ſtares;
Anon he ſtarts at ſtirring of a Feather.
To bid the Wind abaſe he now prepares,
And where he run, or fly, they know not whither.
For thro his Mane and Tail the high Wind ſings,
Fanning the Hairs, which heave like feather'd Wings.

He looks upon his Love, and neighs unto her;
She anſwers him, as if ſhe knew his Mind.
Being proud, as Females are, to ſee him wooe her,
She puts on outward Strangeneſs, ſeems unkind,
Spurns at his Love, and ſcorns the Heat he feels,
Beating his kind Embracements with her Heels.

Then, like a melancholy Male-content,
He veils his Tail; that like a falling Plume
Cool Shadow to his melting Buttocks lent;
He ſtamps, and bites the poor Flies in his Fume:
His Love perceiving how he is enrag'd,
Grew kinder, and his Fury was aſſwag'd.

His teſty Maſter goes about to take him,
When lo! the unback'd Breeder full of Fear,
Jealous of catching, ſwiftly doth forſake him,
With her the Horſe, and left Adonis there.
As they were mad, unto the Wood they hie them,
Out-ſtripping Crows, that ſtrive to over-fly them.

All ſwoln with chaſing, down Adonis ſits,
Banning his boiſt'rous and unruly Beaſt.
And now the happy Seaſon once more fits,
That Love-ſick Love, by pleading may be bleſt.
For Lovers ſay, the Heart hath treble Wrong,
When it is barr'd the Aidance of the Tongue.

An Oven that is ſtop'd, or River ſtaid,
Burneth more hotly, ſwelleth with more Rage:
So of concealed Sorrow may be ſaid;
Free Vent of Words Love's Fire doth oft aſſwage:
But when the Heart's Attorney once is mute,
The Client breaks, as deſperate in his Suit.

He ſees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying Coal revives with Wind;
And with his Bonnet hides his angry Brow,
Looks on the dull Earth with diſturbed Mind;
Taking no notice, that ſhe is ſo nigh,
For all aſcance he holds her in his Eye.

O! what a Sight it was wiſtly to view
How ſhe came ſtealing to the wayward Boy;
To note the fighting Conflict of her hue,
How White and Red each other did deſtroy!
But now her Cheek was pale, and by and by
It flaſh'd forth Fire, as Lightning from the Sky.

Now was ſhe juſt before him, as he ſat,
And like a lowly Lover down ſhe kneels;
With one fair Hand ſhe heaveth up his Hat,
Her other tender Hand his fair Cheeks feels:
His tender Cheeks, receive her ſoft Hand's Print,
As apt, as new-fallen Snow takes any Dint.

Oh!

Oh! what a War of Looks was then between them!
Her Eyes Petitioners to his Eyes ſuing;
His Eyes ſaw her Eyes, as they had not ſeen them;
Her Eyes woo'd ſtill, his Eyes diſdain'd the Wooing:
And all this dumb Play had his Acts made plain
With Tears, which Chorus-like her Eyes did rain.

Full gently now ſhe takes him by the Hand,
A Lilly priſon'd in a Jail of Snow;
Or Ivory in an Alablaſter Band,
So white a Friend ingirts ſo white a Foe!
This beauteous Combat, wilful and unwilling,
Shew'd like to Silver Doves, that ſit a Billing.

Once more the Engine of her Thoughts began.
O faireſt Mover on this mortal Round!
Would thou wert as I am, and I a Man,
My Heart all whole as thine, thy Heart my Wound.
For one ſweet Look my Help I would aſſure thee,
Tho nothing but my Body's Bane would cure thee.

Give me my Hand, (ſaith he) why doſt thou feel it?
Give me thy Heart (ſaith ſhe) and thou ſhalt have it.
O! give it me, leſt thy hard Heart do ſteel it;
And being ſteel'd, ſoft Sighs can never grave it:
Then Love's deep Groans I never ſhall regard,
Becauſe Adonis Heart hath made mine hard.

For ſhame, he cries, let go, and let me go,
My Day's Delight is paſt, my Horſe is gone,
And 'tis your Fault I am bereft him ſo:
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone.
For all my Mind, my Thought, my buſy Care,
Is how to get my Palfrey from the Mare.

Thus ſhe replies: Thy Palfrey, as he ſhould,
Welcomes the warm Approach of ſweet Deſire:
Affection is a Coal, that muſt be cool'd;
Elſe ſuffer'd, it will ſet the Heart on Fire.
The Sea hath Bounds, but deep Deſire hath none;
Therefore no marvel, tho thy Horſe be gone.

How like a Jade he ſtood, ty'd to a Tree,
Servilely maſtred with a leathern Rein!
But when he ſaw his Love, his Youth's fair Fee,
He held ſuch petty Bondage in Diſdain;
Throwing the baſe Thong from his bending Creſt,
Enfranchiſing his Mouth, his Back, his Breaſt.

Who ſees his true Love in her naked Bed,
Teaching the Sheets a whiter Hue than white,
But when his glutton Eye ſo full hath fed,
His other Agents aim at like Delight?
Who is ſo faint, that dare not be ſo bold
To touch the Fire, the Weather being cold?

Let me excuſe thy Courſer, gentle Boy,
And learn of him, I heartily beſeech thee,
To take advantage on preſented Joy;
Tho I were dumb, yet his Proceedings teach thee,
O! learn to love, the Leſſon is but plain,
And once made perfect, never loſt again,

I know not Love (quoth he) nor will I know it,
Unleſs it be a Boar, and then I chaſe it;
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it,
My Love to Love, is Love but to diſgrace it;
For I have heard it is a Life in Death,
That laughs, and weeps, and all but in a Breath.

Who wears a Garment ſhapeleſs and unfiniſh'd?
Who plucks the Bud before one Leaf put forth?
If ſpringing Things be any jot diminiſh'd,
They wither in their Prime, prove nothing worth.
The Colt that's back'd, and burden'd being young,
Loſeth his Pride, and never waxeth ſtrong.

You hurt my Hand with wringing. Let us part,
And leave this idle Theme, this bootleſs Chat;
Remove your Siege from my unyielding Heart,
To Love's Alarm it will not ope the Gate.
Diſmiſs your Vows, your feigned Tears, your Flatt'ry;
For where a Heart is hard, they make no Batt'ry.

What, can'ſt thou talk? (quoth ſhe) haſt thou a Tongue?
O! would thou had'ſt not, or I had no hearing!
Thy Mermaid's Voice hath done me double Wrong!
I had my Load before, now preſs'd with bearing.
Melodious Diſcord! heavenly Tune harſh-ſounding!
Earth's deep ſweet Muſick! and Heart's deep ſore-wounding!

Had I no Eyes, but Ears, my Ears would love
That inward Beauty, and inviſible:
Or were I deaf, thy outward Parts would move
Each Part of me, that were but ſenſible.
Tho neither Eyes, nor Ears, to hear, nor ſee,
Yet ſhould I be in Love, by touching thee.

Say, that the Senſe of Reaſon were bereft me,
And that I could not ſee, nor hear, nor touch;
And nothing but the very Smell were left me,
Yet would my Love to thee be ſtill as much:
For from the Stillatory of thy Face excelling
Comes Breath perfum'd, that breedeth Love by Smelling.

But oh! what Banquet wert thou to the Taſte,
Being Nurſe and Feeder of the other four!
Would they not wiſh the Feaſt ſhould ever laſt,
And bid Suſpicion double-lock the Door?
Leſt Jealouſy, that four unwelcome Gueſt,
Should by his ſtealing in, diſturb the Feaſt.

Once more the ruby-colour'd Portal open'd,
Which to his Speech did Honey Paſſage yield;
Like a red Morn, that ever yet betoken'd,
Wreck to the Seamen, Tempeſt to the Field,
Sorrow to Shepherds, Woe unto the Birds,
Guſt and foul Flaws to Herdmen, and to Herds.

This ill Preſage adviſedly ſhe marketh,
Even as the Wind is huſh'd before it raineth,
Or as the Wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the Berry breaks before it ſtaineth;
Or like the deadly Bullet of a Gun,
His Meaning ſtruck her, e'er his Words begun.

And at his Look ſhe flatly falleth down;
For Looks kill Love, and Love by Looks reviveth:
A Smile recures the wounding of a Frown,
But bleſſed Bankrupt, that by Love ſo thriveth!
The ſilly Boy believing ſhe is dead,
Claps her pale Cheek, till clapping makes it red.

And in Amaze brake off his late Intent,
For ſharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning Love did wittily prevent,
Fair fall the Wit, that can ſo well defend her:
For on the Graſs ſhe lies, as ſhe were ſlain,
Till his Breath breathed Life in her again.

He

He wrings her Noſe, he ſtrikes her on the Cheeks,
He bends her Fingers, holds her Pulſes hard.
He chafes her Lips, a thouſand ways he ſeeks
To mend the Hurt, that his Unkindneſs marr'd;
He kiſſes her, and ſhe by her good Will,
Would never riſe, ſo he will kiſs her ſtill.

The Night of Sorrow now is turn'd to Day,
Her two blue Windows faintly ſhe up-heaveth;
Like the fair Sun, when in his freſh Array
He cheers the Morn, and all the World relieveth:
And as the bright Sun glorifies the Sky,
So is her Face illumin'd with her Eye.

Whoſe Beams upon his hairleſs Face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their ſhine:
Were never four ſuch Lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his Brows repine.
But hers, which thro the cryſtal Tears gave Light,
Shone like the Moon in Water ſeen, by Night.

O! where am I! (quoth ſhe) in Earth, or Heaven!
Or in the Ocean drench'd! or in the Fire!
What Hour is this? or Morn, or weary Even?
Do I delight to die? or Life deſire?
But now I liv'd, and Life was Death's Annoy:
But now I dy'd, and Death was lively Joy.

O! thou didſt kill me, kill me once again:
Thy Eyes, ſhrewd Tutor, that hard Heart of thine
Has taught them ſcornful Tricks, and ſuch Diſdain,
That they have murder'd this poor Heart of mine:
And theſe mine Eyes, true Leaders to their Queen,
But for thy piteous Lips no more had ſeen.

Long

Long may they kiſs each other for this Cure!
O never let their crimſon Liveries wear!
And as they laſt, their Verdure ſtill endure,
To drive Infection from the dangerous Year!
That the Star-gazers having writ on Death,
May ſay, the Plague is baniſh'd by thy Breath.

Pure Lips! ſweet Seals! in my ſoft Lips imprinted,
What Bargains may I make ſtill to be ſealing?
To ſell my ſelf, I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and uſe good Dealing:
Which Purchaſe if thou make, for fear of Slips,
Set thy Seal manual on my wax-red Lips.

A thouſand Kiſſes buys my Heart from me,
And pay them at thy leiſure one by one.
What is ten hundred Kiſſes unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?
Say for Non-payment that the Debt ſhould double,
Is twenty hundred Kiſſes ſuch a trouble?

Fair Queen (quoth he) if any Love you owe me,
Meaſure my Strangeneſs with my unripe Years,
Before I know my ſelf, ſeek not to know me.
No Fiſher but the ungrown Fry forbears;
The mellow Plum doth fall, the green ſticks faſt,
Or being early pluck'd, is ſour to taſte.

Look, the World's Comforter with weary Gate,
His Day's hot Task hath ended in the Weſt!
The Owl (Night's Herald) ſhrieks, 'tis very late,
The Sheep are gone to Fold, Birds to their Neſt:
The cole-black Clouds, that ſhadow Heaven's Light,
Do ſummon us to part, and bid Good-night.

Now let me ſay Good-night, and ſo ſay you:
If you will ſay ſo, you ſhall have a Kiſs.
Good-night (quoth ſhe) and e'er he ſays adieu,
The honey Fee of parting tendred is.
Her Arms do lend his Neck a ſweet Embrace,
Incorp'rate then they ſeem, Face grows to Face.

Till breathleſs he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly Moiſture, that ſweet Coral Mouth,
Whoſe precious Taſte her thirſty Lips well knew,
Whereon they ſurfeit, yet complain on Drowth:
He with her Plenty preſs'd, ſhe faint with Dearth,
Their Lipps together glu'd, fall to the Earth.

Now quick Deſire hath caught her yielding Prey,
And Glutton-like ſhe feeds, yet never filleth;
Her Lipps are Conquerors, his Lipps obey,
Paying what Ranſom the Inſulter willeth:
Whoſe Vultur Thought doth pitch the Prize ſo high,
That ſhe will draw his Lipps rich Treaſure dry.

And having felt the Sweetneſs of the Spoil,
With blindfold Fury ſhe begins to forage;
Her Face doth reek and ſmoke, her Blood doth boil,
And careleſs Luſt ſtirs up a deſperate Courage:
Planting Oblivion, beating Reaſon back;
Forgetting Shame's pure Bluſh, and Honour's Wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary with her hard embracing,
Like a wild Bird being tam'd with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot Roe, that's tir'd with chaſing,
Or like the froward Infant ſtill'd with dandling;
He now obeys, and now no more reſiſteth,
While ſhe takes all ſhe can, not all ſhe liſteth.

What Wax ſo frozen, but diſſolves with tempting
And yields at laſt to every light Impreſſion?
Things out of Hope are compaſs'd oft with vent'ring,
Chiefly in Love, whoſe Leave exceeds Commiſſion.
Affection faints not, like a pale-fac'd Coward,
But then wooes beſt, when moſt his Choice is froward.

When he did frown, O had ſhe then gave over!
Such Nectar from his Lipps ſhe had not ſuckt:
Foul Words and Frowns muſt not repel a Lover,
What tho' the Roſe have Pricks; yet it is pluckt.
Were Beauty under twenty Locks kept faſt,
Yet Love breaks thro, and picks them all at laſt.

For Pity now ſhe can no more detain him;
The poor Fool prays her, that he may depart.
She is reſolved no longer to reſtrain him;
Bids him farewel, and look well to her Heart,
The which by Cupid's Bow ſhe doth proteſt,
He carries thence engaged in his Breaſt.

Sweet Boy, ſhe ſays, this Night I'll waſte in Sorrow,
For my ſick Heart commands mine Eyes to watch.
Tell me, Loves Maſter, ſhall we meet to Morrow?
Say, ſhall we, ſhall we, wilt thou make the Match?
He tells her no, to Morrow he intends
To hunt the Boar with certain of his Friends.

The Boar (quoth ſhe) whereat a ſudden pale,
Like Lawn being ſpread upon the bluſhing Roſe,
Uſurps her Cheeks, ſhe trembles at his Tale,
And on his Neck her yoking Arms ſhe throws,
She ſinketh down ſtill hanging on his Neck,
He on her Belly falls, ſhe on her Back.

Now is ſhe in the very Liſts of Love,
Her Champion mounted for the hot Encounter.
All is imaginary, ſhe doth prove,
He will not manage her altho he mount her:
That worſe than Tantalus is her Annoy,
To clip Elyſium, and to lack her Joy.

Even as poor Birds deceiv'd with painted Grapes,
Do ſurfeit by the Eye, and pine the Maw;
Even ſo ſhe languiſheth in her Miſhaps,
As thoſe poor Birds, that helpleſs Berries ſaw,
The warm Effects which ſhe in him finds miſſing,
She ſeeks to kindle with continual Kiſſing.

But all in vain, good Queen, it will not be,
She hath aſſay'd, as much as may be prov'd,
Her Pleading hath deſerved a greater Fee,
She's Love, ſhe loves, and yet ſhe is not lov'd!
Fie, fie, he ſays, you cruſh me, let me go,
You have no Reaſon to with-hold me ſo.

Thou had'ſt been gone (quoth ſhe) ſweet Boy, e'er this,
But that thou told'ſt me thou would'ſt hunt the Boar.
O! be advis'd, thou know'ſt not what it is,
With Javelins Point a Churliſh Swine to gore,
Whoſe Tuſhes never ſheath'd, he whetteth ſtill,
Like to a mortal Butcher, bent to kill.

On his Bow-back he hath a Battel ſet
Of briſtly Pikes, that ever threat his Foes;
His Eyes, like Glow-worms, ſhine when he doth fret,
His Snout digs Sepulchres where e'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he ſtrikes whate'er is in his Way;
And whom he ſtrikes, his crooked Tuſhes ſlay.

His brawny Sides with hairy Briſtles armed,
Are better Proof, than thy Spears Point can enter;
His ſhort thick Neck cannot be eaſily harmed,
Being ireful, on the Lion he will venture.
The thorny Brambles, and embracing Buſhes,
As fearful of him part, through whom he ruſhes.

Alas! he nought eſteems that Face of thine,
To which Love's Eye pays tributary Gazes;
Nor thy ſoft Hand, ſweet Lipps, and Chriſtal Eyne,
Whoſe full Perfection all the World amazes;
But having thee at Vantage (wondrous Dread!)
Would root theſe Beauties, as he roots the Mead.

O! let him keep his loathſome Cabin ſtill!
Beauty hath nought to do with ſuch foul Fiends.
Come not within his Danger by thy Will,
They, that thrive well, take Counſel of their Friends.
When thou didſt name the Boar, not to diſſemble,
I fear'd thy Fortune, and my Joynts did tremble.

Didſt thou not mark my Face? Was it not white?
Saw'ſt thou not Signs of Fear lurk in mine Eye?
Grew I not faint? And fell I not down right?
Within my Boſom, whereon thou doſt lie,
My boding Heart pants, beats, and takes no Reſt,
But like an Earth-quake ſhakes thee on my Breaſt.

For where Love reigns, diſturbing Jealouſy
Doth call himſelf Affection's Centinel;
Gives falſe Alarms, ſuggeſteth Mutiny,
And in a peaceful Hour doth cry, kill, kill,
Diſtempring gentle Love with his Deſire,
As Air and Water doth abate the Fire.

This

This ſour Informer, this bate-breeding Spy,
This Canker, that eats up Love's tender Spring,
This Carry-tale, Diſſentious Jealouſy,
That ſometime true News, ſometime falſe doth bring,
Knocks at my Heart, and whiſpers in mine Ear,
That if I love thee, I thy Death ſhould fear.

And more than ſo, preſenteth to mine Eye
The Picture of an angry chafing Boar,
Under whoſe ſharp Fangs, on his Back doth lie
An Image like thy ſelf, all ſtain'd with Gore;
Whoſe Blood upon the freſh Flowers being ſhed,
Doth make 'em drop with Grief, and hang the Head.

What ſhould I do? ſeeing thee ſo indeed?
That trembling at th' Imagination,
The Thought of it doth make my faint Heart bleed,
And Fear doth teach it Divination.
I prophecy thy Death, my living Sorrow,
If thou encounter with the Boar to-morrow.

But if thou needs will hunt, be rul'd by me,
Uncouple at the timorous flying Hare;
Or at the Fox, which lives by Subtilty;
Or at the Roe, which no Encounter dare,
Purſue theſe fearful Creatures o'er the Downs,
And on thy well-breath'd Horſe keep with thy Hounds.

And when thou haſt on Foot the purblind Hare,
Mark the poor Wretch, to overſhut his Troubles,
How he out-runs the Wind, and with what Care,
He cranks and croſſes with a thouſand Doubles.
The many Umſits through the which he goes,
Are like a Labyrinth t' amaze his Foes.

Some-

Sometime he runs among the Flock of Sheep,
To make the cunning Hounds miſtake their Smell;
And ſometime, where Earth-delving Conies keep,
To ſtop the loud Purſuers in their Yell;
And ſometime ſorteth with a Herd of Deer:
Danger deviſeth Shifts, Wit waits on Fear.

For there his Smell with others being mingled.
The hot-ſcent-ſnuffing Hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceaſing their clamorous Cry, till they have ſingled,
With much ado, the cold Fault cleanly out:
Then do they ſpend their Mouths; Eccho replies,
As if another Chaſe were in the Skies.

By this poor Watt far off, upon a Hill,
Stands on his hinder Legs with liſt'ning Ear,
To hearken if his Foes purſue him ſtill:
Anon their loud Alarums he doth hear,
And now his Grief may be compared well
To one ſore ſick, that hears the paſſing Bell.

Then ſhalt thou ſee the dew-bedabbled Wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the Way.
Each envious Brier his weary Legs doth ſcratch,
Each Shadow makes him ſtop, each Murmur ſtay.
For Miſery is trodden on by many;
And being low, never reliev'd by any.

Lie quietly and hear a little more,
Nay, do not ſtruggle, for thou ſhalt not riſe:
To make thee hate the hunting of the Boar,
Unlike my ſelf, thou hear'ſt me moralize,
Applying this, to that, and ſo, to ſo;
For Love can comment upon every Woe.

Where did I leave? No matter where (quoth he)
Leave me, and then the Story aptly Ends:
The Night is ſpent. Why, what of that? (quoth ſhe)
I am (quoth he) expected of my Friends.
And now 'tis dark, and going I ſhall fall.
In Night (quoth ſhe) Deſire ſees beſt of all.

But if thou fall, Oh, then imagine this,
The Earth in Love with thee, thy Footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a Kiſs.
Rich Preys make rich Men Thieves, ſo do thy Lips
Make modeſt Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Leſt ſhe ſhould ſteal a Kiſs, and die forſworn.

Now of this dark Night I perceive the Reaſon,
Cynthia for Shame obſcures her Silver Shrine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of Treaſon,
For ſtealing Moulds from Heaven, that were divine,
Wherein ſhe fram'd thee in high Heaven's Deſpite,
To ſhame the Sun by Day, and her by Night.

And therefore hath ſhe brib'd the Deſtinies
To croſs the curious Workmanſhip of Nature;
To mingle Beauty with Infirmities,
And pure Perfection with impure Defeature;
Making it ſubject to the Tyranny
Of ſad Miſchances, and much Miſery.

As burning Fever, Agues pale and Faint,
Life-poiſoning Peſtilence, and Frenzies Woad,
The Marrow-eating Sickneſs, whoſe Attaint
Diſorder breeds by heating of the Blood:
Surfeits, Impoſthumes, Grief, and damn'd Deſpair,
Swear Nature's Death for framing thee ſo fair.

And not the leaſt of all theſe Maladies,
But in one Minute's Sight brings Beauty under:
Both Favour, Savour, Hue and Qualities,
Whereat th' imperial Gazer late did wonder,
Are on the ſudden waſted, thaw'd, and done,
As mountain Snow melts with the Mid-day Sun.

Therefore, deſpite of fruitleſs Chaſtity,
Love-lacking Veſtals, and ſelf-loving Nuns,
Thus on the Earth would breed a Scarcity,
And barren Dearth of Daughters and of Sons,
Be prodigal. The Lamp that burns by Night,
Dries up his Oil, to lend the World his Light.

What is thy Body, but a ſwallowing Grave,
Seeming to bury that Poſterity,
Which by the Rights of Time thou needs muſt have,
If thou deſtroy them not in their Obſcurity?
If ſo, the World will hold the in diſdain,
Sith in thy Pride ſo fair a Hope is ſlain.

So in thy ſelf, thy ſelf art made away,
A Miſchief worſe, than civil home-bred Strife,
Or theirs, whoſe deſperate Hands themſelves do ſlay,
Or Butchers Sire, that raves his Son of Life.
Foul-cankering Ruſt the hidden Treaſure frets;
But Gold, that's put to Uſe, more Gold begets.

Nay then, quoth Adon, you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled Theam;
The Kiſs I gave you is beſtow'd in vain,
And all in vain you ſtrive againſt the Stream.
For by this black-fac'd Night, Deſires foul Nurſe,
Your Treatiſe makes me like you worſe and worſe.

If Love hath lent you twenty thouſand Tongues,
And every Tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton Mermaids Songs,
Yet from mine Ear the tempting Tune is blown.
For know, my Heart ſtands armed in my Ear,
And will not let a falſe Sound enter there:

Leſt the deceiving Harmony ſhould run
Into the quiet Cloſure of my Breaſt;
And then my little Heart were quite undone,
In his Bed-chamber to be barr'd of Reſt.
No, Lady, no, my Heart longs not to groan,
But ſoundly ſleeps, while now it ſleeps alone.

What have you urg'd, that I cannot reprove?
The Path is ſmooth, that leadeth unto Danger.
I hate not Love, but your Device in Love,
That lends Embracements unto every Stranger.
You do it for Increaſe. O ſtrange Excuſe!
When Reaſon is the Bawd to Luſt's Abuſe.

Call it not Love, for Love to Heaven is fled,
Since ſweating Luſt on Earth uſurps his Name;
Under whoſe ſimple Semblance he hath fed
Upon freſh Beauty, blotting it with Blame:
Which the hot Tyrant ſtains, and ſoon bereaves,
As Caterpillars do the tender Leaves.

Love comforteth like Sun-ſhine after Rain;
But Luſt's Effect is Tempeſt after Sun:
Love's gentle Spring doth always freſh remain;
Luſt's Winter comes, e'er Summer half be done.
Love ſurfeits not; Luſt like a Glutton dies:
Love is all Truth; Luſt full of forged Lyes.

More I could tell, but more I dare not ſay;
The Text is old, the Orator too green:
Therefore in Sadneſs now I will away,
My Face is full of Shame, my Heart of Teen:
Mine Ears, that to your wanton Calls attended,
Do burn themſelves for having ſo offended.

With this, he breaketh from the ſweet Embrace
Of thoſe fair Arms, which bound him to her Breaſt:
And homeward thro the dark Lanes runs apace;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply diſtreſs'd.
Look how a bright Star ſhooteth from the Sky,
So glides he in the Night from Venus' Eye.

Which after him ſhe darts, as One on ſhore
Gazing upon a late embarked Friend,
Till the wild Waves will have him ſeen no more,
Whoſe Ridges with the meeting Clouds contend:
So did the mercileſs and pitchy Night,
Fold in the Object, that did feed her Sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as One that unaware
Hath dropt a precious Jewel in the Flood;
Or ſtoniſh'd, as Night-Wanderers often are,
Their Light blown out in ſome miſtruſtful Wood:
E'en ſo confounded in the dark ſhe lay,
Having loſt the fair Diſcovery of her Way.

And now ſhe beats her Heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour Caves, as ſeeming troubled,
Make verbal Repetition of her Moans:
Paſſion on Paſſion deeply is redoubled.
Ay me! ſhe cries, and twenty times, Woe! Woe!
And twenty Eccho's twenty times cry ſo.

She marking them, begins a waiting Note,
And ſings extemp'rally a woful Ditty:
How Love makes young Men thrall, and old Men dote;
How Love is wiſe in Folly, fooliſh witty:
Her heavy Anthem ſtill concludes in Woe!
And ſtill the Choir of Eccho's anſwers ſo.

Her Song was tedious, and out-wore the Night,
For Lovers Hours are long, tho ſeeming ſhort:
If pleas'd themſelves, others they think delight
In ſuch-like Circumſtance, with ſuch-like Sport.
Their copious Stories, oftentimes begun,
End without Audience, and are never done.

For who hath ſhe to ſpend the Night withal,
But idle Sounds, reſembling Paraſites?
Like ſhrill-tongu'd Tapſters anſwering every Call,
Soothing the Humour of fantaſtic Wits.
She ſaid, 'tis ſo: They anſwer all, 'tis ſo,
And would ſay after her, if ſhe ſaid no.

Loe! here the gentle Lark, weary of Reſt,
From his moiſt Cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the Morning, from whoſe Silver Breaſt
The Sun ariſeth in his Majeſty:
Who doth the World ſo glorioufly behold,
The Cedar-Tops and Hills ſeem burniſh'd Gold.

Venus ſalutes him with this fair Good-morrow:
O! thou clear God, and Patron of all Light!
From whom each Lamp, and ſhining Star doth borrow
The beauteous Influence, that makes him bright:
There lives a Son, that ſuck'd an earthly Mother,
May lend thee Light, as thou doſt lend to other.

This ſaid, ſhe haſteth to a Myrtle Grove,
Muſing the Morning is ſo much o'er-worn;
And yet ſhe hears no Tidings of her Love:
She hearkens for his Hounds, and for his Horn.
Anon ſhe hears them chaunt it luſtily,
And all in haſte ſhe coaſteth to the Cry.

And as ſhe runs, the Buſhes in the way,
Some catch her by the Neck, ſome kiſs her Face,
Some twine about her Thigh to make her ſtay;
She wildly breaketh from their ſtrict Embrace,
Like a milch Doe, whoſe ſwelling Dugs do ake,
Haſting to feed her Fawn, hid in ſome Brake.

By this, ſhe hears the Hounds are at a Bay,
Whereat ſhe ſtarts, like one that ſpies an Adder,
Wreath'd up in fatal Folds, juſt in his way,
The Fear whereof doth make him ſhake and ſhudder:
E'en ſo the timorous Yelping of the Hounds,
Appalls her Senſes, and her Sp'rits confounds.

For now ſhe knows it is no gentle Chaſe,
But the blunt Boar, rough Bear, or Lion proud;
Becauſe the Cry remaineth in one Place,
Where fearfully the Dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their Enemy to be ſo curſt,
They all ſtrain Curt'ſy, who ſhall cope him firſt.

This diſmal Cry rings ſadly in her Ear,
Thro which it enters, to ſurprize her Heart;
Who overcome by Doubt, and bloodleſs Fear,
With cold pale Weakneſs numbs each feeling Part:
Like Soldiers, when their Captain once doth yield,
They baſely fly, and dare not ſtay the Field.

Thus

Thus ſtands ſhe in a trembling Extaſy,
Till cheering up her Senſes ſore diſmaid,
She tells them 'tis a cauſleſs Fantaſy,
And childiſh Error, that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, wills them fear no more:
And with that Word, ſhe ſpy'd the hunted Boar.

Whoſe frothy Mouth bepainted all with red,
Like Milk and Blood being mingled both together,
A ſecond Fear thro all her Sinews ſpread,
Which madly hurries her ſhe knows not whither.
This way ſhe runs, and now ſhe will no further,
But back retires, to rate the Boar for Murder.

A thouſand Spleens bear her a thouſand ways,
She treads the Paths that ſhe untreads again;
Her more than Haſte is marred with Delays:
Like the Proceedings of a drunken Brain,
Full of Reſpect, yet not at all reſpecting;
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennel'd in a Brake ſhe finds an Hound,
And asks the weary Caitiff for his Maſter;
And there another licking of his Wound,
'Gainſt venom'd Sores the only ſovereign Plaiſter:
And here ſhe meets another ſadly ſcolding,
To whom ſhe ſpeaks, and he replies with howling.

When he had ceas'd his ill-reſounding Noiſe,
Another flap-mouth'd Mourner black and grim,
Againſt the Welkin vollies out his Voice;
Another, and another, anſwer him,
Clapping their proud Tails to the Ground below,
Shaking their ſcratcht Ears, bleeding as they go.

Look! how the World's poor People are amaz'd
At Apparitions, Signs, and Prodigies;
Whereon with fearful Eyes they long have gaz'd,
Infuſing them with dreadful Prophecies:
So ſhe, at theſe ſad Signs, draws up her Breath,
And ſighing it again, exclaims on Death.

Hard-favour'd Tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful Divorce of Love (thus chides ſhe Death)
Grim-grinning Ghoſt, Earth's Worm, what doſt thou mean?
To ſtifle Beauty, and to ſteal his Breath?
Who when he liv'd, his Breath and Beauty ſet
Gloſs on the Roſe, Smell to the Violet.

If he be dead, O no! it cannot be
Seeing his Beauty, thou ſhouldſt ſtrike at it.
O! yes, it may; thou haſt no Eyes to ſee,
But hatefully at random doſt thou hit.
Thy Mark is feeble Age; but thy falſe Dart
Miſtakes that Aim, and cleaves an Infant's Heart.

Hadſt thou but bid beware, then he had ſpoke,
And hearing him, thy Power had loſt his Power.
The Deſtinies will curſe thee for this Stroke,
They bid thee crop a Weed, thou pluck'ſt a Flower:
Love's golden Arrow at him ſhould have fled,
And not Death's Ebon-Dart to ſtrike him dead.

Doſt thou drink Tears, that thou provok'ſt ſuch weeping?
What may a heavy Groan advantage thee?
Why haſt thou caſt into eternal ſleeping
Thoſe Eyes, that taught all other Eyes to ſee?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal Vigour,
Since her beſt Work is ruin'd with thy Rigour.

Here overcome, as One full of Deſpair,
She veil'd her Eye-lids, which like Sluices ſtop'd
The cryſtal Tide, that from her two Cheeks fair
In the ſweet Channel of her Boſom drop'd.
But thro the Flood-Gates breaks the ſilver Rain,
And with his ſtrong Courſe opens them again.

O! how her Eyes and Tears did lend, and borrow!
Her Eyes ſeen in her Tears, Tears in her Eye;
Both Cryſtals, where they view'd each other's Sorrow:
Sorrow, that friendly Sighs ſought ſtill to dry.
But like a ſtormy Day, now Wind, now Rain;
Sighs dry her Cheeks, Tears make them wet again.

Variable Paſſions throng her conſtant Woe,
As ſtriving which ſhould beſt become her Grief:
All entertain'd, each Paſſion labours ſo,
That every preſent Sorrow ſeemeth Chief.
But none is beſt, then join they all together,
Like many Clouds conſulting for foul Weather.

By this, far off ſhe hears ſome Huntſman hollow:
A Nurſe's Song ne'er pleas'd her Babe ſo well.
The dire Imagination ſhe did follow,
This Sound of Hope doth labour to expell:
For now reviving Joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her, it is Adonis' Voice.

Whereat her Tears began to turn their Tide,
Being priſon'd in her Eye, like Pearls in Glaſs:
Yet ſometime falls an Orient Drop beſide,
Which her Cheek melts, as ſcorning it ſhould paſs
To waſh the foul Face of the ſluttiſh Ground,
Who is but drunken, when ſhe ſeemeth drown'd.

O hard-

O hard-believing Love! how ſtrange it ſeems
Not to believe, and yet too Credulous!
Thy Weal, and Woe are both of them Extremes,
Deſpair and Hope make thee ridiculous!
The one doth flatter thee, in Thoughts unlikely,
With likely Thoughts, the other kills thee quickly.

Now ſhe unweaves the Web that ſhe had wrought,
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame:
It was not ſhe that call'd him all to nought,
Now ſhe adds Honour to his hateful Name:
She 'cleeps him King of Graves, and Grave for Kings,
Imperial Supreme of Mortal things.

No, no, (quoth ſhe) ſweet Death! I did but jeſt;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of Fear,
When as I met the Boar that bloody Beaſt,
Which knows no Pity, but is ſtill ſevere.
Then, gentle Shadow! (Truth I muſt confeſs)
I rail'd on thee, fearing my Love's Deceaſe.

'Tis not my Fault: the Boar provok'd my Tongue:
Be wreak'd on him (inviſible Commander!)
'Tis he, foul Creature, that hath done thee Wrong,
I did but act, he's Author of thy Slander.
Grief hath two Tongues, and never Woman yet
Cou'd rule them both without Ten Women's Wit.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her raſh Suſpect ſhe doth extenuate;
And that his Beauty may the better thrive,
With Death ſhe humbly doth inſinuate:
Tells him of Trophies, Statues, Tombs, and Stories,
His Victories, his Triumphs, and his Glories.

O Jove!

O Jove! quoth ſhe, how much a Fool was I,
To be of ſuch a weak and ſilly Mind?
To wail his Death, who lives, and muſt not die,
Till mutual Overthrow of mortal Kind!
For he being dead, with him is Beauty ſlain,
And Beauty dead, black Chaos comes again.

Fye! fye! fond Love, thou art ſo full of Fear,
As one with Treaſure laden, hem'd with Thieves:
Trifles (unwitneſſed with Eye, or Ear)
Thy Coward Heart, with falſe bethinking grieves.
Even at this word ſhe hears a merry Horn,
Whereat ſhe leaps, that was but late forlorn.

As Faulcon to the Lure, away She flies:
The Graſs ſtoops not, ſhe treads on it ſo light,
And in her haſte unfortunately ſpies
The foul Boar's Conqueſt on her fair Delight.
Which ſeen, her Eyes as murder'd with the View,
Like Stars aſham'd of Day, themſelves withdrew.

Or as the Snail, whoſe tender Horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his ſhelly Cave with Pain,
And there, all ſmother'd up, in Shade doth ſit,
Long after fearing, to creep forth again:
So at his bloody View her Eyes are fled,
Into the deep dark Cabins of her Head.

Where they reſign'd their Office and their Light
To the diſpoſing of her troubled Brain:
Who bids them ſtill conſort with ugly Night,
And never wound the Heart with Looks again:
Who like a King perplexed in his Throne,
By their Suggeſtions gives a deadly Groan.

Whereat each Tributary Subject quakes,
As when the Wind imprison'd in the Ground,
Struggling for Passage, Earth's Foundation shakes,
Which with cold Terrors doth Mens Minds confound,
This Mutiny each Part doth so surprize,
That from their dark Beds once more leap her Eyes.

And, being open'd threw unwilling Sight
Upon the wide Wound, that the Boar had trench'd
In his soft Flank; whose wonted Lilly white
With purple Tears, that his Wound wept, was drench'd.
No Flower was nigh, no Grass, Herb, Leaf, or Weed,
But stole his Blood, and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn Sympathy poor Venus noteth,
Over one Shoulder doth she hang her Head;
Dumbly she passions, frantickly she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead.
Her Voice is stop'd, her Joints forget to bow,
Her Eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his Hurt she looks so stedfastly,
That her Sight dazling, makes the Wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangling Eye,
That makes more Gashes where no Breach should be:
His Face seems twain, each several Limb is doubled,
For oft the Eye mistakes, the Brain being troubled.

My Tongue cannot express my Grief for one;
And yet (quoth she) behold two Adons dead!
My Sighs are blown away, my salt Tears gone,
Mine Eyes are turn'd to Fire, my Heart to Lead:
Heavy Heart's-Lead melt at mine Eyes as Fire,
So shall I die by Drops of hot Desire.

Alas!

Alas! poor World, what Treaſure haſt thou loſt!
What Face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
Whoſe Tongue is Muſick now? what canſt thou boaſt
Of things long ſince, or any thing enſuing?
The Flowers are ſweet, their Colours freſh and trim,
But true ſweet Beauty liv'd, and dy'd in him.

Bonnet, or Veil, henceforth no Creature wear;
Nor Sun, nor Wind will ever ſtrive to kiſs you:
Having no Fair to loſe, you need not fear;
The Sun doth ſcorn you, and the Wind doth hiſs you.
But when Adonis liv'd, Sun and ſharp Air
Lurk'd like two Thieves, to rob him of his Fair.

And therefore wou'd he put his Bonnet on,
Under whoſe Brim the gaudy Sun wou'd peep;
The Wind wou'd blow it off, and being gone
Play with his Locks, then wou'd Adonis weep:
And ſtrait in Pity of his tender Years,
They both wou'd ſtrive who firſt ſhou'd dry his Tears.

To ſee his Face the Lion walks along
Behind ſome Hedge, becauſe he wou'd not fear him;
To recreate himſelf when he hath ſung,
The Tyger wou'd be tame, and gently hear him:
If he had ſpoke, the Wolf wou'd leave his Prey,
And never fright the ſilly Lamb that Day.

When he beheld his Shadow in a Brook,
There Fiſhes ſpread on it their Golden Gills:
When he was by, the Birds ſuch Pleaſure took,
That ſome would ſing, ſome other in their Bills
Would bring him Mulberries, and ripe red Cherries;
He fed them with his Sight, they him with Berries,

But this foul, grim, and urchin-ſnouted Boar,
Whoſe downward Eye ſtill looketh for a Grave,
Ne'er ſaw the beauteous Livery that he wore;
Witneſs the Entertainment that he gave.
If he did ſee his Face, why then I know,
He thought to kiſs him, and hath kill'd him ſo.

'Tis true, true, true, thus was Adonis ſlain,
He ran upon the Boar with his ſharp Spear,
Who wou'd not whet his Teeth at him again,
But by a Kiſs thought to perſuade him there:
And nouſling in his Flank, the loving Swine
Sheath'd unaware his Tusk in his ſoft Groin.

Had I been tooth'd like him, I muſt confeſs,
With kiſſing him, I ſhou'd have kill'd him firſt.
But he is dead, and never did he bleſs
My Mouth with his; the more am I accurs'd.
With this ſhe falleth in the Place ſhe ſtood,
And ſtains her Face with his congealed Blood.

She looks upon his Lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the Hand, and that is cold;
She whiſpers in his Ear a heavy Tale,
As if he heard the woful Words ſhe told:
She lifts the Coffer-lids that cloſe his Eyes,
Where, lo! two Lamps burnt out in Darkneſs lies.

Two Glaſſes, where her ſelf her ſelf beheld
A thouſand times, and now no more reflect;
Their Virtue loſt, wherein they late excel'd,
And every Beauty robb'd of his Effect.
Wonder of time! (quoth ſhe) this is my Spight,
That, you being dead, the Day ſhou'd yet be light.

Since

Since thou art dead, lo! here I propheſy,
Sorrow, on Love, hereafter ſhall attend;
It ſhall be waited on with Jealouſy,
Find ſweet Beginning, but unſavoury End,
Ne'er ſettled equally too high, or low;
That all Love's Pleaſures ſhall not match his Woe.

It ſhall be fickle, falſe, and full of Fraud,
And ſhall be blaſted in a breathing-while,
The Bottom Poiſon, and the Top o'er-ſtraw'd
With Sweets, that ſhall the ſharpeſt Sight beguile.
The ſtrongeſt Body ſhall it make moſt weak,
Strike the Wiſe dumb, and teach the Fool to ſpeak.

It ſhall be ſparing, and too full of Riot,
Teaching decrepit Age to tread the Meaſures;
The ſtaring Ruffian ſhall it keep in Quiet,
Pluck down the Rich, inrich the Poor with Treaſures;
It ſhall be raging mad, and ſilly mild,
Make the Young Old, the Old become a Child.

It ſhall ſuſpect, where is no Cauſe of Fear;
It ſhall not fear, where it ſhould moſt miſtruſt;
It ſhall be merciful, and too ſevere,
And moſt deceiving when it ſeems moſt juſt:
Perverſe it ſhall be, when it ſeems moſt toward,
Put Fear to Valour, Courage to the Coward.

It ſhall be the Cauſe of War and dire Events,
And ſet Diſſention 'twixt the Son and Sire;
Subject and ſervile to all Diſcontents,
As dry combuſtious Matter is to Fire.
Sith in his Prime, Death doth my Love deſtroy,
They that love beſt, their Love ſhall not enjoy.

By this, the Boy that by her Side lay kill'd,
Was melted like a Vapour from her Sight,
And in his Blood, that on the Ground lay ſpill'd,
A Purple Flower ſprung up chequer'd with white,
Reſembling well his pale Cheeks, and the Blood,
Which in round Drops upon their Whiteneſs ſtood.

She bows her Head the new-ſprung Flower to ſmell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' Breath:
And ſays, within her Boſom it ſhall dwell,
Since he himſelf is reft from her by Death:
She crops the Stalk, and in the Breach appears
Green dropping Sap, which ſhe compares to Tears.

Poor Flower! (quoth ſhe) this was thy Father's Guiſe,
(Sweet Iſſue of a more ſweet-ſmelling Sire)
For every little Grief to wet his Eyes,
To grow unto himſelf was his Deſire,
And ſo 'tis thine; but know it is as good
To wither in my Breaſt, as in his Blood.

Here was thy Father's Bed, here is my Breaſt,
Thou art the next of Blood, and 'tis thy Right;
Low in this hollow Cradle take thy Reſt,
My throbbing Heart ſhall rock thee Day and Night:
There ſhall not be one Minute of an Hour,
Wherein I will not kiſs my ſweet Love's Flower.

Thus weary of the World, away ſhe hies,
And yokes her ſilver Doves, by whoſe ſwift Aid,
Their Miſtreſs mounted, thro the empty Skies
In her light Chariot quickly is convey'd;
Holding their Courſe to Paphos, where their Queen
Means to immure her ſelf, and not be ſeen.

TARQUIN

AND

LUCRECE.

To the Right Honourable

Henry Wriothesly,

Earl of SOUTHAMPTON,

AND

Baron of TICHFIELD.

Right Honourable,

THE Love I dedicate to your Lordship, is without end: whereof this Pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous Moiety. The Warrant I have of your Honourable Disposition, not the Worth of my untutor'd untutor'd Lines, makes it aſſur'd of Acceptance. What I have done is yours, what I have to do is yours, being part in all I have devoted yours. Were my Worth greater, my Duty ſhould ſhew greater: mean time, as it is, it is bound to your Lordſhip: To whom I wiſh long Life, ſtill lengthen'd with all Happineſs.

Your Lordſhip's in all Duty,

WILL. SHAKESPEAR.

THE

ARGUMENT.

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS (for his exceſſive Pride ſurnam'd Superbus) after he had caus'd his Father-in-Law, Servius Tullius to be cruelly murder'd, and contrary to the Roman Laws and Cuſtoms, not requiring or ſtaying for the People's Suffrages, had poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Kingdom; went, accompany'd with his Sons, and other Noblemen of Rome, to beſiege Ardea. During which Siege, the principal Men of the Army meeting one Evening at the Tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the King's Son, in their Diſcourſes after Supper, every one commended the Virtues of his own Wife; among whom Colatinus extoll'd the incomparable Chaſtity of his Wife Lucrece. In that pleaſant Humour they all poſted to Rome; and intending by their ſecret and ſudden Arrival, to make Trial of that which every one had before avouch'd, only Colatinus finds his Wife (tho it were late in the Night) ſpinning amongſt her Maids, the other Ladies were found all Dancing and Revelling, or in ſeveral Diſports. Whereupon the Noblemen yielded Colatinus the Victory, and his Wife the Fame. At that time, Sextus Tarquinius being inflam'd with Lucrece's Beauty, yet ſmothering his Paſſion for the preſent, departed with the reſt back to the Camp; from whence he ſhortly after privily withdrew himſelf, and was (according to his State) Royally entertain'd, and lodg'd by Lucrece at Colatium. The ſame Night, he treacherouſly ſtealing into her Chamber, violently raviſh'd her; and early in the Morning ſpeeded away. Lucrece, in this lamentable Plight, haſtily diſpatcheth Meſſengers, one to Rome for her Father, another to the Camp for Colatine. They came, the one accompany'd with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius: and finding Lucrece attir'd in a mourning Habit, demanded the Cauſe of her Sorrow. She firſt taking an Oath of them for her Revenge, reveal'd the Actor, and whole matter of his Dealing, and withal ſuddenly ſtabb'd her ſelf. Which done, with one Conſent, they all vow'd to root out the whole hated Family of the Tarquins: And bearing the dead Body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the People with the Doer, and Manner of the vile Deed; with a bitter Invective againſt the Tyranny of the King; wherewith the People were ſo mov'd, that with one Conſent, and a general Acclamation, that the Tarquins were all Exil'd, and the State-Government chang'd, from Kings, to Conſuls.

TARQUIN

TARQUIN and LUCRECE.

FROM the beſieg'd Ardea all in Poſt,
Born by the truſtleſs Wings of falſe Deſire,
Luſt-breathing Tarquin leaves the Roman Hoſt,
And to Colatium bears the lightleſs Fire,
Which in pale Embers hid, lurks to aſpire,
And girdle with imbracing Flames, the Waſte
Of Colatine's fair Love, Lucrece the chaſte.

Haply that Name of Chaſte unhaply ſet,
This bateleſs Edge on his keen Appetite:
When Colatine unwiſely did not let
To praiſe the clear unmatched Red and White;
Which triumph'd in that Sky of his Delight;
Where mortal Star, as bright as Heaven's Beauties,
With pure Aſpects did him peculiar Duties.

For he the Night before, in Tarquin's Tent,
Unlock'd the Treaſure of his happy State:
What prizeleſs Wealth the Heavens had him lent,
In the Poſſeſſion of his beauteous Mate;
Reckoning his Fortune at ſo high a rate,
That Kings might be eſpouſed to more Fame,
But King, nor Prince to ſuch a peerleſs Dame.

O Happineſs enjoy'd but of a few!
And if poſſeſs'd, as ſoon decay'd and done!
As is the Morning's ſilver melting Dew,
Againſt the golden Splendor of the Sun:
A Date expir'd and cancel'd e'er begun.
Honour and Beauty in the Owner's Arms,
Are weakly fortreſt from a World of Harms.

Beauty it ſelf doth of it ſelf perſuade
The Eyes of Men without an Orator;
What needed then Apologies be made,
To ſet forth that which is ſo ſingular?
Or why is Colatine the Publiſher
Of that rich Jewel he ſhould keep unknown
From thieviſh Cares, becauſe it is his own?

Perchance his Boaſt of Lucrece' Sov'reignty
Suggeſted this proud Iſſue of a King;
For by our Ears our Hearts oft tainted be.
Perchance, that Envy of ſo rich a thing
Braving compare, diſdainfully did ſting
His high-pitcht Thoughts, that meaner Men ſhould vant
The Golden Hap, which their Superiors want.

But ſome untimely Thought did inſtigate
His all too timeleſs ſpeed, if none of thoſe.
His Honour, his Affairs, his Friends, his State,
Neglected all, with ſwift Intent he goes
To quench the Coal, which in his Liver glows.

O raſh

O! raſh falſe Heat wrapt in repentant Cold!
Thy haſty Spring ſtill blaſts, and ne'er grows old.

When at Colatium this falſe Lord arriv'd,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman Dame,
Within whoſe Face, Beauty, and Virtue ſtriv'd,
Which of them both ſhould underprop her Fame.
When Virtue brag'd, Beauty would bluſh for Shame;
When Beauty boaſted Bluſhes, in deſpight
Virtue would ſtain that o'er with ſilver White.

But Beauty, in that White intituled,
From Venus Doves, doth challenge that fair Field;
Then Virtue claims from Beauty Beauty's Red,
Which Virtue gave the golden Age to guild
Her ſilver Cheeks, and call'd it then her Shield;
Teaching them thus to uſe it in the Fight,
When Shame aſſail'd, the Red ſhould fence the White.

This Heraldry in Lucrece' Face was ſeen,
Argu'd by Beauty's Red, and Virtue's White;
Of either's Colour was the other Queen,
Proving from World's Minority their Right;
Yet their Ambition makes them ſtill to fight:
The Sov'reignty of either being ſo great,
That oft they interchange each other's Seat.

This ſilent War of Lillies and of Roſes,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair Face's Field,
In their pure Ranks his Traitor Eye incloſes,
Where, leſt between them both it ſhould be kill'd,
The Coward Captive vanquiſhed doth yield
To thoſe two Armies, that would let him go,
Rather than triumph o're ſo falſe a Foe.

Now

Now thinks he, that her Husband's ſhallow Tongue,
The niggard Prodigal, that praiſ'd her ſo,
In that high Task hath done her Beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren Skill to ſhow.
Therefore that Praiſe, which Colatine doth owe,
Inchanted Tarquin anſwers with Surmiſe,
In ſilent Wonder of ſtill gazing Eyes.

This earthly Saint, adored by this Devil,
Little ſuſpected the falſe Worſhipper.
'For Thoughts unſtain'd do ſeldom dream of Evil,
'Birds never limb'd, no ſecret Buſhes fear:
So guiltleſs ſhe ſecurely gives good Chear,
And reverend Welcome to her Princely Gueſt,
Whoſe inward Ill no outward Harm expreſt.

For that he colour'd with his high Eſtate,
Hiding baſe Sin in Pleats of Majeſty,
That nothing in him ſeem'd inordinate,
Save ſometime too much Wonder of his Eye:
Which having all, all could not ſatisfy;
But poorly rich ſo wanteth in his Store,
That cloy'd with much, he pineth ſtill for more.

But ſhe that never cop'd with ſtranger-Eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling Looks;
Nor read the ſubtle ſhining Secreſies
Writ in the glaſſy Margents of ſuch Books.
She touch'd no unknown Baits, nor fear'd no Hooks;
Nor could ſhe moralize his wanton Sight
More than his Eyes were open'd to the Light.

He ſtories to her Ears her Husband's Fame,
Won in the Fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with Praiſes Colatine's high Name,
Made glorious by his manly Chivalry,
With bruiſed Arms and Wreaths of Victory.

Her

Her Joy with heav'd-up Hand ſhe doth expreſs,
And wordleſs, ſo greets Heav'n for his Succeſs.

Far from the purpoſe of his coming thither,
He makes Excuſes for his being there;
No cloudy Show of ſtormy bluſtring Weather,
Doth yet in his fair Welkin once appear,
Till ſable Night, ſad Source of Dread and Fear,
Upon the World dim Darkneſs doth diſplay,
And in her vaulty Priſon ſhuts the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his Bed,
Intending Wearineſs with heavy Sprite;
For after Supper long he queſtioned
With modeſt Lucrece, and wore out the Night.
Now leaden Slumber with Life's Strength doth fight,
And every one to Reſt themſelves betake,
Save Thieves, and Cares, and troubled Minds that wake.

As one of which, doth Tarquin lie revolving
The ſundry Dangers of his Will's obtaining,
Yet ever to obtain his Will reſolving,
Tho weak-built Hopes perſuade him to abſtaining;
Deſpair to gain doth traffick oft for gaining:
And when great Treaſure is the Meed propos'd,
Tho Death be adjunct, there's no Death ſuppos'd.

Thoſe that much covet are of Gain ſo fond,
That oft they have not that, which they poſſeſs;
They ſcatter and unlooſe it from their Bond,
And ſo by hoping more, they have but leſs;
Or gaining more, the Profit of Exceſs
Is but to ſurfeit, and ſuch Griefs ſuſtain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor, rich, Gain.

The Aim of all, is but to nurſe the Life
With Honour, Wealth and Eaſe in waining Age:
And in this Aim there is ſuch thwarting Strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage:
As Life for Honour, in fell Battels rage,
Honour for Wealth, and oft that Wealth doth coſt
The Death of all, and alltogether loſt.

So that in venturing all, we leave to be
The things we are, for that which we expect:
And this ambitious foul Infirmity,
In having much, torments us with Defect
Of that we have: ſo then we do neglect
The Thing we have, and, all for want of Wit,
Make ſomething, nothing by augmenting it.

Such Hazard now muſt doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his Honour to obtain his Luſt:
And for himſelf, himſelf he muſt forſake;
Then where is Truth, if there be no Self-Truſt?
When ſhall he think to find a Stranger juſt,
When he himſelf, himſelf confounds, betrays
To ſland'rous Tongues the wretched hateful Lays?

Now ſtole upon the Time the Dead of Night,
When heavy Sleep had clos'd up mortal Eyes;
No comfortable Star did lend his Light,
No Noiſe but Owls, and Wolves Death-boding Cries:
Now ſerves the Seaſon, that they may ſurprize
The ſilly Lambs; pure Thoughts are dead and ſtill,
Whilſt Luſt and Murder wakes to ſtain, and kill.

And now this luſtful Lord leapt from his Bed,
Throwing his Mantle rudely o'er his Arm,
Is madly toſt between Deſire and Dread;
Th' one ſweetly flatters, the other feareth harm:
But honeſt Fear, bewitch'd with Luſt's foul Charm,

Doth

Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brainſick rude Deſire.

His Fauchion on a Flint he ſoftly ſmiteth,
That from the cold Stone Sparks of Fire do fly,
Whereat a waxen Torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which muſt be Load-ſtar to his luſtful Eye,
And to the Flame thus ſpeaks adviſedly;
'As from this cold Flint I enforc'd this Fire,
'So Lucrece muſt I force to my Deſire.

Here pale with Fear, he doth premeditate
The Dangers of his loathſome Enterprize;
And in his inward Mind he doth debate
What following Sorrow may on this ariſe:
Then looking ſcornfully, he doth deſpiſe
His naked Armour of ſtill ſlaughter'd Luſt,
And juſtly thus controuls his Thoughts unjuſt.

'Fair Torch burn out thy Light, and lend it not
'To darken her, whoſe Light excelleth thine:
'And die unhallow'd Thoughts, before you blot
'With your Uncleanneſs, that which is Divine.
'Offer pure Incenſe to ſo pure a Shrine:
'Let fair Humanity abhor the Deed,
'That ſpots and ſtains Love's modeſt ſnow-white Weed.

'O Shame to Knighthood, and to ſhining Arms!
'O foul Diſhonour to my Houſhold's Grave!
'O impious Act, including all foul Harms!
'A martial Man to be ſoft Fancy's Slave!
'True Valour ſtill a true Reſpect ſhould have.
'Then my Digreſſion is ſo vile, ſo baſe,
'That it will live engraven in my Face.

'Yes, tho I die, the Scandal will ſurvive,
'And be an Eye-ſore in my Golden Coat:
'Some loathſome Daſh the Herald will contrive,
'To cipher me how fondly I did dote:
'That my Poſterity ſhamed with the Note,
'Shall curſe my Bones, and hold it for no Sin,
'To wiſh that I their Father had not been.

'What win I, if I gain the thing I ſeek?
'A Dream, a Breath, a Froth of fleeting Joy.
'Who buys a Minute's Mirth, to wail a Week?
'Or ſells Eternity, to get a Toy?
'For one ſweet Grape, who will the Vine deſtroy?
'Or what fond Beggar, but to touch the Crown,
'Would with the Scepter ſtrait be ſtrucken down?

'If Colatinus dream of my Intent,
'Will he not wake, and in a deſperate Rage
'Poſt hither, this vile Purpoſe to prevent?
'This Siege, that hath ingirt his Marriage,
'This Blur to Youth, this Sorrow to the Sage,
'This dying Virtue, this ſurviving Shame,
'Whoſe Crime will bear an ever-during Blame.

'O what Excuſe can my Invention make,
'When thou ſhalt charge me with ſo black a Deed!
'Will not my Tongue be mute, my frail Joints ſhake?
'Mine Eyes forgo their Light, my falſe Heart bleed?
'The Guilt being great, the Fear doth ſtill exceed,
'And extreme Fear can neither fight nor fly,
'But Coward-like with trembling Terror die.

'Had Colatinus kill'd my Son or Sire,
'Or lain in ambuſh to betray my Life;
'Or were he not my dear Friend, this Deſire
'Might have excuſe to work upon his Wife,
'As in Revenge or Quital of ſuch Strife:

'But

'But as he is my Kinſman, my dear Friend,
'The Shame and Fault finds no Excuſe, nor End.

'Shameful it is, if once the Fact be known;
'Hateful it is; there is no Hate in loving.
'I'll beg her Love; but ſhe is not her own:
'The worſt is but Denial, and reproving.
'My Will is ſtrong, paſt Reaſon's weak removing.
'Who fears a Sentence, or an old Man's Saw,
'Shall by a painted Cloth be kept in awe.

Thus (graceleſs) holds he Diſputation,
'Tween frozen Conſcience, and hot-burning Will;
And with good Thoughts makes Diſpenſation,
Urging the worſer Senſe for Vantage ſtill:
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure Effects, and doth ſo far proceed,
That what is vile ſhews like a virtuous Deed.

Quoth he, ſhe took me kindly by the Hand,
And gaz'd for Tidings in my eager Eyes,
Fearing ſome bad News from the warlike Band,
Where her beloved Colatinus lies,
O how her Fear did make her Colour riſe!
Firſt, red as Roſes, that on Lawn we lay,
Then white as Lawn, the Roſes took away.

And now her Hand in my Hand being lock'd,
Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal Fear:
Which ſtrook her ſad, and then it faſter rock'd,
Until her Husband's Welfare ſhe did hear;
Whereat ſhe ſmiled with ſo ſweet a Chear,
That had Narciſſus ſeen her as ſhe ſtood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the Flood.

Why hunt I then for Colour, or Excuſes?
All Orators are dumb, when Beauty pleads.
Poor Wretches have remorſe in poor Abuſes;
Love thrives not in the Heart, that Shadows dreads.
Affection is my Captain, and he leads;
And when his gaudy Banner is diſplay'd,
The Coward fights, and will not be diſmay'd.

Then childiſh Fear avant! Debating die!
Reſpect and Reaſon wait on wrinkled Age!
My Heart ſhall never countermand mine Eye,
Sad Pauſe, and deep Regard beſeems the Sage;
My part is Youth, and beats theſe from the Stage.
Deſire my Pilot is, Beauty my Prize;
Then who fears ſinking where ſuch Treaſure lies?

As Corn o'er-grown by Weeds, ſo heedful Fear
Is almoſt cloak'd by unreſiſted Luſt.
Away he ſteals with open liſt'ning Ear,
Full of foul Hope, and full of fond Miſtruſt:
Both which, as Servitors to the Unjuſt,
So croſs him with their oppoſite Perſuaſion,
That now he vows a League, and now Invaſion.

Within his Thought her heavenly Image ſits,
And in the ſelf-ſame Seat ſits Colatine:
That Eye which looks on her, confounds his Wits;
That Eye which him beholds, as more Divine,
Unto a View ſo falſe will not incline:
But with a pure Appeal ſeeks to the Heart,
Which once corrupted takes the worſer part.

And therein heartens up his ſervile Powers,
Who flatter'd by their Leaders jocund ſhow,
Stuff up his Luſt, as Minutes fill up Hours;
And as their Captain ſo their Pride doth grow,
Paying more ſlaviſh Tribute, than they owe.

By

By reprobate Deſire thus madly led,
The Roman Lord doth march to Lucrece' Bed.

The Locks between her Chamber and his Will,
Each one by him enforc'd, recites his Ward;
But as they open, they all rate his Ill,
Which drives the creeping Thief to ſome Regard:
The Threſhold grates the Door to have him heard;
Night-wandring Weezels ſhreek to ſee him there,
They fright him, yet he ſtill purſues his Fear.

As each unwilling Portal yields him way,
Thro little Vents and Crannies of the Place,
The Wind wars with his Torch to make him ſtay,
And blows the Smoke of it into his Face,
Extinguiſhing his Conduct in this Caſe.
But his hot Heart, which fond Deſire doth ſcorch,
Puffs forth another Wind that fires the Torch.

And being lighted by the Light, he ſpies
Lucrecia's Glove, wherein the Needle ſticks;
He takes it from the Ruſhes where it lies,
And griping it, the Needle his Finger pricks:
As who ſhould ſay, this Glove to wanton Tricks
Is not inur'd; return again in haſte,
Thou ſeeſt our Miſtreſs' Ornaments are chaſte.

But all theſe poor Forbiddings could not ſtay him,
He in the worſt Senſe conſtrues their Denial:
The Doors, the Wind, the Glove, that did delay him,
He takes for accidental Things of Trial,
Or as thoſe Bars, which ſtop the hourly Dial;
Which with a lingring Stay his Courſe doth let,
Till every Minute pays the Hour his Debt.

So,

So, ſo, quoth he, theſe Lets attend the Time,
Like little Froſts, that ſometime threat the Spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the Prime,
And give the ſneaped Birds more cauſe to ſing,
Pain pays the Income of each precious thing;
Huge Rocks, high Winds, ſtrong Pirates, Shelves and Sands,
The Merchant fears, e'er rich at home he lands.

Now is he come unto the Chamber-Door,
That ſhuts him from the Heaven of his Thought,
Which with a yielding Latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the bleſſed thing he ſought.
So from himſelf Impiety hath wrought;
That for his Prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the Heavens ſhould countenance his Sin.

But in the midſt of his unfruitful Prayer,
Having ſollicited th' Eternal Power,
That his foul Thoughts might compaſs his fair Fair,
And they would ſtand auſpicious to the Hour;
Even there he ſtarts, quoth he, I muſt deflour!
The Powers to whom I pray, abhor this Fact,
How can they then aſſiſt me in the Act?

Then Love and Fortune be my Gods, my Guide,
My Will is back'd with Reſolution:
Thoughts are but Dreams till their Effects be try'd,
Black Sin is cleared with Abſolution;
Againſt Love's Fire, Fear's Froſt hath Diſſolution.
The Eye of Heaven is out, and miſty Night
Covers the Shame, that follows ſweet Delight.

This ſaid, the guilty Hand pluck'd up the Latch,
And with his Knee the Door he opens wide;
The Dove ſleeps faſt, that this Night-Owl will catch:
Thus Treaſon works e'er Traitors be eſpy'd.
Who ſees the lurking Serpent, ſteps aſide;

But she found-sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the Mercy of his mortal Sting.

Into the Chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained Bed:
The Curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy Eye-balls in his Head,
By their high Treason in his Heart misled;
Which gives the Watch-word to his Hand too soon,
To draw the Cloud that hides the silver Moon.

Look as the fair, and fiery-pointed Sun,
Rushing from forth a Cloud, bereaves our Sight;
Even so the Curtain drawn, his Eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater Light:
Whether it is, that she reflects so bright,
That dazleth them, or else some Shame suppos'd;
But blind they are, and keep themselves inclos'd.

O had they in that darksome Prison died!
Then had they seen the Period of their Ill;
Then Colatine again by Lucrece' Side,
In his clear Bed might have reposed still.
But they must ope, this blessed League to kill;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece, to their Sight
Must sell her Joy, her Life, her World's Delight.

Her lilly Hand her rosy Cheeks lies under,
Cozening the Pillow of a lawful Kiss;
Which therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either Side to want his Bliss:
Between whose Hills, her Head intombed is;
Where like a virtuous Monument she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd Eyes.

Without the Bed her other fair Hand was,
On the green Coverlet, whose perfect White
Shew'd like an April Daizy on the Grass,
With pearly Sweat, resembling Dew of Night.
Her Eyes like Marigolds had sheath'd their Light,
And canopy'd in Darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the Day.

Her Hair like golden Threds plaid with her Breath;
O modest Wantons! wanton Modesty!
Showing Life's Triumph in the Map of Death,
And Death's dim Look in Life's Mortality.
Each in her Sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no Strife,
But that Life liv'd in Death, and Death in Life.

Her Breasts like Ivory Globes circled with Blue,
A pair of maiden Worlds unconquered,
Save of their Lord, no bearing Yoke they knew,
And him by Oath they truly honoured.
These Worlds in Tarquin, new Ambition bred,
Who like a foul Usurper went about,
From this fair Throne to have the Owner out.

What could he see, but mightily he noted?
What did he note, but strongly he desir'd?
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his Will his wilful Eye he tir'd.
With more than Admiration he admir'd
Her Azure Veins, her Alabaster Skin,
Her Coral Lips, her Snow-white dimpled Chin.

As the grim Lion fawneth o'er his Prey,
Sharp Hunger by the Conquest satisfy'd:
So o'er this sleeping Soul doth Tarquin stay,
His Rage of Lust by gazing qualify'd,
Slack'd, not suppress; for standing by her Side,

His

His Eye which late this Mutiny reſtrains,
Unto a greater Uproar tempts his Veins.

And they, like ſtraggling Slaves for Pillage fighting,
Obdurate Vaſſals, fell Exploits effecting,
In bloody Death and Raviſhment delighting,
Nor Childrens Tears, nor Mothers Groans reſpecting,
Swell in their Pride, the Onſet ſtill expecting.
Anon his beating Heart alarum ſtriking,
Gives the hot Charge, and bids them do their Liking.

His drumming Heart chears up his burning Eye;
His Eye commends the leading to his Hand;
His Hand, as proud of ſuch a Dignity,
Smoaking with Pride, march'd on to make his Stand
On her bare Breaſts, the Heart of all her Land;
Whoſe Ranks of blue Veins, as his Hand did ſcale,
Left their round Turrets deſtitute and pale.

They muſt'ring to the quiet Cabinet,
Where their dear Governeſs and Lady lies,
Do tell her ſhe is dreadfully beſet,
And fright her with Confuſion of their Cries.
She much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up Eyes;
Who peeping forth, this Tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming Torch dim'd and controul'd.

Imagine her as one in dead of Night,
Forth from dull Sleep by dreadful Fancy waking,
That thinks ſhe hath beheld ſome ghaſtly Sprite,
Whoſe grim Aſpect ſets every Joint a ſhaking,
What Terror 'tis? but ſhe in worſer taking,
From Sleep diſturbed, heedfully doth view
The Sight, which makes ſuppoſed Terror true.

Wrapt and confounded in a thouſand Fears,
Like to a new-kill'd Bird ſhe trembling lies:
She dares not look, yet winking there appear
Quick-ſhifting Anticks ugly in her Eyes,
Such Shadows are the weak Brain's Forgeries;
Who angry that the Eyes fly from their Lights,
In Darkneſs daunts them with more dreadful Sights.

His Hand, that yet remains upon her Breaſt,
(Rude Ram! to batter ſuch an Ivory Wall)
May feel her Heart (poor Citizen!) diſtreſt,
Wounding it ſelf to Death, riſe up, and fall,
Beating her Bulk, that his Hand ſhakes withal.
This moves in him more Rage, and leſſer Pity,
To make the Breach, and enter this ſweet City.

Firſt like a Trumpet doth his Tongue begin
To ſound a Parley to his heartleſs Foe,
Who o'er the white Sheet peers her whiter Chin,
The Reaſon of this Alaram to know,
Which he by dumb Demeanor ſeeks to ſhow;
But ſhe with vehement Prayers urgeth ſtill,
Under what Colour he commits this Ill.

Thus he replies: The Colour in thy Face,
That ev'n for Anger makes the Lilly pale,
And the Red-Roſe bluſh at her own Diſgrace,
Shall plead for me, and tell my loving Tale.
Under that Colour am I come to ſcale
Thy never-conquer'd Fort, the Fault is thine,
For thoſe thine Eyes betray thee unto mine.

Thus I foreſtal thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy Beauty hath inſnar'd thee to this Night,
Where thou with Patience muſt my Will abide;
My Will, that marks thee for my Earth's Delight,
Which I to conquer ſought with all my Might.

But as Reproof and Reaſon beat it dead,
By thy bright Beauty it was newly bred.

I ſee what Croſſes my Attempts will bring;
I know what Thorns the growing Roſe defends;
I think the Honey guarded with a Sting.
All this before-hand Counſel comprehends;
But Will is deaf, and hears no heedful Friends.
Only he hath an Eye to gaze on Beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainſt Law, or Duty.

I have debated even in my Soul,
What Wrong, what Shame, what Sorrow I ſhall breed;
But nothing can Affection's Courſe controul,
Or ſtop the headlong Fury of his Speed.
I know repentant Tears inſue the Deed,
Reproach, Diſdain, and deadly Enmity;
Yet ſtrive I to imbrace mine Infamy,

This ſaid, he ſhakes aloft his Roman Blade,
Which like a Faulcon tow'ring in the Skies,
Coucheth the Fowl below with his Wings Shade,
Whoſe crooked Beak threats, if he mount he dies:
So under his inſulting Fauchion lies
Harmleſs Lucretia, marking what he tells,
With trembling Fear, as Fowls hear Faulcon's Bells.

Lucrece, quoth he, this Night I muſt enjoy thee,
If thou deny, then Force muſt work my way;
For in thy Bed I purpoſe to deſtroy thee.
That done, ſome worthleſs Slave of thine I'll ſlay,
To kill thine Honour with thy Life's Decay;
And in thy dead Arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I ſlew him, ſeeing thee imbrace him.

So thy ſurviving Husband ſhall remain
The ſcornful Mark of every open Eye;
Thy Kinſmen hang their Heads at this Diſdain,
Thy Iſſue blur'd with nameleſs Baſtardy;
And thou the Author of their Obloquy,
  Shalt have thy Treſpaſs cited up in Rhimes,
  And ſung by Children in ſucceeding Times.

But if thou yield, I reſt thy ſecret Friend,
The Fault unknown is, as a Thought unacted;
A little Harm done to a great good End
For lawful Policy remains enacted.
The poiſonous Simple ſometimes is compacted
  In pureſt Compounds; being ſo apply'd,
  His Venom in effect is purify'd.

Then for thy Husband, and thy Children's ſake,
Tender my Suit, bequeath not to their Lot
The Shame, that from them no Device can take,
The Blemiſh that will never be forgot,
Worſe than a ſlaviſh Wipe, or birth-hour's Blot:
  For Marks deſcrib'd in Mens Nativity,
  Are Nature's Faults, not their own Infamy.

Here with a Cockatrice dead-killing Eye,
He rouſeth up himſelf, and makes a Pauſe;
While ſhe, the Picture of true Piety,
Like a white Hind beneath the Gripe's ſharp Claws,
Pleads in a Wilderneſs, where are no Laws,
  To the rough Beaſt, that knows no gentle Right,
  Nor ought obeys but his foul Appetite.

As when a black-fac'd Cloud the World does threat,
In his dim Miſt th' aſpiring Mountain hiding,
From Earth's dark Womb ſome gentle Guſt does get,
Which blow theſe pitchy Vapours from their biding,
Hindring their preſent Fall by this dividing.

So

So his unhallow'd haſte her Words delays,
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Like foul night-waking Cat he doth but dally,
While in his hold-faſt Foot the weak Mouſe panteth;
Her ſad Behaviour feeds his Vulture Folly,
A ſwallowing Gulf, that e'en in Plenty wanteth.
His Ear her Prayers admits, but his Heart granteth
No penetrable Entrance to her plaining;
Tears harden Luſt, tho Marble wears with raining.

Her Pity-pleading Eyes are ſadly fix'd
In the remorſeleſs Wrinkles of his Face:
Her modeſt Eloquence with Sighs is mix'd,
Which to her Oratory adds more Grace.
She puts the Period often from his Place,
And midſt the Sentence ſo her Accent breaks,
That 'twice ſhe doth begin, e'er once ſhe ſpeaks.

She conjures him, By high Almighty Jove;
By Knighthood, Gentry, and ſweet Friendſhip's Oath;
By her untimely Tears, her Husband's Love;
By holy human Law, and common Troth;
By Heaven and Earth, and all the Power of both:
That to his borrow'd Bed he make retire,
And ſtoop to Honour, not to foul Deſire.

Quoth ſhe, reward not Hoſpitality
With ſuch black Payment as thou haſt pretended;
Mud not the Fountain that gave Drink to thee,
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended:
End thy ill Aim, before thy Shoot be ended.
He is no Wood-man that doth bend his Bow,
To ſtrike a poor unſeaſonable Doe.

My Husband is thy Friend, for his ſake ſpare me;
Thy ſelf art mighty, for thy own ſake leave me;
My ſelf a Weakling do not then inſnare me;
Thou look'ſt not like Deceit, do not deceive me;
My Sighs like Whirlwinds labour hence to heave thee.
If ever Man was mov'd with Woman's Moans,
Be moved with my Tears, my Sighs, my Groans.

All which together, like a troubled Ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatning Heart,
To ſoften it with their continual Motion;
For Stones diſſolv'd to Water do convert.
O! if no harder than a Stone thou art,
Melt at my Tears, and be compaſſionate!
Soft Pity enters at an Iron Gate.

In Tarquin's Likeneſs I did entertain thee,
Haſt thou put on his Shape to do him ſhame?
To all the Hoſt of Heaven I complain me;
Thou wrong'ſt his Honour, wound'ſt his Princely Name:
Thou art not what thou ſeem'ſt; and if the ſame,
Thou ſeem'ſt not what thou art, a God, a King;
For Kings, like Gods, ſhould govern every thing.

How will thy Shame be ſeeded in thine Age,
When thus thy Vices bud before thy Spring?
If in thy Hope thou dar'ſt do ſuch Outrage,
What dar'ſt thou not, when once thou art a King?
O! be remembred, no outrageous thing
From Vaſſal Actors can be wip'd away,
Then Kings Miſdeeds cannot be hid in Clay.

This Deed ſhall make thee only lov'd for Fear,
But happy Monarchs ſtill are fear'd for Love:
With foul Offenders thou perforce muſt bear,
When they in thee the like Offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy Will remove.

For

For Princes are the Glaſs, the School, the Book,
Where Subjects Eyes do learn, do read, do look.

And wilt thou be the School where Luſt ſhall learn?
Muſt he in thee read Lectures of ſuch Shame?
Wilt thou be Glaſs, wherein it ſhall diſcern
Authority for Sin, Warrant for Blame?
To privilege Diſhonour in thy Name,
Thou back'ſt Reproach againſt long-living Laud,
And mak'ſt fair Reputation but a Bawd.

Haſt thou commanded? by Him that gave it thee
From a pure Heart command thy rebel Will:
Draw not thy Swōrd to guard Iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that Brood to kill.
Thy Princely Office how canſt thou fulfil,
When pattern'd by thy Fault, foul Sin may ſay,
He learn'd to ſin, and thou didſt teach the way.

Think but how vile a Spectacle it were,
To view thy preſent Treſpaſs in another:
Mens Faults do ſeldom to themſelves appear,
Their own Tranſgreſſions partially they ſmother:
This Guilt would ſeem death-worthy in thy Brother.
O! how are they wrapt in with Infamies,
That from their own Miſdeeds askaunce their Eyes!

To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up Hands appeal,
Not to ſeducing Luſt's outrageous Fire;
I ſue for exil'd Majeſty's Repeal,
Let him return and flattering Thoughts retire.
His true Reſpect will priſon falſe Deſire,
And wipe the dim Miſt from thy doting Eyne,
That thou ſhalt ſee thy State, and pity mine.

Have done, quoth he, my uncontrouled Tide
Turns not, but ſwells the higher by this Let;
Small Lights are ſoon blown out, huge Fires abide,
And with the Wind in greater Fury fret:
The petty Streams that pay a daily Debt
To their ſalt Sovereign with their freſh falſe haſte,
Add to his Flow, but alter not the Taſte.

Thou art (quoth ſhe) a Sea, a Sovereign King,
And lo! there falls into thy boundleſs Flood
Black Luſt, Diſhonour, Shame, Miſgoverning,
Who ſeek to ſtain the Ocean of thy Blood.
If all theſe petty Ills ſhould change thy Good,
Thy Sea within a puddle Womb is burs'd,
And not the Puddle in thy Sea diſpers'd.

So ſhall theſe Slaves be King, and thou their Slave;
Thou nobly baſe, they baſely dignified;
Thou their fair Life, and they thy fouler Grave;
Thou loathed in thy Shame, they in thy Pride:
The leſſer thing ſhould not the greater hide.
The Cedar ſtoops not to the baſe Shrub's Foot,
But low Shrubs wither at the Cedar's Root.

So lett thy Thoughts low Vaſſals to thy State.------
No more, quoth he, by Heav'n I will not hear thee:
Yield to my Love; if not, enforced Hate,
Inſtead of Love's coy touch, ſhall rudely tear thee:
That done, deſpiteſully I mean to bear thee
Unto the baſe Bed of ſome Raſcal Groom,
To be thy Partner in this ſhameful Doom.

This ſaid, he ſets his Foot upon the Light,
For Light and Luſt are deadly Enemies:
Shame folded up in blind concealing Night,
When moſt unſeen, then moſt doth tyrannize.
The Wolf has ſeiz'd his Prey, the poor Lamb cries,

Till

Till with her own white Fleece her Voice controul'd,
Intombs her Outcry in her Lips ſweet Fold.

For with the nightly Linnen that ſhe wears,
He pens her piteous Clamours in her Head,
Cooling his hot Face in the chaſteſt Tears,
That ever modeſt Eyes with Sorrow ſhed.
O that foul Luſt ſhould ſtain ſo pure a Bed!
The Spots whereof, could Weeping purify,
Her Tears ſhould drop on them perpetually.

But ſhe hath loſt a dearer thing than Life,
And he hath won what he would loſe again;
This forced League doth force a further Strife,
This momentary Joy breeds Months of Pain,
This hot Deſire converts to cold Diſdain.
Pure Chaſtity is rifled of her Store.
And Luſt the Thief far poorer than before.

Look as the full-fed Hound, or gorged Hawk,
Unapt for tender Smell, or ſpeedy Flight,
Make ſlow Purſuit, or alltogether balk
The Prey wherein by Nature they delight:
So ſufeit-taking Tarquin fears this Night;
His Taſte delicious, in Digeſtion ſouring,
Devours his Will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

O! deeper Sin, than bottomleſs Conceit
Can comprehend in ſtill Imagination!
Drunken Deſire muſt vomit his Receit,
E'er he can ſee his own Abomination.
While Luſt is in his Pride, no Exclamation
Can curb his Heat, or rein his raſh Deſire,
Till, like a Jade, Self-will himſelf doth tire.

And then with lank and lean diſcolour'd Cheek,
With heavy Eye, knit Brow, and ſtrengthleſs Pace,
Feeble Deſire all recreant, poor and meek,
Like to a Bankrupt Beggar wails his Caſe:
The Fleſh being proud, Deſire does fight with Grace.
For there it revels, and when that decays,
The guilty Rebel for Remiſſion prays.

So fares it with this fault-full Lord of Rome,
Who this Accompliſhment ſo hotly chas'd;
For now againſt himſelf he ſounds this Doom,
That thro the length of time he ſtands diſgrac'd:
Beſides, his Soul's fair Temple is defac'd;
To whoſe weak Ruins muſter Troops of Cares,
To ask the ſpotted Princeſs how ſhe fares.

She ſays, her Subjects with foul Inſurrection
Have batter'd down her conſecrated Wall,
And by their mortal Fault brought in ſubjection
Her Immortality, and made her thrall
To living Death, and Pain perpetual:
Which in her Preſcience ſhe controuled ſtill,
But her Foreſight could not fore-ſtall their Will.

E'en in this Thought thro the dark Night he ſtealeth,
A Captive Victor, that hath loſt in Gain:
Bearing away the Wound, that nothing healeth,
The Scar that will, deſpite of Cure, remain:
Leaving his Spoil perplex'd in greater Pain.
She bears the Load of Luſt he left behind,
And he the Burden of a guilty Mind.

He like a thieviſh Dog creeps ſadly thence,
She like a weary'd Lamb lies panting there:
He ſcowls and hates himſelf for his Offence,
She deſperate, with her Nails her Fleſh doth tear:
He faintly flies, ſweating with guilty Fear;

She ſtays exclaiming on the direful Night,
He runs and chides his vaniſh'd loath'd Delight.

He thence departs a heavy Convertite;
She there remains a hopeleſs Caſt-away:
He in his ſpeed looks for the Morning-Light;
She prays ſhe never may behold the Day:
For Day (quoth ſhe) Night-Scapes doth open lay;
And my true Eyes have never practis'd how
To cloake Offences with a cunning Brow.

They think not but that every Eye can ſee
The ſame Diſgrace, which they themſelves behold;
And therefore would they ſtill in Darkneſs lie,
To have their unſeen Sin remain untold.
For they their Guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like Water that doth eat in Steel,
Upon their Cheeks what helpleſs Shame they feel.

Here ſhe exclaims againſt Repoſe and Reſt,
And bids her Eyes hereafter ſtill be blind:
She wakes her Heart, by beating on her Breaſt,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer Cheſt to cloſe ſo pure a Mind.
Frantick with Grief, thus breathes ſhe forth her Spight
Againſt the unſeen Secrecy of Night.

O Comfort-killing Night! Image of Hell!
Dim Regiſter! and Notary of Shame!
Black Stage for Tragedies! and Murders fell!
Vaſt Sin-concealing Chaos! Nurſe of Blame!
Blind muffled Bawd! dark Harbour of Defame!
Grim Cave of Death! whiſpering Conſpirator
With cloſe-tongued Treaſon, and the Raviſher!

O hateful,

O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night!
Since thou art guilty of my cureleſs Crime,
Muſter thy Miſts to meet the Eaſtern Light,
Make war againſt proportion'd Courſe of time:
Or if thou wilt permit the Sun to climb
His wonted height, yet e'er he go to bed,
Knit poiſonous Clouds about his golden Head.

With rotten Damps raviſh the Morning Air,
Let their exhal'd unwholeſome Breaths make ſick
The Life of Purity, the ſupreme Fair,
E'er he arrive his weary Noon-tide Prick:
And let thy miſty Vapours march ſo thick,
That in their ſmoaky Ranks his ſmother'd Light
May ſet at Noon, and make perpetual Night.

Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's Child,
The ſilver-ſhining Queen him would diſdain;
Her twinkling Handmaids too (by him defil'd)
Thro Night's black Boſom ſhould not peep again.
So ſhould I have Copartners in my Pain:
And Fellowſhip in Woe doth Woe aſſwage,
As Palmers that make ſhort their Pilgrimage.

Where now? have I no one to bluſh with me?
To croſs their Arms, and hang their Heads with mine;
To mask their Brows, and hide their Infamy.
But I alone, alone muſt ſit and pine;
Seaſoning the Earth with Showers of Silver Brine;
Mingling my Talk with Tears, my Grief with Groans,
Poor waſting Monuments of laſting Moans.

O Night! thou Furnace of foul-recking Smoke!
Let not the jealous Day behold that Face,
Which underneath thy black all-hiding Cloke
Immodeſtly lies martyr'd with Diſgrace.
Keep ſtill Poſſeſſion of thy gloomy Place,

That

That all the Faults, which in thy Reign are made,
May likewiſe be ſepulchred in thy Shade.

Make me not Object to the Tell-tale Day;
The Light ſhall ſhew, character'd in my Brow,
The Story of ſweet Chaſtity's Decay,
The Impious Breach of holy Wedlock's Vow.
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned Books,
Will quote my loathſome Treſpaſs in my Looks.

The Nurſe, to ſtill her Child, will tell my Story,
And fright her crying Babe with Tarquin's Name:
The Orator, to deck his Oratory,
Will couple my Reproach to Tarquin's Shame.
Feaſt-finding Minſtrels, tuning my Defame,
Will tye the Hearers to attend each Line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Colatine.

Let my good Name, that ſenſleſs Reputation,
For Colatine's dear Love be kept unſpotted;
If that be made a Theme for Diſputation,
The Branches of another Root are rotted,
And undeſerv'd Reproach to him allotted,
That is as clear from this Attaint of mine,
As I, e'er this, was pure to Colatine.

O unſeen Shame! inviſible Diſgrace!
O unfelt Sore! creſt-wounding private Scar!
Reproach is ſtampt in Colatinus' Face,
And Tarquin's Eye may read the Mote afar,
How he in Peace is wounded, not in War.
Alas! how many bear ſuch ſhameful Blows,
Which not themſelves, but he that gives them, knows?

If, Colatine, thine Honour lay in me,
From me, by ſtrong Aſſault, it is bereft:
My Honey loſt, and I a Drone-like Bee,
Have no Perfection of my Summer left,
But robb'd and ranſack'd by injurious Theft:
In thy weak Hive a wandring Waſp hath crept,
And ſuck'd the Honey which thy chaſte Bee kept.

Yet am I guilty of thy Honour's Wreck?
Yet for thy Honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been Diſhonour to diſdain him.
Beſides, of Wearineſs he did complain him,
And talk'd of Virtue: O unlook'd for Evil!
When Virtue is profan'd in ſuch a Devil!

Why ſhould the Worm intrude the maiden Bud?
Or hateful Cuckows hatch in Sparrows Neſts?
Or Toads infect fair Founts with venom Mud?
Or Tyrant Folly lurk in gentle Breaſts?
Or Kings be Breakers of their own Beheſts?
But no Perfection is ſo abſolute,
That ſome Impurity doth not pollute.

The aged Man, that coffers up his Gold,
Is plagu'd with Cramps, and Gouts, and painful Fits;
And ſcarce hath Eyes his Treaſure to behold:
But ſtill like pining Tantalus he ſits,
And uſeleſs bans the Harveſt of his Wits.
Having no other Pleaſure of his Gain,
But Torment, that it cannot cure his Pain.

So then he hath it, when he cannot uſe it,
And leaves it to be maſter'd by his Young,
Who in their Pride do preſently abuſe it:
Their Father was too weak, and they too ſtrong,
To hold their curſed bleſſed Fortune long.

The Sweets we wiſh for turn to loathed Sours,
E'en in the Moment, that we call them ours.

Unruly Blaſts wait on the tender Spring;
Unwholeſom Weeds take root with precious Flowers;
The Adder hiſſeth where the ſweet Birds ſing;
What Vertue breeds, Iniquity devours:
We have no good, that we can ſay is ours;
But ill-annexed Opportunity,
Or kills his Life, or elſe his Quality.

O! Opportunity! thy Guilt is great;
'Tis thou, that execut'ſt the Traitor's Treaſon:
Thou ſet'ſt the Wolf where he the Lamb may get;
Whoever plots the Sin, thou point'ſt the Seaſon:
'Tis thou that ſpurn'ſt at Right, at Law, at Reaſon;
And in thy ſhady Cell, where none may ſpy her,
Sits Sin to ſeize the Souls, that wander by her.

Thou mak'ſt the Veſtal violate her Oath;
Thou blow'ſt the Fire when Temperance is thaw'd:
Thou ſmother'ſt Honeſty, thou murder'ſt Troth;
Thou foul Abettor, thou notorious Bawd!
Thou planteſt Scandal, and diſplaceſt Laud:
Thou Raviſher, thou Traitor, thou falſe Thief!
Thy Hony turns to Gall, thy Joy to Grief.

Thy ſecret Pleaſure turns to open Shame;
Thy private Feaſting to a publick Faſt;
Thy ſmothering Titles to a ragged Name;
Thy ſugar'd Tongue to bitter Worm-wood Taſte:
Thy violent Vanities can never laſt.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being ſo bad, ſuch Numbers ſeek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble Suppliant's Friend,
And bring him where his Suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou ſort an Hour great Strifes to end?
Or free that Soul, which Wretchedneſs hath chain'd?
Give Phyſick to the ſick, Eaſe to the pain'd?
The Poor, Lame, Blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
But they ne'er met with Opportunity.

The Patient dies while the Phyſician ſleeps;
The Orphan pines while the Oppreſſor feeds:
Juſtice is feaſting while the Widow weeps;
Advice is ſporting while Infection breeds:
Thou grant'ſt no Time for charitable Deeds.
Wrath, Envy, Treaſon, Rape, and Murder rages;
Thy heinous Hours wait on them, as their Pages.

When Truth and Vertue have to do with thee,
A thouſand Croſſes keep them from thy Aid;
They buy thy Help: but Sin ne'er gives a Fee;
He gratis comes, and thou art well apaid,
As well to hear, as grant what he hath ſaid:
My Colatine would elſe have come to me,
When Tarquin did; but he was ſtaid by Thee.

Guilty thou art of Murder, and of Theft;
Guilty of Perjury, and Subornation;
Guilty of Treaſon, Forgery and Shift;
Guilty of Inceſt, that Abomination;
An Acceſſary by thine Inclination
To all Sins paſt, and all that are to come,
From the Creation to the General Doom.

Miſhapen Time, Copeſemate of ugly Night;
Swift ſubtil Poſt, Carrier of griſly Care;

Eater

Eater of Youth, falſe Slave to falſe Delight,
Baſe Watch of Woes, Sin's Pack-horſe, Vertue's Snare:
Thou nurſeſt all, and murdereſt all that are.
O! hear me then, injurious ſhifting Time!
Be guilty of my Death, ſince of my Crime.

Why hath thy Servant Opportunity
Betray'd the Hours, thou gav'ſt me to repoſe?
Cancel'd my Fortunes, and inchained me
To endleſs Date of never-ending Woes?
Time's Office is to find the Hate of Foes,
To eat up Error by Opinion bred;
Not ſpend the Dowry of a lawful Bed.

Time's Glory is to calm contending Kings;
To unmask Falſhood, and bring Truth to light;
To ſtamp the Seal of Time on aged things;
To wake the Morn, and centinel the Night;
To wrong the Wronger till he render Right;
To ruinate proud Buildings with thy Hours,
And ſmear with Duſt their glittering golden Towers:

To fill with Worm-holes ſtately Monuments;
To feed Oblivion with Decay of things;
To blot old Books, and alter their Contents;
To pluck the Quills from antient Ravens Wings;
To dry the old Oak's Sap, and cheriſh Springs;
To ſpoil Antiquities of hammer'd Steel,
And turn the giddy Round of Fortune's Wheel:

To ſhew the Beldame Daughters of her Daughter;
To make the Child a Man, the Man a Child;
To ſlay the Tyger, that doth live by Slaughter;
To tame the Unicorn, and Lion wild;
To mock the Subtle, in themſelves beguil'd;
To chear the Plowman with increaſeful Crops,
And waſte huge Stones with little Water-drops.

Why work'ſt thou Miſchief in thy Pilgrimage,
Unleſs thou could'ſt return to make amends?
One poor retiring Minute in an Age,
Would purchaſe thee a thouſand thouſand Friends;
Lending him Wit, that to bad Debtors lends.
O! this dread Night! wouldſt thou one Hour come back,
I could prevent this Storm, and ſhun this Wrack.

Thou ceaſeleſs Lacky to Eternity,
With ſome Miſchance croſs Tarquin in his Flight;
Deviſe Extremes beyond Extremity,
To make him curſe this curſed crimeful Night:
Let ghaſtly Shadows his lewd Eyes affright;
And the dire Thought of his committed Evil
Shape every Buſh a hideous ſhapeleſs Devil.

Diſturb his Hours of Reſt with reſtleſs Trances;
Afflict him in his Bed with bedrid Groans:
Let there bechance him pitiful Miſchances,
To make him moan; but pity not his Moans:
Stone him with harden'd Hearts harder than Stones;
And let mild Women to him loſe their Mildneſs;
Wilder to him than Tygers in their Wildneſs.

Let him have time to tear his curled Hair;
Let him have time againſt himſelf to rave;
Let him have time of time's Help to deſpair;
Let him have time to live a loathed Slave;
Let him have time a Beggar's Orts to crave,
And time to ſee one, that by Alms does live,
Diſdain to him diſdained Scraps to give.

Let him have time to ſee his Friends his Foes,
And merry Fools, to mock at him reſort:

Let

Let him have time to mark how ſlow Time goes,
In time of Sorrow ; and how ſwift and ſhort
His time of Folly, and his time of Sport :
And ever let his unrecalling Time
Have time to wail th' abuſing of his Time.

O! Time ! thou Tutor both to Good, and Bad !
Teach me to curſe him, that thou taught'ſt this Ill ;
At his own Shadow let the Thief run mad,
Himſelf, himſelf ſeek every Hour to kill :
Such wretched Hands ſuch wretched Blood ſhould ſpill !
For who ſo baſe would ſuch an Office have,
As ſlanderous Deaths-man to ſo baſe a Slave ?

The baſer is he coming from a King,
To ſhame his Hope with Deeds degenerate ;
The mightier Man, the mightier is the Thing,
That makes him honour'd, or begets him Hate :
For greateſt Scandal waits on greateſt State.
The Moon being clouded preſently is miſt ;
But little Stars may hide them, when they liſt.

The Crow may bathe his cole-black Wings in Mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the Filth away ;
But if the like the ſnow-white Swan deſire,
The Stain upon his ſilver Down will ſtay.
Poor Grooms are ſightleſs Night, Kings glorious Day.
Gnats are unnoted whereſoe'er they fly,
But Eagles gaz'd upon with every Eye.

Oh ! idle Words, Servants to ſhallow Fools !
Unprofitable Sounds, weak Arbitrators !
Buſy your ſelves in skill-contending Schools ;
Debate, where Leiſure ſerves, with dull Debators :
To trembling Clients be their Mediators :
For me, I force not Argument a ſtraw,
Since that my Caſe is paſt all Help of Law.

In

In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and unſearchful Night!
In vain I cavil with mine Infamy,
In vain I ſpurn at my confirm'd Deſpight:
This helpleſs Smoke of Words doth me no Right.
The Remedy indeed to do me good,
Is to let forth my foul defiled Blood.

Poor Hand! why quiver'ſt thou at this Decree?
Honour thy ſelf to rid me of this Shame:
For if I die, my Honour lives in thee;
But if I live, thou liv'ſt in my Defame;
Since thou couldſt not defend thy loyal Dame,
And waſt afraid to ſcratch her wicked Foe,
Kill both thy ſelf, and Her for yielding ſo.

This ſaid, from her betumbled Coach ſhe ſtarts,
To find ſome deſperate Inſtrument of Death;
But this no Slaughter-houſe, no Tool imparts,
To make more Vent for Paſſage of her Breath,
Which thronging thro her Lips ſo vaniſheth,
As Smoke from Ætna, that in Air conſumes,
Or that which from diſcharged Cannon fumes.

In vain (quoth ſhe) I live, and ſeek in vain
Some happy Mean to end a hapleſs Life:
I fear'd by Tarquin's Fauchion to be ſlain;
Yet for the ſelf-ſame Purpoſe ſeek a Knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal Wife;
So am I now: Oh no! that cannot be;
Of that true Type hath Tarquin rifled me.

Oh! that is gone, for which I ſought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die;

To

To clear this Spot by Death (at leaſt) I give
A Badge of Fame to Slander's Livery,
A dying Life to living Infamy.
Poor helpleſs Help, the Treaſure ſtol'n away,
To burn the guiltleſs Casket where it lay!

Well, well, dear Colatine! thou ſhalt not know
The ſtained Taſte of violated Troth:
I will not wrong thy true Affection ſo,
To flatter thee with an infringed Oath:
This baſtard Graſs ſhall never come to Growth.
He ſhall not boaſt, who did thy Stock pollute,
That thou art doating Father of his Fruit.

Nor ſhall he ſmile at Thee in ſecret Thought,
Nor laugh with his Companions at thy State:
But thou ſhalt know thy Intereſt was not bought,
Baſely with Gold, but ſtoln from forth thy Gate.
For me, I am the Miſtreſs of my Fate,
And with my Treſpaſs never will diſpenſe,
Till Life to Death acquit my firſt Offence.

I will not poiſon Thee with my Attaint,
Nor fold my Fault in cleanly coin'd Excuſes;
My ſable Ground of Sin I will not paint,
To hide the Truth of this falſe Night's Abuſes:
My Tongue ſhall utter all; mine Eyes, like Sluices,
As from a Mountain Spring that feeds a Dale,
Shall guſh pure Streams to purge my impure Tale.

By this lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd Warble of her nightly Sorrow;
And ſolemn Night with ſlow ſad Gate deſcended
To ugly Hell; when lo! the bluſhing Morrow
Lends Light to all fair Eyes, that Light would borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece ſhames her ſelf to ſee,
And therefore ſtill in Night would cloiſter'd be.

Revealing Day through every Cranny ſpies,
And ſeems to point her out where ſhe ſits weeping;
To whom ſhe ſobbing ſpeaks, O! Eye of Eyes!
Why pry'ſt thou thro my Window? Leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling Beams Eyes that are ſleeping.
Brand not my Forehead with thy piercing Light;
For Day hath nought to do what's done by Night.

Thus cavils ſhe with every thing ſhe ſees.
True Grief is fond, and teſty as a Child,
Who way-ward once, his Mood with nought agrees.
Old Woes, not infant Sorrows bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one, the other wild
Like an unpractis'd Swimmer plunging ſtill,
With too much Labour drowns for want of Skill.

So ſhe deep-trenched in a Sea of Care,
Holds Diſputation with each thing ſhe views;
And to her ſelf all Sorrow doth compare,
No Object but her Paſſions Strength renews,
And as one ſhifts, another ſtraight enſues.
Sometimes her Grief is dumb, and hath no Words;
Sometime 'tis mad, and too much Talk affords.

The little Birds, that tune their Mornings Joy,
Make her Moans mad with their ſweet Melody.
For Mirth doth ſearch the Bottom of Annoy;
Sad Souls are ſlain in merry Company;
Grief beſt is pleas'd with Grief's Society.
True Sorrow then is feelingly ſurpriz'd,
When with like Semblance it is ſympathiz'd.

'Tis double Death to drown in ken of Shore;
He ten times pines, that pines beholding Food:

To

To ſee the Salve doth make the Wound ake more;
Great Grief grieves moſt at that will do it good;
Deep Woes roll forward like a gentle Flood,
Which, being ſtopt, the bounding Banks o'erflows:
Grief dallied with, nor Law, nor Limit knows.

You mocking Birds, quoth ſhe, your Tunes intomb
Within your hollow ſwelling feather'd Breaſts;
And in my hearing be you ever dumb;
My reſtleſs Diſcord loves no Stops nor Reſts:
A woeful Hoſteſs brooks not merry Gueſts.
Reliſh your nimble Notes to pleaſing Ears,
Diſtreſs likes Dumps, when Time is kept with Tears.

Come Philomel, that ſing'ſt of Raviſhment,
Make thy ſad Grove in my diſhevel'd Hair:
As the dank Earth weeps at thy Languiſhment,
So I at each ſad Strain will ſtrain my Tear,
And with deep Groans the Diapaſon bear.
For Burden-wiſe I'll hum on Tarquin ſtill,
While thou on Tereus deſcant'ſt better Skill.

And while againſt a Thorn thou bear'ſt thy Part,
To keep thy ſharp Woes waking; wretched I,
To imitate thee well, againſt my Heart
Will fix a ſharp Knife, to affright mine Eye,
Who, if it wink, ſhall thereon fall and die.
Theſe Means, as Frets upon an Inſtrument,
Shall tune our Heartſtrings to true Languiſhment.

And for, poor Bird, thou ſing'ſt not in the Day,
As ſhaming any Eye ſhould thee behold;
Some dark deep Deſart ſeated from the Way,
That knows nor parching Heat, nor freezing Cold,
We will find out; and there we will unfold
To Creatures ſtern, ſad Tunes to change their Kinds:
Since Men prove Beaſts, let Beaſts bear gentle Minds.

As the poor frighted Deer, that ſtands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly;
Or one incompaſt with a winding Maze,
That cannot tread the Way out readily:
So with her ſelf is ſhe in mutiny,
To live or die, which of the twain were better,
When Life is ſham'd, and Death reproaches Debtor.

To kill my ſelf, quoth ſhe, alack! what were it,
But with my Body my poor Soul's Pollution?
They that loſe half, with greater Patience bear it,
Than they whoſe whole is ſwallowed in Confuſion.
That Mother tries a mercileſs Concluſion,
Who having two ſweet Babes, when Death takes one,
Will ſlay the other, and be Nurſe to none.

My Body, or my Soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whoſe Love of either to my ſelf was nearer,
When both were kept from Heaven, and Colatine?
Ay me! the Bark peal'd from the lofty Pine,
His Leaves will wither, and his Sap decay;
So muſt my Soul, her Bark being peal'd away.

Her Houſe is ſack'd, her Quiet interrupted;
Her Manſion batter'd by the Enemy;
Her ſacred Temple ſpotted, ſpoil'd, corrupted,
Groſly ingirt with daring Infamy.
Then let it not be call'd Impiety,
If in this blemiſh'd Fort I make ſome Hole,
Thro which I may convey this troubled Soul.

Yet die I will not, till my Colatine
Have heard the Cauſe of my untimely Death;

That

That he may vow, in that ſad Hour of mine,
Revenge on him, that made me ſtop my Breath.
My ſtained Blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted ſhall for him be ſpent,
And as his due, writ in my Teſtament.

My Honour I'll bequeath unto the Knife,
That wounds my Body ſo diſhonoured:
'Tis Honour to deprive diſhonour'd Life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of Shame's Aſhes ſhall my Fame be bred.
For in my Death I murder ſhameful Scorn;
My Shame ſo dead, my Honour is new born.

Dear Lord of that dear Jewel I have loſt!
What Legacy ſhall I bequeath to thee?
My Reſolution, Love, ſhall be thy Boaſt,
By whoſe Example thou reveng'd may'ſt be:
How Tarquin muſt be us'd, read it in me.
My ſelf thy Friend, will kill my ſelf thy Foe;
And for my ſake ſerve thou falſe Tarquin ſo.

This brief Abridgment of my Will I make:
My Soul and Body to the Skies, and Ground;
My Reſolution (Husband) do you take;
My Honour be the Knife's, that makes my Wound;
My Shame be his, that did my Fame confound;
And all my Fame that lives, disburſed be
To thoſe that live, and think no Shame of me.

When Colatine ſhall overſee this Will,
How was I overſeen, that thou ſhalt ſee it?
My Blood ſhall waſh the Slander of mine Ill;
My Life's foul Deed, my Life's fair End ſhall free it.
Faint not, faint Heart, but ſtoutly ſay, ſo be it;

Yield to my Hand, and that ſhall conquer thee;
Thou dead, that dies, and both ſhall Victors be.

This Plot of Death when ſadly ſhe had laid,
And wip'd the briniſh Pearl from her bright Eyes;
With untun'd Tongue ſhe hoarſly call'd her Maid,
Whoſe ſwift Obedience to her Miſtreſs hies;
For fleet-wing'd Duty with Thought's Feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' Cheeks unto her Maid ſeem ſo,
As Winter Meads, when Sun does melt their Snow.

Her Miſtreſs ſhe doth give demure good-morrow,
With ſoft ſlow Tongue, true Marks of Modeſty;
And ſorts a ſad Look to her Lady's Sorrow,
(For why, her Face wore Sorrow's Livery)
But durſt not ask of her audaciouſly,
Why her two Suns were cloud-eclipſed ſo;
Nor why her fair Cheeks over-waſh'd with Woe.

But as the Earth doth weep, the Sun being ſet,
Each Flower moiſten'd like a melting Eye:
E'en ſo the Maid with ſwelling Drops 'gan wet
Her circled Eyne, enforc'd by Sympathy
Of thoſe Fair Suns, ſet in her Miſtreſs' Sky;
Who in a ſalt-wav'd Ocean quench their Light,
Which makes the Maid weep like the dewy Night.

A pretty while theſe pretty Creatures ſtand,
Like Ivory Conduits Coral Ciſterns filling:
One juſtly weeps, the other takes in hand
No Cauſe, but Company, of her Drops ſpilling;
Their gentle Sex to weep are often willing;
Grieving themſelves to gheſs at other Smarts;
And then they drown their Eyes, or break their Hearts.

For

For Men have marble, Women waxen Minds,
And therefore they are form'd as Marble will:
The Weak oppreſt, th' Impreſſion of ſtrange Kinds
Is form'd in them by Force, by Fraud, or Skill.
Then call them not the Authors of their Ill;
No more than Wax ſhall be accounted evil,
Wherein is ſtampt the Semblance of a Devil.

Their Smoothneſs, like an even Champain Plain,
Lays open all the little Worms that creep.
In Men, as in a rough-grown Grove remain
Cave-keeping Evils, that obſurely ſleep;
Thro' Chryſtal Walls each little Mote will peep.
Tho' Men can cover Crimes with bold ſtern Looks,
Poor Womens Faces are their own Faults Books.

No Man inveighs againſt the wither'd Flower,
But chides rough Winter, that the Flower has kill'd:
Not that's devour'd, but that, which doth devour,
Is worthy Blame: O let it not be held
Poor Womens Faults, that they are ſo fulfill'd
With Mens Abuſes; thoſe proud Lords to blame,
Make weak-made Women Tenants to their Shame.

The Precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Aſſail'd by Night with Circumſtances ſtrong
Of preſent Death and Shame that might enſue,
By that her Death to do her Husband Wrong;
Such danger to Reſiſtance did belong.
The dying Fear thro' all her Body ſpread,
And who cannot abuſe a Body dead?

By this mild Patience did fair Lucrece ſpeak
To the poor Counterfeit of her Complaining.

My

My Girl, quoth she, on what occasion break
Those Tears from thee, that down thy Cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for Grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle Wench, it small avails my Mood;
If Tears cou'd help, mine own would do me good.

But tell me, Girl, when went (and there she staid,
Till after a deep Groan) Tarquin from hence?
Madam, e'er I was up (reply'd the Maid)
The more to blame my sluggard Negligence:
Yet with the Fault I thus far can dispense;
My self was stirring e'er the break of Day,
And e'er I rose was Tarquin gone away.

But Lady, if your Maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your Heaviness.
O peace! (quoth Lucrece) if it should be told,
The Repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep Torture may be call'd a Hell,
When more is felt, than one hath power to tell.

Go, get me hither Paper, Ink, and Pen;
Yet save that Labour, for I have them here:
(What should I say?) one of my Husband's Men
Bid thou be ready by and by, to bear
A Letter to my Lord, my Love, my Dear;
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it,
The Cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.

Her Maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the Paper with her Quill;
Conceit and Grief an eager Combat fight,
What Wit sets down is blotted still with Will;
This is too curious good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a Press of People at a Door,
Throng her Inventions, which shall go before.

At

At laſt ſhe thus begins: Thou, worthy Lord
Of that unworthy Wife, that greeteth thee;
Health to thy Perſon, next vouchſafe t'afford
(If ever, Love, thy Lucrece thou wilt ſee)
Some preſent ſpeed to come, and viſit me.
So I commend me from our Houſe in Grief;
My Woes are tedious, tho' my Words are brief.

Here folds ſhe up the Tenor of her Woe,
Her certain Sorrow writ uncertainly:
By this ſhort Schedule Colatine may know
Her Grief, but not her Grief's true Quality;
She dares not therefore make diſcovery,
Leſt he ſhould hold it her own groſs Abuſe,
E'er ſhe with Blood had ſtain'd her ſtrain'd Excuſe.

Beſides, the Life and Feeling of her Paſſion
She hords, to ſpend when he is by to hear her;
When Sighs, and Groans, and Tears may grace the faſhion
Of her Diſgrace, the better ſo to clear her
From that Suſpicion, which the World might bear her:
To ſhun this Blot ſhe wou'd not blot the Letter
With Words, till Action might become them better.

To ſee ſad Sights moves more, than hear them told;
For then the Eye interprets to the Ear
The heavy Motion, that it doth behold:
When every Part a Part of Woe doth bear,
'Tis but a Part of Sorrow that we hear.
Deep Sounds make leſſer Noiſe, than ſhallow Fords;
And Sorrow ebbs being blown with Wind of Words.

Her Letter now is ſeal'd, and on it writ,
At Ardea to my Lord with more than Haſte;
The Poſt attends, and ſhe delivers it,
Charging the four-fac'd Groom to hie as faſt,
As lagging Souls before the Northern Blaſt.

Speed

Speed more than Speed, but dull and ſlow ſhe deems;
Extremity ſtill urgeth ſuch Extremes.

The homely Villain curtſies to her low,
And bluſhing on her with a ſtedfaſt Eye,
Receives the Scroll without or Yea, or No,
For outward baſhful Innocence doth flie.
But they, whoſe Guilt within their Boſoms lie,
Imagine every Eye beholds their Blame;
For Lucrece thought he bluſh'd to ſee her Shame.

When, ſilly Groom (God wot) it was Defect
Of Spirit, Life, and bold Audacity;
Such harmleſs Creatures have a true Reſpect
To talk in Deeds, while others ſaucily
Promiſe more Speed, but do it leiſurely:
Even ſo this Pattern of the worn-out Age
Pawn'd honeſt Looks, but laid no Words to gage.

His kindled Duty kindled her Miſtruſt,
That two red Fires in both their Faces blaz'd.
She thought he bluſh'd as knowing Tarquin's Luſt,
And bluſhing with him, wiſtly on him gaz'd;
Her earneſt Eye did make him more amaz'd:
The more ſhe ſaw the Blood his Cheeks repleniſh,
The more ſhe thought he ſpy'd in her ſome Blemiſh.

But long ſhe thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous Vaſſal ſcarce is gone;
The weary Time ſhe cannot entertain,
For now 'tis ſtale to ſigh, to weep, and groan;
So Woe hath wearied Woe, Moan tired Moan,
That ſhe her Plaints a little while doth ſtay,
Pauſing for Means to mourn ſome newer way.

At laſt ſhe calls to mind where hangs a Piece
Of skilful Painting made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the Power of Greece,
For Helen's Rape the City to deſtroy,
Threatning cloud-kiſſing Ilion with Annoy;
Which the conceited Painter drew ſo proud,
As Heaven (it ſeem'd) to kiſs the Turrets bow'd.

A thouſand lamentable Objects there,
In ſcorn of Nature, Art gave lifeleſs Life:
Many a dire Drop ſeem'd a weeping Tear
Shed for the ſlaughter'd Husband by the Wife.
The red Blood reek'd to ſhew the Painter's Strife,
And dying Eyes gleam'd forth their aſhy Lights,
Like dying Coals burnt out in tedious Nights.

There might you ſee the labouring Pioneer
Begrim'd with Sweat, and ſmeared all with Duſt;
And from the Towers of Troy there wou'd appear
The very Eyes of Men thro' Loop-holes thruſt,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little Luſt.
Such ſweet obſervance in this Work was had,
That one might ſee thoſe far-off Eyes look ſad.

In great Commanders, Grace and Majeſty
You might behold triumphing in their Faces:
In Youth Quick-bearing and Dexterity:
And here and there the Painter interlaces
Pale Cowards marching on with trembling Paces;
Which heartleſs Peaſants did ſo well reſemble,
That one wou'd ſwear he ſaw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax, and Ulyſſes, O! what Art
Of Phyſiognomy might one behold!
The Face of either cipher'd either's Heart;

Their Face, their Manners moſt expreſly told.
In Ajax' Eyes blunt Rage and Rigor roll'd.
But the mild Glance that ſhe Ulyſſes lent,
Shew'd deep Regard, and ſmiling Government.

There pleading might you ſee grave Neſtor ſtand,
As 'twere incouraging the Greeks to fight,
Making ſuch ſober Actions with his Hand,
That it beguil'd Attention, charm'd the Sight:
In Speech it ſeem'd, his Beard all ſilver white,
Wagg'd up and down, and from his Lips did fly
Thin winding Breath, which purl'd up to the Sky.

About him were a Preſs of gaping Faces,
Which ſeem'd to ſwallow up his ſound Advice;
All jointly liſtning, but with ſeveral Graces,
As if ſome Mermaid did their Ears intice;
Some high, ſome low, the Painter was ſo nice.
The Scalps of many almoſt hid behind,
To jump up higher ſeem'd to mock the Mind.

Here one Man's Hand lean'd on another's Head,
His Noſe being ſhadow'd by his Neighbour's Ear;
Here one being throng'd bears back all ſwoln and red;
Another ſmother'd, ſeems to pelt and ſwear;
And in their Rage, (ſuch Signs of Rage they bear,)
As but for loſs of Neſtor's Golden Words,
It ſeems they would debate with angry Swords.

For much imaginary Work was there;
Conceit deceitful, ſo compact, ſo kind,
That for Achilles' Image ſtood his Spear,
Grip'd in an armed Hand, himſelf behind
Was left unſeen, ſave in the Eye of Mind;
A Hand, a Foot, a Face, a Leg, a Head,
Stood for the whole to be Imagined.

And from the Walls of ſtrong-beſieged Troy,
When their brave Hope, bold Hector, march'd to Field,
Stood many Trojan Mothers, ſharing Joy
To ſee their youthful Sons bright Weapons wield;
And to their Hope they ſuch odd Action yield,
That thro' their Light Joy ſeemed to appear,
(Like bright things ſtain'd) a kind of heavy Fear.

And from the Strond of Dardan, where they fought,
To Simois' reedy Banks, the red Blood ran;
Whoſe Waves to imitate the Battel ſought
With ſwelling Ridges; and their Ranks began
To break upon the galled Shore, and then
Retire again, till meeting greater Ranks
They join, and ſhoot their Fome at Simois' Banks.

To this well-painted Piece is Lucrece come
To find a Face where all Diſtreſs is ſtell'd.
Many ſhe ſees, where Cares have carved ſome,
But none where all Diſtreſs and Dolour dwell'd,
Till ſhe deſpairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's Wounds with her old Eyes,
Who bleeding under Pirrhus' proud Foot lies.

In her the Painter had anatomiz'd
Time's Ruin, Beauty's Wrack, and grim Cares Reign;
Her Cheeks with Chops and Wrinkles were diſguis'd;
Of what ſhe was, no Semblance did remain;
Her blue Blood chang'd to black in every Vein.
Wanting the Spring, that thoſe ſhrunk Pipes had fed,
Shew'd Life impriſon'd in a Body dead.

On this ſad Shadow Lucrece ſpends her Eyes,
And ſhapes her Sorrow to the Beldam's Woes;
Who nothing wants to anſwer her but Cries,

And bitter Words to ban her cruel Foes.
The Painter was no God to lend her thoſe;
And therefore Lucrece ſwears he did her Wrong,
To give her ſo much Grief, and not a Tongue.

Poor Inſtrument (quoth ſhe) without a Sound!
I'll tune thy Woes with my lamenting Tongue;
And drop ſweet Balm in Priam's painted Wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus, that hath done him Wrong,
And with my Tears quench Troy, that burns ſo long;
And with my Knife ſcratch out the angry Eyes
Of all the Greeks, that are thine Enemies.

Shew me this Strumpet, that began this Stir,
That with my Nails her Beauty I may tear.
Thy Heat of Luſt, fond Paris, did incur
This Load of Wrath, that burning Troy did bear;
Thy Eye kindled the Fire that burneth here:
And here in Troy, for Treſpaſs of thine Eye,
The Sire, the Son, the Dame, and Daughter die.

Why ſhould the private Pleaſure of ſome one
Become the publick Plague of many moe?
Let Sin alone committed, light alone
Upon his Head, that hath tranſgreſſed ſo.
Let guiltleſs Souls be freed from guilty Woe.
For one's Offence why ſhould ſo many fall,
To plague a private Sin in General?

Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies!
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus ſounds!
Here Friend by Friend in bloody Channel lies!
And Friend to Friend gives unadviſed Wounds!
And one Man's Luſt theſe many Lives confounds!
Had doting Priam check'd his Son's Deſire,
Troy had been bright with Fame, and not with Fire.

Here

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted Woes:
For Sorrow, like a heavy hanging Bell,
Once set a ringing, with his own Weight goes;
Then little Strength rings out the doleful Knell.
So Lucrece set awork, sad Tales doth tell
To pencil'd Pensiveness, and colour'd Sorrow;
She lends them Words, and she their Looks doth borrow.

She throws her Eyes about the painted Round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament.
At last she sees a wretched Image bound,
That piteous Looks to Phrygian Shepherds lent;
His Face, tho full of Cares, yet shew'd Content.
Onward to Troy with these blunt Swains he goes,
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his Woes.

In him the Painter labour'd with his Skill,
To hide Deceit, and give the harmless Show,
An humble Gate, calm Looks, Eyes wailing still,
A Brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome Woe;
Cheeks, neither red, nor pale, but mingled so,
That blushing Red no guilty Instance gave,
Nor ashy Pale, the Fear that false Hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed Devil,
He entertain'd a Show so seeming just;
And therein so insconc'd this secret Evil,
That Jealousy it self could not mistrust,
False creeping Craft and Perjury should thrust
Into so bright a Day such black-fac'd Storms,
Or blot with Hell-born Sin such Saint-like Forms.

The well-skill'd Woman this wild Image drew
For perjur'd Sinon, whose inchanting Story
The credulous old Priam after slew;

Whose

Whoſe Words like Wild-fire burnt the ſhining Glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the Skies were ſorry,
And little Stars ſhot from their fixed Places,
When their Glaſs fell wherein they view'd their Faces.

This Picture ſhe adviſedly perus'd,
And chid the Painter for his wondrous Skill:
Saying, ſome Shape in Sinon's was abus'd,
So fair a Form lodg'd not a Mind ſo ill.
And ſtill on him ſhe gaz'd, and gazing ſtill,
Such Signs of Truth in his plain Face ſhe ſpied,
That ſhe concludes, the Picture was belied.

It cannot be (quoth ſhe) that ſo much Guile,
She would have ſaid, can lurk in ſuch a Look;
But Tarquin's Shape came in her Mind the while,
And from her Tongue, can lurk, from cannot, took:
It cannot be, ſhe in that Senſe forſook,
And turn'd it thus, It cannot be I find,
But ſuch a Face ſhould bear a wicked Mind.

For e'en as ſubtle Sinon here is painted,
So ſober ſad, ſo weary and ſo mild,
(As if with Grief or Travel he had fainted)
To me came Tarquin armed, ſo beguil'd
With outward Honeſty, but yet defil'd
With inward Vice; as Priam him did cheriſh,
So did I Tarquin, ſo my Troy did periſh.

Look, look how liſtning Priam wets his Eyes
To ſee thoſe borrow'd Tears, that Sinon ſheds!
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wiſe?
For every Tear he falls, a Trojan bleeds:
His Eyes drop Fire, no Water thence proceeds.
Thoſe round clear Pearls of his that move thy Pity,
Are Balls of quenchleſs Fire to burn thy City.

Such

Such Devils ſteal Effects from lightleſs Hell ;
For Sinon in his Fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning Fire doth dwell ;
Theſe Contraries ſuch Unity do hold,
Only to flatter Fools and make them bold :
So Priam's Truſt falſe Sinon's Tears doth flatter,
That he finds Means to burn his Troy with Water.

Here all inrag'd ſuch Paſſion her aſſails,
That Patience is quite beaten from her Breaſt ;
She tears the ſenſleſs Sinon with her Nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy Gueſt,
Whoſe Deed hath made her ſelf, her ſelf deteſt.
At laſt ſhe ſmilingly with this gives o'er,
Fool ! Fool ! quoth ſhe, his Wounds will not be ſore.

Thus ebbs and flows the Current of her Sorrow,
And Time doth weary Time with her Complaining.
She looks for Night, and then ſhe longs for Morrow,
And both ſhe thinks too long with her remaining ;
Short time ſeems long, in Sorrows ſharp ſuſtaining.
Tho Woe be heavy, yet it ſeldom ſleeps,
And they that watch, ſee Time how ſlow it creeps.

Which all this Time hath over-ſlipt her Thought,
That ſhe with painted Images hath ſpent,
Being from the feeling of her own Grief brought,
By deep ſurmiſe of others Detriment,
Looſing her Woes in ſhews of Diſcontent.
It eaſeth ſome, tho none it ever cur'd,
To think their Dolour others have endur'd.

But now the mindful Meſſenger comes back,
Brings home his Lord, and other Company ;
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning Black,

And round-about her tear-diſtained Eye
Blue Circles ſtream'd, like Rainbows in the Sky.
These Watergalls in her dim Element,
Foretel new Storms to thoſe already ſpent.

Which when her ſad-beholding Husband ſaw,
Amazedly in her ſad face he ſtares:
Her Eyes, tho ſod in Tears, look red, and raw,
Her lively Colour kill'd with deadly Cares.
He has no Power to ask her how ſhe fares;
But ſtood like old Acquaintance in a Trance,
Met far from Home, wondring each other's Chance.

At laſt he takes her by the bloodleſs Hand,
And thus begins: What uncouth ill Event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou doſt trembling ſtand?
Sweet Love! what Spite hath thy fair Colour ſpent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in Diſcontent?
Unmask, dear Dear! this moody Heavineſs,
And tell thy Grief, that we may give Redreſs.

Three times with Sighs ſhe gives her Sorrow Fire,
E'er once ſhe can diſcharge one Word of Woe:
At length addreſs'd, to anſwer his Deſire,
She modeſtly prepares to let them know
Her Honour is ta'en Priſoner by the Foe;
While Colatine and his conſorted Lords
With ſad Attention long to hear her Words.

And now this pale Swan, in her wat'ry Neſt,
Begins the ſad Dirge of her certain Ending.
Few Words, quoth ſhe, ſhall fit the Treſpaſs beſt,
Wherein no Excuſe can give the Fault amending;
In me more Woes than Words are now depending:
And my Laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired Tongue.

Then

Then be this all the Task it hath to ſay,
Dear Husband, in the Intereſt of thy Bed
A Stranger came, and on that Pillow lay,
Where thou waſt wont to reſt thy weary Head;
And what Wrong elſe may be imagined
By foul Inforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful Dead of dark Midnight,
With ſhining Fauchion in my Chamber came
A creeping Creature with a flaming Light,
And ſoftly cry'd, Awake thou Roman Dame!
And entertain my Love, elſe laſting Shame
On thee and thine this Night I will inflict,
If thou my Love's Deſire do contradict.

For ſome hard-favour'd Groom of thine, quoth he,
Unleſs thou yoak thy Liking to my Will,
I'll murder ſtreight, aud then I'll ſlaughter thee,
And ſwear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathſome Act of Luſt; and ſo did kill
The Leachers in their Deed: this Act will be
My Fame, and thy perpetual Infamy.

With this I did begin to ſtart and cry,
And then againſt my Heart he ſets his Sword,
Swearing, unleſs I took all patiently,
I ſhould not live to ſpeak another Word:
So ſhould my Shame ſtill reſt upon Record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome,
Th' Adult'rate Death of Lucrece, and her Groom.

Mine Enemy was ſtrong, my poor ſelf weak,
(And far the weaker with ſo ſtrong a Fear)
My bloody Judge forbad my Tongue to ſpeak:

No rightful Plea might plead for Juſtice there :
His ſcarlet Luſt came Evidence to ſwear,
That my poor Beauty had purloin'd his Eyes ;
And when the Judge is robb'd, the Priſoner dies.

O ! teach me how to make mine own Excuſe,
Or, at the leaſt this Refuge let me find ;
Tho' my groſs Blood be ſtain'd with this Abuſe,
Immaculate and ſpotleſs is my Mind :
That was not forc'd, that never was inclin'd
To acceſſary Yieldings ; but ſtill pure,
Doth in her poiſon'd Cloſet yet indure.

Lo ! here the hopeleſs Merchant of this Loſs,
With Head inclin'd, and Voice damm'd up with Woe,
With ſad ſet Eyes, and wretched Arms acroſs,
From Lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The Grief away, that ſtops his Anſwer ſo.
But wretched as he is, he ſtrives in vain ;
What he breathes out, his Breath drinks up again.

As thro' an Arch the violent roaring Tide
Out-runs the Eye, that doth behold his Haſte ;
Yet in the Eddie boundeth in his Pride
Back to the Strait, that forc'd him on ſo faſt,
In Rage ſent out, recall'd in Rage being paſt :
Even ſo his Sighs, his Sorrows make a Saw,
To puſh Grief on, and back the ſame Grief draw.

Which ſpeechleſs Woe of his, Poor She attendeth,
And his untimely Frenzy thus awaketh :
Dear Lord ! thy Sorrow to my Sorrow lendeth
Another Power, no Flood my Raining ſlacketh ;
My Woe too ſenſible, thy Paſſion maketh
More feeling painful ; let it then ſuffice
To drown one Woe, one Pair of weeping Eyes.

And

And for my ſake, when I might charm thee ſo,
For ſhe, that was thy Lucrece----now attend me;
Be ſuddenly revenged on my Foe,
Thine, mine, his own; ſuppoſe thou doſt defend me
From what is paſt, the Help that thou ſhalt lend me
Comes all too late; yet let the Traitor die;
For ſparing Juſtice feeds Iniquity.

But e'er I name him, you fair Lords, quoth ſhe,
(Speaking to thoſe, that came with Colatine)
Shall plight your honourable Faiths to me,
With ſwift Purſuit to venge this Wrong of mine:
For 'tis a meritorious fair Deſign,
To chaſe Injuſtice with revengeful Arms;
Knights by their Oaths ſhould right poor Ladies Harms.

At this Requeſt, with noble Diſpoſition,
Each preſent Lord began to promiſe Aid,
As bound in Knighthood to her Impoſition,
Longing to hear the hateful Foe bewray'd:
But ſhe that yet her ſad Task hath not ſaid,
The Proteſtation ſtops. O ſpeak! quoth ſhe,
How may this forced Stain be wip'd from me?

What is the Quality of my Offence,
Being conſtrain'd with dreadful Circumſtances?
May my pure Mind with the foul Act diſpenſe,
My low declined Honour to advance?
May any Terms acquit me from this Chance?
The poiſon'd Fountain clears it ſelf again;
And why not I from this compelled Stain?

With this they all at once began to ſay,
Her Body's Stain the Mind untainted clears;
While with a joyleſs Smile ſhe turns away

The Face, that Map, which deep Impreſſion bears
Of hard Misfortune carved in with Tears.
No, no, quoth ſhe, nó Dame hereafter living,
By my Excuſe ſhall claim Excuſes giving.

Here with a Sigh, as if her Heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's Name. He, he, ſhe ſays:
But more than he, her poor Tongue could not ſpeak,
Till after many Accents and Delays,
Untimely Breathings, ſick and ſhort Aſſays,
She utters this, He, he, fair Lord, 'tis He
That guides this Hand to give this Wound to me.

Even here ſhe ſheathed in her harmleſs Breaſt
A harmful Knife, that thence her Soul unſheathed;
That Blow did bail it from the deep Unreſt
Of that polluted Priſon where it breathed:
Her contrite Sighs unto the Clouds bequeathed
Her winged Spright, and thro' her Wounds doth fly
Life's laſting Date from cancel'd Deſtiny.

Stone-ſtill, aſtoniſh'd with this deadly Deed,
Stood Colatine and all his Lordly Crew,
Till Lucrece' Father, that beholds her bleed,
Himſelf on her ſelf-ſlaughter'd Body threw:
And from the purple Fountain Brutus drew
The murd'rous Knife; and as it left the Place,
Her Blood in pure Revenge held it in Chaſe.

And bubbling from her Breaſt, it doth divide
In two ſlow Rivers, that the crimſon Blood
Circles her Body in on every Side,
Who like a late ſack'd Iſland vaſtly ſtood
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful Flood.
Some of her Blood ſtill pure and red remain'd,
And ſome look'd black, and that falſe Tarquin ſtain'd.

About

About the mourning and congealed Face
Of that black Blood, a watry Rigol goes,
Which ſeems to weep upon the tainted Place;
And ever ſince, as pitying Lucrece' Woes,
Corrupted Blood ſome wat'ry Token ſhows,
And Blood untainted ſtill doth red abide,
Bluſhing at that which is ſo putrify'd.

Daughter! dear Daughter! old Lucretius cries,
That Life was mine, which thou haſt here depriv'd;
If in the Child the Father's Image lies,
Where ſhall I live, now Lucrece is unliv'd?
Thou waſt not to this end from me deriv'd.
If Children prædeceaſe Progenitors,
We are their Off-ſpring, and they none of ours.

Poor broken Glaſs! I often did behold
In thy ſweet Semblance my old Age new-born;
But now that fair freſh Mirror, dim and cold,
Shews me a barebon'd Death by Time out-worn.
O! from my Cheeks my Image thou haſt torn!
And ſhiver'd all the Beauty from my Glaſs,
That I no more can ſee, what once I was.

O! Time, ceaſe thou thy Courſe, and haſte no longer,
If thou ſurceaſe to be, that ſhould ſurvive:
Shall rotten Death make Conqueſt of the Stronger,
And leave the faltring feeble Souls alive?
The old Bees die, the young poſſeſs their Hive:
Then live ſweet Lucrece, live again, and ſee
Thy Father die, and not thy Father thee.

By this ſtarts Colatine as from a Dream,
And bids Lucretius give his Sorrow place;
Andt hen in Clay-cold Lucrece' bleeding Stream

He

He falls, and bathes the pale Fear in his Face,
And counterfeits to die with her a Space;
Till manly Shame bids him poſſeſs his Breath,
And live to be revenged on her Death.

The deep Vexation of his inward Soul
Hath ſerv'd a dumb Arreſt upon his Tongue:
Who made that Sorrow ſhould his uſe controul,
Or keep him from heart-eaſing Words ſo long
He 'gins to talk; but thro' his Lips do throng
Weak Words, ſo thick come in his poor Heart's Aid,
That no Man could diſtinguiſh what he ſaid.

Yet ſometime Tarquin was pronounced plain,
But thro' his Teeth, as if his Name he tore.
This windy Tempeſt, till it blow up Rain,
Held back his Sorrow's Tide to make it more.
At laſt it rains, and buſy Winds give o'er:
Then Son and Father weep with equal Strife,
Who ſhould weep moſt for Daughter, or for Wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his;
Yet neither may poſſeſs the Claim they lay.
The Father ſays, ſhe's mine; O mine ſhe is,
Replies her Husband; do not take away
My Sorrow's Intereſt; let no Mourner ſay,
He weeps for her; for ſhe was only mine,
And only muſt be wail'd by Colatine.

O! quoth Lucretius, I did give that Life,
Which ſhe too early and too late hath ſpill'd.
Woe! woe! quoth Colatine, ſhe was my Wife,
I own'd her, and 'tis mine that ſhe hath kill'd.
My Daughter and my Wife with Clamours fill'd
The diſperſt Air, who holding Lucrece' Life,
Anſwer'd their Cries, my Daughter, and my Wife.

Brutus,

Brutus, who pluck'd the Knife from Lucrece' Side,
Seeing such Emulation in their Woe,
Began to cloath his Wit in State and Pride,
Burying in Lucrece' Wound his Folly's Show:
He with the Romans was esteemed so,
As silly jeering Idiots are with Kings,
For sportive Words, and uttering foolish Things.

But now he throws that shallow Habit by,
Wherein true Policy did him disguise;
And arm'd his long-hid Wits advisedly,
To check the Tears in Colatinus' Eyes.
Thou wronged Lord of Rome, quoth he, arise;
Let my unsounded Self, suppos'd a Fool,
Now set thy long-experienc'd Wit to School.

Why Colatine, is Woe the Cure for Woe?
Do Wounds help Wounds, or Grief help grievous Deeds?
Is it Revenge to give thy self a Blow
For his foul Act, by whom thy fair Wife bleeds?
Such childish Humour from weak Minds proceeds.
Thy wretched Wife mistook the matter so,
To slay her self, that should have slain her Foe.

Couragious Roman! do not steep thy Heart
In such lamenting Dew of Lamentations;
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy Part,
To rouse our Roman Gods with Invocations,
That they will suffer these Abominations
(Since Rome her self in them doth stand disgrac'd)
By our strong Arms from forth her fair Streets chas'd.

Now by the Capitol, that we adore!
And by this chaste Blood so unjustly stain'd!
By Heaven's fair Sun, that breeds the fat Earth's Store!

By

By all our Country Rites in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaſte Lucrece' Soul, that late complain'd
Her Wrongs to us, and by this bloody Knife!
We will revenge the Death of this true Wife.

This ſaid, he ſtroke his Hand upon his Breaſt,
And kiſs'd the fatal Knife to end his Vow;
And to his Proteſtation urg'd the reſt,
Who wondring at him did his Words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their Knees they bow,
And that deep Vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they ſwore.

When they had ſworn to this adviſed Doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence,
To ſhew the bleeding Body throughout Rome,
And ſo to publiſh Tarquin's foul Offence.
Which being done, with ſpeedy Diligence,
The Romans plauſibly did give conſent
To Tarquin's everlaſting Baniſhment.

POEMS

POEMS

ON

SEVERAL OCCASIONS.

The Glory of Beauty.

AH wherefore with Infection ſhou'd he live,
And with his Preſence grace Impiety?
That Sin by him advantage ſhou'd atchieve,
And lace it ſelf with his Society?
Why ſhou'd falſe Painting imitate his Cheek,
And ſteal dead ſeeing of his living hew?
Why ſhou'd poor Beauty indirectly ſeek
Roſes of Shadow, ſince his Roſe is true?
Why ſhou'd he live, now Nature Bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of Blood to bluſh through lively Veins?
For ſhe hath no Exchequer now but his,
And proud of many, lives upon his Gains.
O! him ſhe ſtores, to ſhow what Wealth ſhe had,
In Days long ſince, before theſe laſt ſo bad.

Thus is his Cheek the Map of Days out-worn,
When Beauty liv'd and dy'd as Flowers do now;
Before theſe baſtard Signs of Fair were born,
Or durſt inhabit on a living Brow.
Before the Golden Treſſes of the Dead,
The Right of Sepulchers, were ſhorn away,
To live a ſecond Life on ſecond Head,
E'er Beauty's dead Fleece made another gay:
In him thoſe holy antique Hours are ſeen,
Without all Ornament, it ſelf, and true,
Making no Summer of another's Green,
Robbing no old to dreſs his Beauty new;
And him as for a Map doth Nature ſtore,
To ſhow falſe Art what Beauty was of yore.

Thoſe Parts of thee that the World's Eye doth view,
Want nothing, that the thought of Hearts can mend:
All Tongues (the Voice of Souls) give thee that End,
Uttering bare Truth, even ſo as Foes commend,
Their outward thus with outward Praiſe is crown'd:
But thoſe ſame Tongues, that give thee ſo thine own,
In other Accents do this Praiſe confound
By ſeeing farther than the Eye hath ſhown.
They look into the Beauty of thy Mind,
And that in gheſs they meaſure by thy Deeds,
Then churls their Thoughts (altho their Eyes were kind)
To thy fair Flower add the rank Smell of Weeds.
But why? thy Odor matcheth not thy ſhow,
The Toil is this, that thou doſt common grow.

Injurious

Injurious Time.

LIKE as the Waves make towards the pibled Shore,
So do our Minutes haſten to their End.
Each changing Place, with that which goes before,
In ſequent Toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity once in the Main of Light,
Crawles to Maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked Eclipſes 'gainſt his Glory fight,
And Time that gave, doth now his Gift confound.
Time doth transfix the Flouriſh ſet on Youth,
And delves the Parallels in Beauty's Brow,
Feeds on the Rarities of Nature's Truth,
And nothing ſtands but for his Sithe to mow.
And yet to Times in hope my Verſe ſhall ſtand,
Praiſing thy Worth, deſpight his cruel Hand.

Againſt my Love ſhall be as I am now,
With Time's injurious Hand cruſh'd and o'er-worn,
When Hours have drain'd his Blood and fill'd his Brow
With Lines and Wrinkles, when his youthful Morn
Hath travail'd on to Age's ſteepy Night,
And all thoſe Beauties, whereof now he's King,
Are vaniſhing, or vaniſh'd out of Sight,
Stealing away the Treaſure of his Spring.
For ſuch a Time do I now Fortify,
Againſt confounding Age's cruel Knife,
That he ſhall never cutt from Memory
My ſweet Love's Beauty, tho my Lover's Life.
His Beauty ſhall in theſe black Lines be ſeen,
And they ſhall live, and he in them, ſtill green.

When I have ſeen by Time's fell Hand defac'd
The rich proud Coſt of out-worn buried Age;
When ſometimes lofty Towers I ſee down raz'd,

And Braſs eternal Slave to mortal Rage;
When I have ſeen the hungry Ocean gain
Advantage on the Kingdom of the Shoar,
And the firm Soil win of the watry Main,
Increaſing Store with Loſs, and Loſs with Store;
When I have ſeen ſuch Interchange of State,
Or State it ſelf confounded to decay,
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate,
That Time will come and take my Love away.
This Thought is as a Death, which cannot chooſe
But weep to have that which it fears to looſe.

Since Braſs, nor Stone, nor Earth, nor boundleſs Sea,
But ſad Mortality o'er-ſways their Power,
How with this Rage ſhall Beauty hold a Plea,
Whoſe Action is no ſtronger than a Flower?
O! how ſhall Summer's hungry Breath hold out,
Againſt the wrackful Siege of battering Days,
When Rocks impregnable are not ſo ſtout,
Nor Gates of Steel ſo ſtrong, but Time decays?
O! fearful Meditation, where a-lack
Shall Time's beſt Jewel from Time's Cheſt lie hid?
Or what ſtrong Hand can hold this ſwift Foot back,
Or who his Spoil on Beauty can forbid?
O! none, unleſs this Miracle have might,
That in black Ink my Love may ſtill ſhine bright.

Tyr'd with all theſe for reſtful Death I cry,
As to behold Deſert a Beggar born,
And needy Nothing trim'd in Jolity,
And pureſt Faith unhappily forſworn,
And guilded Honour ſhamefully miſplac'd,
And Maiden Virtue rudely Strumpeted,
And right Perfection wrongfully diſgrac'd,
And Strength by limping Sway diſabled,

And Art made Tongue-ty'd by Authority,
And Folly (Doctor-like) controuling Skill,
And ſimple Truth miſcall'd Simplicity,
And Captive good attending Captain Ill.
Tyr'd with all theſe, from theſe would I be gone,
Save that to die, I leave my Love alone.

True Admiration.

WHAT is your Subſtance? whereof are you made,
That Millions of ſtrange Shadows on you tend?
Since every one, hath every one, one Shade,
And you but one, can every Shadow lend;
Deſcribe Adonis, and the Counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you,
On Helen's Cheek all Art of Beauty ſet,
And you in Grecian Tires are painted new.
Speak of the Spring and Foyzen of the Year,
The one doth ſhadow of your Beauty ſhow,
The other as your Bounty doth appear,
And you in every bleſſed Shape we know.
In all external Grace you have ſome Part,
But you like none, none you for conſtant Heart.

O! how much more doth Beauty beauteous ſeem,
By that ſweet Ornament which Truth doth give?
The Roſe looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that ſweet Odour, which doth in it live.
The Canker-blooms have full as deep a Die,
As the perfumed Tincture of the Roſes,
Hang on ſuch Thorns, and play as wantonly,
When Summer's breath their masked Buds diſcloſes.
But for their Vertue's only in their ſhow,
They live unmov'd, and unreſpected fade,

Die

Die to themſelves : Sweet Roſes do not ſo,
Of their ſweet Deaths, are ſweeteſt Odours made.
And ſo of you, beauteous and lovely Youth,
When that ſhall fade, by Verſe diſtills your Truth.

The Force of Love.

BEING your Slave, what ſhould I do but tend
Upon the Hours and Times of your Deſire ?
I have no precious Time at all to ſpend,
Nor Services to do till you require.
Nor dare I chide the World-without-end-Hour,
Whilſt I (my Soveraign) watch the Clock for you ;
Nor think the Bitterneſs of Abſence ſour,
When you have bid your Servant once adieu.
Nor dare I queſtion with my jealous Thought,
Where you may be, or your Affairs ſuppoſe,
But like a ſad Slave ſtay and think of nought,
Save where you are, how happy you make thoſe.
So true a Fool is Love, that in your Will,
(Tho you do any thing) he thinks no ill.

That God forbid that made me firſt your Slave,
I ſhould in Thought controul your times of Pleaſure,
Or at your Hand the Account of Hours to crave,
Being your Vaſſal bound to ſtay your Leiſure.
Oh ! let me ſuffer, (being at your Beck)
Th' impriſon'd Abſence of your Liberty,
And Patience tame, to Sufferance bide each Check,
Without accuſing you of Injury !
Be where you liſt, your Charter is ſo ſtrong,
That you your ſelf may privilege your Time
To what you will ; to you it doth belong,
Your ſelf to pardon of ſelf-doing Crime.

I am to wait, tho waiting ſo be Hell,
Not blame your Pleaſure, be it ill or well.

The Beauty of Nature.

IF there be nothing new, but that which is,
Hath been before, how are our Brains beguil'd,
Which labouring for Invention bear amiſs
The ſecond Burthen of a former Child?
O! that Record could with a backward Look,
Even of five hundred Courſes of the Sun,
Show me your Image in ſome antique Book,
Since mine at firſt in Character was done:
That I might ſee what the old World could ſay,
To this compoſed Wonder of your Frame,
Whether we are mended, or where better they,
Or whether Revolution be the ſame.
Oh! ſure I am, the Wits of former Days,
To Subjects worſe have given admiring Praiſe.

Love's Cruelty.

FROM faireſt Creatures we deſire Increaſe,
That thereby Beauty's Roſe may never die;
But as the riper ſhould by time deceaſe,
His tender Heir might bear his Memory.
But thou contracted to thine own bright Eyes,
Feed'ſt thy Light's Flame with ſelf-ſubſtantial Fuel,
Making a Famine where Abundance lies,
Thy ſelf thy Foe, to thy ſweet ſelf too cruel:
Thou that art now the World's freſh Ornament,
And only Herald to the gaudy Spring,

Within

Within thine own Bud burieſt thy Content,
And tender Churle mak'ſt waſte in niggarding.
Pity the World, or elſe this Glutton be
To eat the World's due, by the Grave and thee.

When forty Winters ſhall beſiege thy Brow,
And dig deep Trenches in thy Beauty's Field,
Thy Youth's proud Livery ſo gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd Weed of ſmall worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy Beauty lies,
Where all the Treaſure of thy luſty Days;
To ſay within thine one deep-ſunken Eyes,
Were an all-eating Shame, and thriftleſs Praiſe.
How much more Praiſe deſerv'd thy Beauty's Uſe,
If thou couldſt anſwer, This fair Child of mine
Shall ſum my Count, and make my old Excuſe,
Proving his Beauty by ſucceſſion thine.
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And ſee thy Blood warm, when thou feel'ſt it cold.

Look in thy Glaſs, and tell the Face thou viewеſt,
Now is the time that Face ſhould form another,
Whoſe freſh repair if now thou not reneweſt,
Thou do'ſt beguile the World, unbleſs ſome Mother.
For where is ſhe ſo fair, whoſe un-eard Womb
Diſdains the tillage of thy Husbandry?
Or who is he ſo fond will be the Tomb
Of his ſelf Love, to ſtop Poſterity?
Thou art thy Mother's Glaſs, and ſhe in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her Prime.
So thou thro Windows of thine Age ſhalt ſee,
Deſpight of Wrinkles, this thy golden Time.
But if thou live, remember not to be,
Die ſingle, and thine Image dies with thee.

Youthful

Youthful Glory.

O That you were your ſelf, but Love, you are
No longer yours, than you your ſelf here live;
Againſt this coming End you ſhould prepare,
And your ſweet Semblance to ſome other give.
So ſhou'd that Beauty, which you hold in Leaſe,
Find no Determination; then you were
Your ſelf again after your ſelf's Deceaſe,
When your ſweet Iſſue your ſweet Form ſhou'd bear.
Who lets ſo fair a Houſe fall to decay,
Which Husbandry in Honour might uphold,
Againſt the ſtormy Guſts of Winter's Day,
And barren Rage of Death's eternal Cold?
O! none but Unthrifts, dear my Love, you know,
You had a Father, let your Son ſay ſo.

Not from the Stars do I my Judgment pluck,
And yet methinks I have Aſtronomy,
But not to tell of good, or evil Luck,
Of Plagues, of Dearths, or Seaſons quality:
Nor can I Fortune to brief Minutes tell,
Pointing to each his Thunder, Rain, and Wind;
Or ſay with Princes if it ſhall go well,
By oft predict, that I in Heaven find.
But from thine Eyes my Knowledge I derive,
And conſtant Stars; in them I read ſuch Art,
As Truth and Beauty ſhall together thrive,
If from thy ſelf, to Store thou wouldſt convert:
Or elſe of thee this I prognoſticate,
Thy End is Truth's, and Beauty's Doom, and Date.

When I conſider every thing that grows,
Holds in Perfection but a little Moment;

That this huge Stage preſenteth nought but Shows,
Whereon the Stars in ſecret influence comment:
When I perceive, that Men as Plants increaſe,
Cheared and check'd even by the ſelf-ſame Sky,
Vaunt in their youthful Sap, at height decreaſe,
And wear their brave State out of Memory:
Then the Conceit of this inconſtant Stay,
Sets you moſt rich in youth before my Sight,
Where waſteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your Day of Youth to ſullied Night;
And all in war with Time, for love of you,
As he takes from you, I ingraft you new.

Good Admonition.

BUT wherefore do not you a mightier Way
Make war upon this bloody Tyrant, Time?
And fortify your ſelf in your Decay
With Means more bleſſed, than my barren Rhime?
Now ſtand you on the Top of happy Hours;
And many maiden Gardens yet unſet,
With vertuous Wiſh would bear you living Flowers,
Much liker than your painted Counterfeit.
So ſhou'd the Lines of Life, that Life repair,
Which this (Time's Penſil, or my Pupil Pen)
Neither in inward Worth, nor outward fair,
Can make you live your ſelf in Eyes of Men,
To give away your ſelf, keeps your ſelf ſtill,
And you muſt live, drawn by your own ſweet Skill.

Who will believe my Verſe in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your moſt high Deſerts?
Tho yet Heaven knows it is but as a Tomb,
Which hides your Life, and ſhows not half your Parts:

If

If I cou'd write the Beauty of your Eyes,
And in freſh Numbers number all your Graces;
The Age to come wou'd ſay this Poet lies,
Such heavenly Touches ne're touch'd earthly Faces.
So ſhould my Papers (yellow'd with their Age)
Be ſcorn'd, like old Men of leſs Truth, than Tongue,
And your true Rights be term'd a Poet's Rage,
And ſtretched Metre of an Antick Song.
But were ſome Child of yours alive that time,
You ſhould live twice in it, and in my Rhime.

Quick Prevention.

LOE! in the Orient when the gracious Light
Lifts up his burning Head, each under Eye
Doth Homage to his new appearing Sight,
Serving with Looks his ſacred Majeſty:
And having clim'd the ſteep-up heavenly Hill,
Reſembling ſtrong Youth in his middle Age,
Yet mortal Looks adore his Beauty ſtill,
Attending on his golden Pilgrimage.
But when from high-moſt Pitch, with weary Care,
Like feeble Age he reeleth from the Day,
The Eyes (fore-dutious) now converted are
From his low Tract, and look another way.
So thou, thy ſelf out-going in thy Noon,
Unlook'd on dy'ſt, unleſs thou get a Son.

Magazine of Beauty.

UNthrifty Lovelineſs! why doſt thou ſpend
Upon thy ſelf thy Beauty's Legacy?
Nature's Bequeſt gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank ſhe lends to thoſe are free.
Then, beauteous Nigard, why doſt thou abuſe
The bounteous Largeſs given thee, to give?
Profitleſs Uſurer, why doſt thou uſe
So great a Sum of Sums, yet can'ſt not live?
For having Traffick with thy ſelf alone,
Thou of thy ſelf thy ſweet ſelf doſt deceive;
Then how, when Nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable Audit canſt thou leave?
Thy unus'd Beauty muſt be tomb'd with thee,
Which uſed lives th' Executor to be.

Thoſe Hours, that with gentle Work did frame
The lovely Gaze where every Eye doth dwell,
Will play the Tyrants to the very ſame,
And that unfair which fairly doth excel.
For never-reſting Time leads Summer on
To hideous Winter, and confounds him there;
Sap checkt with Froſt, and luſty Leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'er-ſnow'd, and Bareneſs every where.
Then were not Summer's Diſtillation left,
A liquid Priſoner pent in Walls of Glaſs,
Beauty's Effect with Beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no Remembrance what it was.
But Flowers diſtill'd, tho they with Winter meet,
Loſe but their Show, their Subſtance ſtill lives ſweet.

Then let not Winter's ragged Hand deface
In thee thy Summer, e'er thou be diſtill'd:

Make ſweet ſome Vial, Treaſure thou ſome Place
With Beauty's Treaſure, e'er it be ſelf-kill'd:
That Uſe is not forbidden Uſury,
Which happies thoſe, that pay the willing Loan;
That's for thy ſelf to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one:
Ten times thy ſelf were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee;
Then what could Death do if thou ſhould'ſt depart,
Leaving thee living in Poſterity?
Be not ſelf-will'd, for thou art much too fair,
To be Death's Conqueſt, and make Worms thine Heir.

An Invitation to Marriage.

MUſick to hear, why hear'ſt thou Muſick ſadly?
Sweets with Sweets war not, Joy delights in Joy:
Why lov'ſt thou that, which thou receiv'ſt not gladly,
Or elſe receiv'ſt with Pleaſure thine Annoy?
If the true Concord of well-tuned Sounds,
By Unions married do offend thy Ear;
They do but ſweetly chide thee, who confounds
In Singleneſs the Parts, that thou ſhould'ſt bear.
Mark how one ſtring ſweet Husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Reſembling Sire and Child, and happy Mother,
Who all in one, one pleaſing Note do ſing;
Whoſe ſpeechleſs Song being many, ſeeming one,
Sings this to thee, Thou ſingle wilt prove none.

Is it for fear to wet a Widow's Eye,
That thou conſum'ſt thy ſelf in ſingle Life?
Ah! if thou iſſueleſs ſhalt hap to die,
The World will wail thee like a makeleſs Wife;

The

The World will be thy Widow and ſtill weep,
That thou no Form of thee haſt left behind;
When every private Widow well may keep,
By Childrens Eyes, her Husband's Shape in Mind:
Look what an Unthrift in the World doth ſpend,
Shifts but his Place, for ſtill the World enjoys it;
But Beauty's waſte hath in the World an End,
And kept unus'd, the Us'rer ſo deſtroys it.
No Love towards others in that Boſom ſits,
That on himſelf ſuch murd'rous ſhame commits.

For ſhame! deny that thou bear'ſt Love to any,
Who for thy ſelf art ſo unprovident;
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'ſt is moſt evident:
For thou art ſo poſſeſt with murd'rous Hate,
That 'gainſt thy ſelf thou ſtick'ſt not to conſpire,
Seeking that beauteous Roof to ruinate,
Which to repair ſhould be thy chief Deſire.
O! change thy Thought, that I may change my Mind:
Shall Hate be fairer lodg'd, than gentle Love?
Be, as thy Preſence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thy ſelf at leaſt kindhearted prove.
Make thee another ſelf for love of me,
That Beauty ſtill may live in thine, or thee.

As faſt as thou ſhalt wane, ſo faſt thou grow'ſt,
In one of thine, from that which thou departeſt;
And that freſh Blood which youngly thou beſtow'ſt,
Thou maiſt call thine, when thou from Youth converteſt:
Herein lives Wiſdom, Beauty, and Increaſe;
Without this, Folly, Age, and cold Decay;
If all were minded ſo, the Times ſhould ceaſe,
And threeſcore Years would make the World away:
Let thoſe, whom Nature hath not made for Store,
Harſh, featurleſs, and rude, barrenly periſh:

Look

Look whom ſhe beſt indow'd, ſhe gave thee more;
Which bounteous Gift thou ſhouldſt in Bounty cheriſh:
She carv'd thee for her Seal, and ment thereby
Thou ſhouldſt print more, not let that Copy die.

When I do count the Clock, that tells the Time,
And ſee the brave Day ſunk in hidious Night;
When I behold the Violet paſt Prime,
And ſable Curls are ſilver'd o'er with White;
When lofty Trees I ſee barren of Leaves,
Which erſt from Heat did canopy the Herd,
And Summer's Green all girded up in Sheaves,
Born on the Bier with white and briſtly Beard:
Then of thy Beauty do I queſtion make,
That thou among the Waſtes of Time muſt go;
Since Sweets and Beauties do themſelves forſake,
And die as faſt as they ſee others grow,
And nothing 'gainſt Time's Sithe can make Defence,
Save breed to brave him, when he takes thee hence.

Falſe Belief.

WHEN my Love ſwears that ſhe is made of Truth,
I do believe her (tho I know ſhe lyes)
That ſhe might think me ſome untutor'd Youth,
Unskilful in the World's falſe Forgeries.
Thus vainly thinking, that ſhe thinks me young,
Altho I know my Years be paſt the beſt:
I ſmiling, credit her falſe-ſpeaking Tongue,
Outfacing Faults in Love with Love's ill Reſt.
But wherefore ſays my Love, that ſhe is Young?
And wherefore ſay not I, that I am old?
O! Love's beſt Habit is a ſmoothing Tongue,
And Age (in Love) loves not to have Years told.

Therefore

Therefore I'll lye with Love, and Love with me;
Since that our Faults in Love thus ſmother'd be.

A Temptation.

TWO Loves I have, of Comfort, and Deſpair,
That like two Spirits do ſuggeſt me ſtill;
My better Angel is a Man (right fair)
My worſer Spirit a Woman (colour'd ill.)
To win me ſoon to Hell, my Female Evil
Tempteth my better Angel from my Side;
And would corrupt my Saint to be a Devil,
Wooing his Purity with her fair Pride.
And whether, that my Angel be turn'd Fiend,
Suſpect I may, yet not directly tell;
For being both to me, both to each Friend,
I gheſs one Angle in another's Hell.
The Truth I ſhall not know, but live in Doubt,
Till my bad Angel fire my good one out.

Faſt and Looſe.

DID not the heavenly Rhetorick of thine Eye,
'Gainſt whom the World could not hold Argument,
Perſwade my Heart to this falſe Perjury?
Vows for thee broke deſerve not Puniſhment.
A Woman I forſwore: But I will prove,
Thou being a Goddeſs, I forſwore not thee;
My Vow was earthly, thou a heavenly Love,
Thy Grace being gain'd, cures all Diſgrace in me.
My Vow was Breath, and Breath a Vapour is;
Then thou fair Sun, that on this Earth doth ſhine,

Exhale

Exhale this Vapour Vow, in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no Fault of mine.
If by me broke, what Fool is not ſo wiſe
To break an Oath to win a Paradiſe?

True Content.

SO is it not with me, as with that Muſe,
Stirr'd by a painted Beauty to his Verſe,
Who Heaven it ſelf for Ornament doth uſe,
And every Fair with his Fair doth rehearſe,
Making a Complement of proud Compare
With Sun and Moon, with Earth and Seas rich Gems,
With April's firſt-born Flowers, and all things rare,
That Heaven's Air in this huge Rondure hems.
O! let me true in Love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my Love is as fair
As any Mother's Child, tho not ſo bright
As thoſe Gold Candels fix'd in Heaven's Air.
Let them ſay more, that like of Hear-ſay well;
I will not praiſe, that purpoſe not to ſell.

A baſhful Lover.

AS an unperfect Actor on the Stage,
Who with his Fear is put beſides his Part;
Or ſome fierce Thing repleat with too much Rage,
Whoſe Strength abundant weakens his own Heart;
So I, for fear of Truſt forget to ſay,
The perfect Ceremony of Love's Right,
And in mine own Love's Strength ſeem to decay,
O'er-charg'd with Burthen of mine own Love's Might.

O! let my Looks be then the Eloquence,
And dumb Preſagers of my ſpeaking Breaſt,
Who plead for Love, and look for Recompence,
More than that Tongue, that more hath more expreſt.
O! learn to read what ſilent Love hath writ;
To hear with Eyes belongs to Love's fine Wit.

Strong Conceit.

MY Glaſs ſhall not perſwade me I am Old,
So long as Youth and thou art of one Date;
But when in thee Time's Sorrows I behold,
Then look I Death my Days ſhould expiate.
For all that Beauty, that doth cover thee,
Is but the ſeemly Rayment of my Heart,
Which in thy Breaſt doth live, as thine in me;
How can I then be elder than thou art?
O! therefore, Love, be of thy ſelf ſo wary,
As I not for my ſelf, but for thee, will,
Bearing thy Heart, which I will keep ſo chary,
As tender Nurſe her Babe from faring ill.
Preſume not on thy Heart when mine is ſlain,
Thou gav'ſt me thine, not to give back again.

A ſweet Provocation.

SWEET Cytherea, ſitting by a Brook,
With young Adonis, lovely, freſh, and green,
Did court the Lad with many a lovely Look;
Such Looks, as none could look but Beauty's Queen.
She told him Stories, to delight his Ears;
She ſhow'd him Favours, to allure his Eye;

To

To win his Heart, ſhe toucht him here and there;
Touches ſo ſoft ſtill conquer Chaſtity.
But whether unripe Years did want Conceit,
Or he refuſ'd to take her figur'd Proffer;
The tender Nibbler wou'd not touch the Bait,
But ſmile, and jeſt, at every gentle Offer.
Then fell ſhe on her back, fair Queen! and toward;
He roſe and ran away, ah Fool! too froward.

A conſtant Vow.

IF Love make me forſworn, how ſhall I ſwear to love?
O! never Faith cou'd hold, if not to Beauty vow'd:
Tho to my ſelf forſworn, to thee I'll conſtant prove;
Thoſe thoughts to me like Oaks, to thee like Oſiers bow'd.
Study his byas Leaves, and makes his Book thine Eyes,
Where all thoſe Pleaſures live, that Art can comprehend.
If Knowledge be the Mark, to know Thee ſhall ſuffice:
Well learned is that Tongue, that well can thee commend!
All ignorant that Soul, that ſees thee without Wonder,
Which is to me ſome Praiſe, that I thy Parts admire.
Thine Eye Jove's Lightning ſeems, thy Voice his dreadful Thunder,
Which (not to Anger bent) is Muſick, and ſweet Fire.
Celeſtial as thou art, O! do not love that Wrong!
To ſing Heaven's Praiſe with ſuch an earthly Tongue.

The Exchange.

A Woman's Face, with Nature's own Hand painted,
Haſt thou the Maſter, Miſtreſs of my Paſſion;
A Woman's gentle Heart, but not acquainted
With ſhifting Change, as is falſe Womens Faſhion;

An Eye more bright than theirs, leſs falſe in rowling,
Gilding the Object whereupon it gazeth.
A Man in hew all Hews in his controuling,
Which ſteals Mens Eyes, and Womens Souls amazeth:
And for a Woman wer't thou firſt created,
Till Nature as ſhe wrought thee, fell a doating,
And by Addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing, to my Purpoſe nothing.
But ſince ſhe prick'd thee out for Womens Pleaſure,
Mine, be thy Love, and thy Love's Uſe, their Treaſure.

A Diſconſolation.

WEARY with Toil, I haſte me to my Bed,
The dear Repoſe for Limbs with Travail tired;
But then begins a Journey in my Head
To work my Mind, when Bodies Work's expired.
For then my Thoughts (far from where I abide)
Intend a zealous Pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping Eye-lids open wide,
Looking on Darkneſs, which the Blind doe ſee.
Save that my Soul's imaginary Sight
Preſents their Shadow to my ſightleſs View;
Which like a Jewel (hung in ghaſtly Night)
Makes black Night beauteous, and her old Face new.
Lo! thus by Day my Limbs, by Night my Mind,
For thee, and for my ſelf no Quiet find.

How can I then return in happy Plight,
That am debar'd the Benefit of Reſt?
When Days Oppreſſion is not eas'd by Night,
But Day by Night, and Night by Day oppreſt?

And

And each (tho Enemies to others reign)
Do in Conſent ſhake Hands to torture me;
The one by Toil, the other to complain,
How far I toil, ſtill farther off from thee.
I tell the Day, to pleaſe him, thou art bright,
And do'ſt him grace when Clouds do blot the Heaven:
So flatter I the ſwart-complexion'd Night,
When ſparkling Stars tweer out, thou guild'ſt the Even.
But Day doth daily draw my Sorrows longer,
And Night doth nightly make Grief's length ſeem ſtronger.

When in Diſgrace with Fortune and Mens Eyes,
I all alone beweep my out-caſt State,
And trouble deaf Heaven with my bootleſs Cries,
And look upon my ſelf, and curſe my Fate;
Wiſhing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featur'd like him, like him with Friends poſſeſt;
Deſiring this Man's Art, and that Man's Scope,
With what I moſt enjoy, contented leaſt.
Yet in theſe Thoughts my ſelf almoſt deſpiſing,
Haply I think on thee, and then my State,
(Like to the Lark at break of Day ariſing)
From ſullen Earth ſings Hymns at Heaven's Gate.
For thy ſweet Love remembred, ſuch Wealth brings,
That then I ſcorn to change my State with Kings.

Cruel Deceit.

SCARCE had the Sun dry'd up the dewy Morn,
And ſcarce the Herd gone to the Hedge for Shade;
When Cytherea (all in Love forlorn)
A longing Tarriance for Adonis made,
Under an Oſier growing by a Brook,
A Brook, where Adon us'd to cool his Spleen.

Hot

Hot was the Day, ſhe hotter that did look
For his Approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his Mantle by,
And ſtood ſtark naked on the Brook's green Brim:
The Sun lookt on the World with glorious Eye,
Yet not ſo wiſtly, as this Queen on him.
He ſpying her, bounc'd in (whereas he ſtood)
Oh! Jove (quoth ſhe) why was not I a Flood?

The Unconſtant Lover.

FAIR is my Love, but not ſo fair as fickle;
Mild as a Dove, but neither true nor truſty;
Brighter than Glaſs, and yet as Glaſs is brittle;
Softer than Wax, and yet as Iron ruſty:
A Lilly Pale, with Damask Dye to grace her;
None fairer, nor none falſer to deface her.

Her Lips to mine how often hath ſhe join'd,
Between each Kiſs her Oaths of true Love ſwearing?
How many Tales to pleaſe me hath ſhe coin'd,
Dreading my Love, the Loſs thereof ſtill fearing?
Yet in the midſt of all her pure Proteſtings,
Her Faith, her Oaths, her Tears, and all were Jeſtings.

She burnt with Love, as Straw with Fire flaming;
She burnt out Love, as ſoon as Straw out burning:
She fram'd the Love, and yet ſhe foil'd the Framing;
She bad Love laſt, and yet ſhe fell a turning.
Was this a Lover, or a Letcher whether?
Bad at the beſt, though excellent in neither.

The

The Benefit of Friendſhip.

WHEN to the Seſſions of ſweet ſilent Thought
I ſummon up Remembrance of things paſt,
I ſigh the lack of many a Thing I ſought,
And with old Woes new wail my dear Time's waſte.
Then can I drown an Eye (unus'd to flow)
For precious Friends hid in Death's dateleſs Night,
And weep afreſh Love's long-ſince cancell'd Woe,
And moan th' Expence of many a vaniſh'd Sight.
Then can I grieve at Grievances foregone,
And heavily from Woe to Woe tell o'er
The ſad Account of fore-bemoaned Moan,
Which I new pay, as if not paid before.
But if the while I think on thee (dear Friend)
All Loſſes are reſtor'd, and Sorrows end.

Thy Boſom is indeared with all Hearts,
Which I by lacking have ſuppoſed dead;
And there reigns Love and all Love's loving Parts,
And all thoſe Friends, which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obſequious Tear
Hath dear religious Love ſtolen from mine Eye,
As Intereſt of the Dead, which now appear
But things remov'd, that hidden in thee lie:
Thou art the Grave where buried Love doth live,
Hung with the Trophies of my Lovers gone,
Who all their Parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many, now is thine alone.
Their Images I lov'd, I view in thee,
And Thou (all they) haſt all the all of Me.

If thou ſurvive my well-contented Day,
When that Churl Death my Bones with Duſt ſhall cover;

And

And ſhalt by Fortune once more re-ſurvey
Theſe poor rude Lines of thy deceaſed Lover:
Compare them with the bett'ring of the Time,
And though they be out-ſtript by every Pen,
Reſerve them for my Love, not for their Rhime,
Exceeded by the height of happier Men.
Oh! then vouchſafe me but this loving Thought,
Had my Friend's Muſe grown with this growing Age,
A dearer Birth than this his Love had brought
To march in Ranks of better Equipage:
But ſince he died, and Poets better prove,
Theirs for their Stile I'll read, His for His Love.

Friendly Concord.

IF Muſick and ſweet Poetry agree,
As they muſt needs (the Siſter and the Brother)
Then muſt the Love be great 'twixt thee and me,
Becauſe thou lov'ſt the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is Dear, whoſe heavenly Touch
Upon the Lute, doth raviſh human Senſe:
Spencer to me, whoſe deep Conceit is ſuch,
As paſſing all Conceit, needs no Defence.
Thou lov'ſt to hear the ſweet melodious Sound,
That Phœbus' Lute (the Queen of Muſick) makes;
And I in deep Delight am chiefly drown'd,
When as himſelf to Singing he betakes.
One God is God of both (as Poets fain)
One Knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

Inhumanity

Inhumanity.

FAIR was the Morn, when the fair Queen of Love,
Paler for Sorrow than her milkwhite Dove,
For Adon's ſake, a Youngſter proud and wild,
Her Stand ſhe takes upon a ſteep-up Hill.
Anon Adonis comes with Horn and Hounds;
She, ſilly Queen, with more than Love's good Will,
Forbad the Boy he ſhould not paſs thoſe Grounds:
Once (quoth ſhe) did I ſee a fair ſweet Youth
Here in theſe Brakes, deep wounded with a Boar,
Deep in the Thigh a Spectacle of Ruth;
See in my Thigh (quoth ſhe) here was the Sore:
She ſhewed hers, he ſaw more Wounds than one,
And bluſhing fled, and left her all alone.

A Congratulation.

HOW can my Muſe want Subject to invent,
While thou doſt breath, that pour'ſt into my Verſe
Thine own ſweet Argument, too excellent,
For every vulgar Paper to rehearſe.
Oh! give thy ſelf the Thanks if ought in me,
Worthy Peruſal, ſtand againſt thy ſight;
For who's ſo dull, that cannot write to thee,
When thou thy ſelf doſt give Invention Light?
Be thou the tenth Muſe, ten times more in worth,
Than thoſe old Nine, which Rhimers invocate;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal Numbers to out-live long Date.
If my ſlight Muſe do pleaſe theſe curious Days,
The Pain be mine, but thine ſhall be the Praiſe.

Oh! how thy Worth with Manners may I ſing,
When thou art all the better Part of me?
What can mine own Praiſe to mine own ſelf bring?
And what is't but mine own when I praiſe thee?
Even for this, let us divided live,
And our dear Love loſe Name of ſingle one;
That by this Separation I may give
That due to thee, which thou deſerv'ſt alone.
Oh Abſence! what a Torment wouldſt thou prove!
Were't not that thy ſour Leiſure gave ſweet Leave,
To entertain the Time with Thoughts of Love,
Who Time and Thoughts ſo ſweetly doſt deceive;
And that thou teacheſt how to make one twain,
By praiſing him here, who doth hence remain.

Take all my Loves, my Love, yea take them all,
What haſt thou then more, than thou hadſt before?
No Love, my Love, that thou may'ſt true Love call,
All mine was thine, before thou hadſt this more.
Then if for my Love, thou my Love receiveſt,
I cannot blame thee, for my Love thou uſeſt;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thy ſelf decieveſt
By wilful Taſte of what thy ſelf refuſeſt.
I do forgive thy Robb'ry, gentle Thief,
Although thou ſteal thee all my Poverty;
And yet Love knows it is a greater Grief
To bear Love's Wrong, than Hate's known Injury.
Laſcivious Grace, in whom all Ill well ſhows,
Kill me with Spight, yet we muſt not be Foes.

Loſs and Gain.

THOSE pretty Wrongs that Liberty commits,
When I am ſometimes abſent from thy Heart,
Thy Beauty, and thy Years full well befits,
For ſtill Temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beautious thou art, and therefore to be aſſailed;
And when a Woman woos, what Woman's Son
Will ſourely leave her till he have prevailed?
Ay me! but yet thou might'ſt my Seat forbear,
And chide thy Beauty and thy ſtraying Youth,
Who lead thee in their Riot even there,
Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold Truth;
Hers by thy Beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine by thy Beauty being falſe to me.

That thou haſt her, it is not all my Grief,
And yet it may be ſaid, I lov'd her dearly;
That ſhe hath thee is of my wayling Chief,
A Loſs in Love that touches me more nearly.
Loving Offenders, thus I will excuſe ye;
Thou doſt love her, becauſe thou know'ſt I love her,
And for my ſake even ſo doth ſhe abuſe me,
Suffering my Friend for my ſake to approve her.
If I loſe thee, my Loſs is my Love's Gain,
And loſing her, my Friend hath found that Loſs:
Both find each other, and I loſe both twain,
And both for my ſake lay on me this Croſs.
But here's the Joy, my Friend and I are one,
Sweet Flattery, then ſhe loves but me alone.

Fooliſh Diſdain.

VENUS with Adonis ſitting by her,
Under a Mirtle Shade began to woo him:
She told the Youngling how God Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, ſhe fell to him.
Even thus (quoth ſhe) the warlike God embrac'd me,
And then ſhe clipt Adonis in her Arms;
Even thus (quoth ſhe) the warlike God unlac'd me,
As if the Boy ſhould uſe like loving Charms.
Even thus (quoth ſhe) he ſeized on my Lips,
And with her Lips on his did act the Seizure:
And as ſhe fetched Breath away he skips,
And would not take her Meaning, nor her Pleaſure.
Ah! that I had my Lady at this Bay,
To kiſs and clip me, till I run away.

Ancient Antipathy.

CRABBED Age and Youth cannot live together;
Youth is full of Pleaſance, Age is full of Care;
Youth like Summer Morn, Age like Winter Weather;
Youth like Summer brave, Age like Winter bare.
Youth is full of ſport, Age's Breath is ſhort;
Youth is nimble, Age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold, Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and Age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee; Youth, I do adore thee;
O! my Love, my Love is young:
Age, I do defie thee, Oh! ſweet Shepherd, hie thee;
For methinks thou ſtayſt too long.

Beauty's

Beauty's Valuation.

BEAUTY is but a vain and doubtful Good,
A ſhining Gloſs, that fadeth ſuddenly;
A Flower that dies when firſt it 'gins to bud,
A brittle Glaſs, that's broken preſently;
A doubtful Good, a Gloſs, a Glaſs, a Flower,
Loſt, faded, broken, dead within an Hour.

And as Goods loſt are ſeld or never found;
As faded Gloſs no rubbing will refreſh;
As Flowers dead lie withered on the Ground;
As broken Glaſs no Cement can redreſs:
So Beauty blemiſht once, for ever's loſt,
In ſpite of Phyſick, Painting, Pain and Coſt.

Melancholy Thoughts.

IF the dull Subſtance of my Fleſh were Thought,
Injurious Diſtance ſhould not ſtop my Way;
For then, deſpight of Space, I would be brought
To Limits far remote, where thou doſt ſtay.
No matter then, although my Foot did ſtand
Upon the fartheſt Earth remov'd from thee,
For nimble Thought can jump both Sea and Land,
As ſoon as think the Place where he would be.
But ah! Thought kills me, that I am not Thought,
To leap large Lengths of Miles when thou art gone;
But that ſo much of Earth and Water wrought,
I muſt attend Time's Leiſure with my Moan;
Receiving nought by Elements ſo ſlow,
But heavy Tears, Badges of either's Woe.

The other two, ſlight Air, and purging Fire,
Are both with thee, where ever I abide;
The firſt my Thought, the other my Deſire;
Theſe preſent, abſent, with ſwift Motion ſlide
For when theſe quicker Elements are gone
In tender Embaſſy of Love to thee,
My Life being made of Four, with two alone
Sinks down to Death, oppreſt with Melancholy;
Until Life's Compoſition be recured,
By thoſe ſwift Meſſengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again aſſured
Of their fair Health, recounting it to me.
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I ſend them back again, and ſtraight grow ſad,

Love's Loſs.

SWEET Roſe, fair Flower, untimely pluck'd, ſoon faded,
Pluck'd in the Bud, and faded in the Spring;
Bright orient Pearl, alack! too timely ſhaded,
Fair Creature, kill'd too ſoon by Death's ſharp Sting;
Like a green Plumb, that hangs upon a Tree,
And falls, thro' Wind, before the Fall ſhould be.

I weep for thee, and yet no Cauſe I have,
For why? Thou lefts me nothing in thy Will;
And yet thou lefts me more than I did crave,
For why? I craved nothing of thee ſtill:
O yes (dear Friend) I Pardon crave of thee,
Thy Diſcontent thou didſt bequeath to me.

Love's

Love's Relief.

FULL many a glorious Morning have I ſeen,
Flatter the Mountain Tops with ſoveraign Eye,
Kiſſing with golden Face the Meadows green,
Gilding pale Streams with heavenly Alchumy;
Anon permit the baſeſt Clouds to ride,
With ugly Rack on his celeſtial Face,
And from the forlorn World his Viſage hide,
Stealing unſeen to Weſt with this Diſgrace.
Even ſo my Sun one early Morn did ſhine,
With all triumphant Splendor on my Brow;
But out, alack! he was but one Hour mine,
The Region Cloud hath mask'd him from me now.
Yet him for this my Love no whit diſdaineth,
Suns of the World may ſtain, when Heaven's Sun ſtaineth.

Why didſt thou promiſe ſuch a beauteous Day,
And make me travail forth without my Cloak,
To let baſe Clouds o'er-take me in my Way,
Hiding thy Bravery in their rotten Smoke?
'Tis not enough, that thro' the Cloud thou break,
To dry the Rain on my ſtorm-beaten Face;
For no Man well of ſuch a Salve can ſpeak,
That heals the Wound, and cures not the Diſgrace:
Nor can thy Shame give Phyſick to my Grief,
Tho thou repent, yet I have ſtill the Loſs;
Th' Offender's Sorrow lends but weak Relief
To him, that beareth ſtrong Offences Loſs.
Ah! but thoſe Tears are Pearl which thy Love ſheds,
And they are rich, and ranſom all ill Deeds.

No

No more be griev'd at that, which thou haſt done;
Roſes have Thorns, and ſilver Fountains Mud,
Clouds and Eclipſes ſtain both Moon and Sun,
And loathſom Canker lives in ſweeteſt Bud.
All Men make Faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy Treſpaſs with Compare,
My ſelf corrupting ſalving thy Amiſs,
Excuſing their Sins more, than their Sins are:
For to my ſenſual Fault I bring in Senſe,
Thy adverſe Party is thy Advocate,
And 'gainſt my ſelf a lawful Plea commence;
Such civil War is in my Love and Hate,
That I an Acceſſary needs muſt be
To that ſweet Thief, which ſorely robs from me.

Unanimity.

LET me confeſs, that we two muſt be twain,
Although our undivided Loves are one;
So ſhall thoſe Blots, that do with me remain,
Without thy Help, by me be born alone.
In our two Loves there is but one Reſpect,
Though in our Lives a ſeparable Spight,
Which though it alter not Love's ſole Effect,
Yet doth it ſteal ſweet Hours from Love's Delight.
I may not ever-more acknowledge thee,
Leaſt my bewailed Guilt ſhould do thee Shame;
Nor thou with publick Kindneſs honour me,
Unleſs thou take that Honour from thy Name.
But do not ſo, I love thee in ſuch ſort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good Report.

As

As a decrepit Father takes Delight
To ſee his active Child do Deeds of Youth,
So I made lame by Fortune's deareſt Spight,
Take all my Comfort of thy Worth and Truth.
For whether Beauty, Birth, or Wealth, or Wit,
Or any of theſe all, or all, or more,
Intitled in their Parts, do crowned ſit,
I make my Love ingrafted to this Store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor deſpis'd,
Whilſt that this Shadow doth ſuch Subſtance give,
That I in thy Abundance am ſuffic'd,
And by a Part of all thy Glory live:
Look what is beſt, that beſt I wiſh in thee,
This Wiſh I have, then ten times happy Me.

Loath to depart.

GOOD Night, good Reſt, ah! neither be my Share!
She bad good Night, that kept my Reſt away;
And daſt me to a Cabben hang'd with Care,
To deſcant on the Doubts of my Decay.
Farewel (quoth ſhe) and come again to Morrow:
Farewel I could not, for I ſupt with Sorrow.

Yet at my Parting ſweetly did ſhe ſmile,
In Scorn, or Friendſhip, nill I conſter whether:
It may be ſhe joy'd to jeſt at my Exile;
It may be again to make me wander thither.
Wander (a Word) for Shadows like my ſelf,
As take the Pain, but cannot pluck the Pelf.

Lord! how mine Eyes throw Gazes to the Eaſt!
My Heart doth charge the Watch; the Morning Riſe

Doth ſcite each moving Senſe from idle Reſt,
Not daring truſt the Office of mine Eyes.
While Philomela ſits and ſings, I ſit and mark,
And wiſh her Lays were tuned like the Lark.

For ſhe doth welcome Day-light with her Ditty,
And drives away darkdreaming Night:
The Night ſo packt, I poſt unto my Pretty;
Heart hath his Hope, and Eyes their wiſhed Sight;
Sorrow chang'd to Solace, and Solace mixt with Sorrow,
For why, ſhe ſigh'd, and bad me come to morrow.

Were I with her, the Night would poſt too ſoon;
But now are Minutes added to the Hours:
To ſpite me now, each Minute ſeems an Hour,
Yet not for me, ſhine Sun to ſuccour Flowers.
Pack Night, peep Day, good Day, of Night now borrow,
Short Night, to Night, and length thy ſelf to Morrow.

A Maſter-piece.

MINE Eye hath play'd the Painter, and hath ſteel'd
Thy Beauty's Form in Table of my Heart:
My Body is the Frame, wherein 'tis held,
And Perſpective it is beſt Painters Art.
For thro the Painter muſt you ſee his Skill,
To find where your true Image pictur'd lies,
Which in my Boſom's Shop is hanging ſtill,
That hath his Windows glazed with thine Eyes.
Now ſee what good Turns Eyes for Eyes have done,
Mine Eyes have drawn thy Shape, and thine for me
Are Windows to my Breaſt, where thro the Sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee.

Yet Eyes this Cunning want to grace their Art,
They draw but what they ſee, know not the Heart.

Happineſs in Content.

LET thoſe, who are in Favour with their Stars,
Of publick Honour, and proud Titles boaſt;
Whilſt I, whom Fortune of ſuch Triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joye in that, I honour moſt.
Great Princes Favourites their fair Leaves ſpread;
But as the Marigold at the Sun's Eye,
And in themſelves their Pride lies buried;
For at a Frown they in their Glory die.
The painful Warriour famouſed for Worth,
After a thouſand Victories once foil'd,
Is from the Book of Honour razed quite,
And all the reſt forgot, for which he toil'd.
Then happy I that love, and am beloved,
Where I may not remove, nor be removed.

A dutiful Meſſage.

LORD of my Love, to whom in Vaſſalage
Thy Merit hath my Duty ſtrongly knit;
To thee I ſend this written Ambaſſage,
To witneſs Duty, not to ſhew my Wit.
Duty ſo great, with Wit ſo poor as mine,
May make ſeem bare, in wanting Words to ſhew it;
But that I hope ſome good Conceit of thine
In my Soul's Thought (all naked) will beſtow it.

Till whatſoever Star, that guides my moving,
Points on me graciouſly with fair Aſpect,
And puts Apparrel on my tattered Loving,
To ſhow me worthy of their ſweet Reſpect.
Then may I dear to boaſt how I do love thee,
Till then, not ſhow my Head, where thou may'ſt prove me.

Go and come quickly.

HOW heavy do I journey on the Way,
When that I ſeek (my weary Travels End)
Doth teach that Eaſe and that Repoſe to ſay,
Thus far the Miles are meaſur'd from thy Friend?
The Beaſt, that bears me, tired with my Wo,
Plods dully on, to bear that Weight in me,
As if by ſome Inſtinct the Wretch did know
His Rider lov'd not ſpeed, being made from thee.
The bloody Spur cannot provoke him on,
That ſometimes Anger thruſts into his Hide;
Which heavily he anſwers with a Groan,
More ſharp to me, than ſpurring to his Side:
For that ſame Groan doth put this in my Mind,
My Grief lies onward, and my Joy behind.

Thus can my Love excuſe the ſlow Offence
Of my dull Bearer, when from thee I ſpeed.
From where thou art, why ſhould I haſte me thence?
Till I return, of poſting is no need.
O! what Excuſe will my poor Beaſt then find,
When ſwift Extremity can ſeem but ſlow?
Then ſhould I ſpur tho mounted on the Wind,
In winged Speed no Motion ſhall I know.
Then can no Horſe with my Deſire keep Pace,
Therefore Deſire (of perfect Love being made)

Shall

Shall neigh no dull Fleſh in his fiery Race,
But Love for Love, thus ſhall excuſe my Jade.
Since from thee going, he went wilful ſlow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

Two faithful Friends.

MINE Eye and Heart are at a mortal War,
How to divide the Conqueſt of thy Sight:
Mine Eye, my Heart their Pictures Sight would bar,
My Heart, mine Eye the Freedom of that Right;
My Heart doth plead, that thou in him doſt lye?
(A Cloſet never pierc'd with Chriſtal Eyes)
But the Defendant doth that Plea deny,
And ſays in him their fair Appearance lies.
To ſide this Title, is impannelled
A Queſt of Thoughts, all Tenants to the Heart,
And by their Verdict is determined
The clear Eyes Moiety, and the dear Heart's Part:
As thus; mine Eyes due is their outward Part,
And my Heart's Right their inward Love of Heart.

Betwixt mine Eye and Heart a League is took,
And each doth good Turns now unto the other:
When that mine Eye is famiſht for a Look,
Or Heart in love with Sighs himſelf doth ſmother;
With my Love's Picture then my Eye doth feaſt,
And to the painted Banquet bids my Heart:
Another Time mine Eye is my Heart's Gueſt,
And in his Thoughts of Love doth ſhare a Part.
So either by the Picture of my Love,
Thy ſelf away, are preſent ſtill with me,
For thou not farther than my Thoughts canſt move,
And I am ſtill with them, and they with thee.

Or

Or if they ſleep, thy Picture in my Sight
Awakes my Heart, to Heart's and Eyes Delight.

Careleſs Neglect.

HOW careful was I, when I took my Way,
Each Trifle under trueſt Bars to thruſt,
That to my Uſe it might unuſed ſtay
From Hands of Falſhood, in ſure Wards of Truſt?
But thou, to whom my Jewels Trifles are,
Moſt worthy Comfort, now my greateſt Grief;
Thou beſt of Deareſt, and mine only Care,
Art left the Prey of every vulgar Thief.
Thee have I not lockt up in any Cheſt,
Save where thou art not (though I feel thou art)
Within the gentle Cloſure of my Breaſt,
From whence at Pleaſure thou maiſt come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be ſtol'n, I fear;
For Truth proves thieviſh for a Prize ſo dear.

Stout Reſolution.

AGAINST that time (if ever that time come)
When I ſhall ſee thee frown on my Defects,
When as thy Love hath caſt his utmoſt Sum,
Call'd to that Audit by advis'd Reſpects;
Againſt that time, when thou ſhalt ſtrangely paſs,
And ſcarcely greet me with that Sun, thine Eye,
When Love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall Reaſons find of ſettled Gravity:

Againſt

Againſt that time do I inſconce me here
Within the Knowledge of mine own Deſert,
And this my Hand againſt my ſelf uprear,
To guard the lawful Reaſons on thy Part;
To leave poor me thou haſt the Strength of Laws,
Since why to love, I can alledge no Cauſe.

A Duel.

IT was a Lording's Daughter,
The faireſt one of three,
That liked of her Maſter, as well as well might be;
Till looking on an Engliſhman,
The faireſt Eye could ſee,
Her Fancy fell a turning.

Long was the Combat doubtful,
That Love with Love did fight,
To leave the Maſter loveleſs, or kill the gallant Knight.
To put in practice either, alas! it was a Spite
Unto the ſilly Damſel.

But one muſt be refuſed, more mickle was the Pain,
That nothing could be uſed, to turn them both to Gain;
For of the two the truſty Knight
Was wounded with Diſdain,
Alas! ſhe could not help it.

Thus Art with Arms contending, was Victor of the Day,
Which by a Gift of Learning, did bear the Maid away.
Then lullaby! the learned Man hath got the Lady gay,
For now my Song is ended.

Love-ſick.

ON a Day (alack the Day)
Love, whoſe Month was ever May,
Spied a Bloſſom paſſing Fair,
Playing in the wanton Air.
Through the velvet Leaves the Wind,
All unſeen 'gan Paſſage find,
That the Lover (ſick to Death)
Wiſht himſelf the Heaven's Breath.
Air (quoth he) thy Cheeks may blow;
Air! would I might triumph ſo!
But (alas) my Hand hath ſworn,
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy Throne;
Vow (alack) for Youth unmeet,
Youth, ſo apt to pluck a Sweet;
Thou, for whom ev'n Jove would ſwear
Juno but an Æthiope were,
And deny himſelf for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy Love.

Love's Labour loſt.

MY Flocks feed not, my Ewes breed not,
My Rams ſpeed not, all is amiſs:
Love is dying, Faith's defying,
Heart's denying, Cauſer of this.

All my merry Jiggs are quite forgot,
All my Lady's Love is loſt (God wot)
Where her Faith was firmly fixt in Love,
There a Nay is plac'd without Remove.

One

One ſilly Croſs wrought all my Loſs ;
O ! frowning Fortune, curſed fickle Dame !
For now I ſee Inconſtancy,
More in Women, than in Men remain.

In black mourn I, all Fears ſcorn I,
Love hath forlorn me living in Thrall :
Heart is bleeding, all Help needing ;
O ! cruel Speeding, fraughted with Gall !
My Shepherd's Pipe can ſound no Deal,
My Weather's Bell rings doleful Knell,
My curtail Dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays nor at all, but ſeems afraid ;
With Sighs ſo deep, procures to weep,
In howling wiſe, to ſee my doleful Plight ;
How Sighs reſound through heartleſs Ground,
Like a thouſand vanquiſht Men in bloody Fight.

Clear Wells ſpring not, ſweet Birds ſing not,
Green Plants bring not forth their Die :
Herds ſtand weeping, Flocks all ſleeping,
Nymphs black peeping fearfully.
All our Pleaſure known to us poor Swains,
All our merry Meetings on the Plains,
All our Evening Sport from us is fled ;
All our Love is loſt, for Love is dead.
Farewell, ſweet Love, thy like ne'er was,
For a ſweet Content the Cauſe of all my Woe ;
Poor Coridon muſt live alone,
Other Help for him I ſee that there is none.

Wholeſome Counſel.

WHEN as thine Eye hath choſe the Dame,
And ſtal'd the Deer, thou ſhouldſt ſtrike;
Let Reaſon rule things worthy Blame,
As well as Fancy (partly all might)
Take Counſel of ſome wiſer Head,
Neither too young, nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'ſt thy Tale to tell,
Smooth not thy Tongue with filed Talk;
Leaſt ſhe ſome ſubtil Practiſe ſmell.
A Cripple ſoon can find a Halt!
But plainly ſay thou lov'ſt her well,
And ſet her Perſon forth to Sale.

What though her frowning Brows be bent?
Her cloudy Looks will calm e'er Night;
And then too late ſhe will repent,
That thus diſſembled her Delight:
And twice deſire e'er it be Day
That, which with Scorn ſhe put away.

What though ſhe ſtrive to try her Strength,
And ban, and braul, and ſay thee nay?
Her feeble Force will yield at length,
When Craft hath taught her thus to ſay:
Had Women been ſo ſtrong as Men,
In Faith, you had not had it then.

And to her Will frame all thy Ways,
Spare not to ſpend, and chiefly there,
Where thy Deſert may merit Praiſe
By ringing in thy Lady's Ear.

The ſtrongeſt Caſtle, Tower, and Town,
The golden Bullet beats it down.

Serve always with aſſured Truſt,
And in thy Sute be humble, true;
Unleſs thy Lady prove unjuſt,
Pleaſe never thou to chuſe a New.
When time ſhall ſerve, be thou not ſlack,
To proffer though ſhe put it back.

The Wiles and Guiles, that Women work,
Diſſembled with an outward Shew;
The Tricks and Toys, that in them lurk,
The Cock that treads them ſhall not know.
Have you not heard it ſaid full oft,
A Woman's Nay doth ſtand for nought?

Think Women ſtill to ſtrive with Men,
To ſin, and never for to ſaint.
There is no Heaven, (by Holy then)
When Time with Age ſhall them attaint.
Were Kiſſes all the Joys in Bed,
One Woman would another wed.

But ſoft enough, too much I fear,
Leaſt that my Miſtreſs hear my Song;
She will not ſtick to round me on th' Ear,
To teach my Tongue to be ſo long.
Yet will ſhe bluſh, here be it ſaid,
To hear her Secrets ſo bewraid.

Sat fuiſſe.

SIN of Self-love poſſeſſeth all mine Eye,
And all my Soul, and all my every Part;
And for this Sin there is no Remedy,
It is ſo grounded inward in my Heart.
Methinks no Face ſo gracious is, as mine,
No Shape ſo true, no Truth of ſuch Account;
And for my ſelf mine own Worth do define,
As I all other in all Worths ſurmount.
But when my Glaſs ſhews me my ſelf indeed,
Beated and chop'd with tann'd Antiquity,
Mine own Self-love quite contrary I read,
Self, ſo ſelf-loving, were Iniquity:
'Tis thee (my Self) that for my ſelf I praiſe,
Painting my Age with Beauty of thy Days.

A living Monument.

NOT Marble, nor the guilded Monument
Of Princes, ſhall out-live this powerful Rhime;
But you ſhall ſhine more bright in theſe Contents,
Than unſwept Stone, beſmeer'd with ſluttiſh Time.
When waſteful War ſhall Statues overturn,
And Broils root out the Work of Maſonry;
Nor Mars his Sword, nor War's quick Fire ſhall burn
The living Record of your Memory.
'Gainſt Death, and all oblivious Enmity,
Shall you pace forth, your Praiſe ſhall ſtill find Room,
Even in the Eyes of all Poſterity,
That wear this World out to the ending Doom.
So till the Judgment, that your ſelf ariſe,
You live in this, and dwell in Lovers Eyes.

Familiarity

Familiarity breeds Contempt.

SO am I as the Rich, whoſe bleſſed Key
Can bring him to his ſweet up-locked Treaſure,
The which he will not every Hour ſurvey,
For blunting the fine Point of ſeldom Pleaſure.
Therefore are Feaſts ſo ſolemn and ſo rare;
Since ſeldom coming in the long Year ſet,
Like Stones of Worth they thinly placed are,
Or Captain Jewels in the Carconet.
So is the Time, that keeps you, as my Cheſt,
Or as the Wardrobe, which the Robe doth hide,
To make ſome ſpecial Inſtant ſpecial bleſt,
By new unfoulding his impriſon'd Pride.
Bleſſed are you, whoſe Worthineſs gives Scope,
Being had to triumph, being lackt to hope.

Patiens Armatus.

IS it thy Will, thy Image ſhould keep open
My heavy Eye-lids to the weary Night?
Doſt thou deſire my Slumbers ſhou'd be broken,
While Shadows like to thee do mock my Sight?
Is it thy Spirit, that thou ſend'ſt from thee
So far from home, into my Deeds to pry;
To find out Shames and Idle Hours in me,
The Scope and Tenure of thy Jealouſy?
O! no, thy Love tho' much, is not ſo great,
It is my Love, that keeps mine Eye awake;
Mine own true Love, that doth my Reſt defeat,
To play the Watch-man ever for thy ſake.
For thee watch I, whilſt thou doſt wake elſe-where,
From me far off, with others all too near.

A Valediction.

NO longer mourn for me when I am dead,
When you ſhall hear the ſurly, ſullen Bell
Give Warning to the World, that I am fled
From this vile World with vileſt Worms to dwell.
Nay if you read this Line, remember not
The Hand, that writ it; for I love you ſo,
That I in your ſweet Thoughts wou'd be forgot,
If thinking on me then, ſhould make you woe.
O! if (I ſay) you look upon this Verſe,
When I (perhaps) compounded am with Clay,
Do not ſo much as my poor Name rehearſe,
But let your Love even with my Life decay;
Leaſt the wiſe World ſhould look into your Moan,
And mock you with me, after I am gone.

O! leaſt the World ſhould task you to recite,
What Merit liv'd in me, that you ſhould love;
After my Death (dear Love!) forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unleſs you would deviſe ſome vertuous Lye,
To do more for me now, than mine own Deſert,
And hang more Praiſe upon deceaſed I,
Than niggard Truth wou'd willingly impart.
O! leaſt your true Love may ſeem falſe in this,
That you for Love ſpeak well of me untrue;
My Name be buried where my Body is,
And live no more to ſhame nor me, nor you:
For I am ſham'd by that, which I bring forth,
And ſo ſhould you, to love things nothing worth.

But be contented, when that fell Arreſt,
Without all Bail, ſhall carry me away:

My

My Life hath in this Line ſome Intereſt,
Which for Memorial ſtill with thee ſhall ſtay.
When thou revieweſt this, thou doſt review,
The very Part was conſecrate to thee:
The Earth can have but Earth, which is his due;
My Sprite is thine the better Part of me.
So then thou haſt but loſt the Dregs of Life,
The Prey of Worms, my Body being dead;
The Coward Conqueſt of a Wretches Knife,
Too baſe of thee to be remembered.
The Worth of that, is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

Nil magnis Invidia.

THAT thou art blam'd ſhall not be thy Defect,
For Slanders Mark was ever yet the Fair;
The Ornament of Beauty is ſuſpect,
A Crow that flies in Heaven's ſweeteſt Air.
So thou be good, Slander doth but approve
Their Worth the greater being woo'd of Time;
For Canker Vice the ſweeteſt Buds doth love,
And thou preſent'ſt a pure unſtained Prime.
Thou haſt paſt by the Ambuſh of young Days,
Either not aſſail'd, or Victor being charg'd;
Yet this thy Praiſe cannot be ſo thy Praiſe,
To tie up Envy, evermore inlarg'd;
If ſome ſuſpect of Ill, mask not thy Show,
Then thou alone Kingdoms of Hearts ſhouldſt owe.

Love-ſick.

O How I faint, when I of you do write!
Knowing a better Spirit doth uſe your Name,
And in the Praiſe thereof ſpends all his Might,
To make me tongue-ty'd ſpeaking of your Fame.
But ſince your Worth (wide as the Ocean is)
The humble as the proudeſt Sail doth bear,
My ſaucy Bark (inferior far to his)
On your broad Main doth wilfully appear.
Your ſhalloweſt Help will hold me up a-float,
Whilſt he upon your ſoundleſs Deep doth ride;
Or (being wrackt) I am a worthleſs Boat,
He of tall Building, and of goodly Pride.
Then if he thrive, and I be caſt away,
The worſt was this, my Love was my Decay.

Or ſhall I live your Epitaph to make?
Or you ſurvive when I in Earth am rotten?
From hence your Memory Death cannot take,
Although in me each Part will be forgotten.
Your Name from hence immortal Life ſhall have,
Tho I (once gone) to all the World muſt dye;
The Earth can yield me but a common Grave,
When you intombed in Mens Eyes ſhall lie;
Your Monument ſhall be my gentle Verſe,
Which Eyes not yet created, ſhall o'er-read;
And Tongues to be, your Being ſhall rehearſe,
When all the Breathers of this World are dead;
You ſtill ſhall live (ſuch Vertue hath my Pen)
Where Breath moſt breathes, e'en in the Mouths of Men.

The

The Picture of true Love.

LET me not to the Marriage of true Minds
Admit Impediments; Love is not Love,
Which alters when it Alteration finds,
Or bends with the Remover to remove.
O no! it is an ever fixed Mark,
That looks on Tempests and is never shaken;
It is the Star to every wandring Bark,
Whose Worth's unknown, altho his Height be taken.
Love's not Time's Fool, tho rosie Lips and Cheeks
Within his bending Sickle's Compass come;
Love alters not with his brief Hours and Weeks,
But bears it out even to the Edge of Doom.
If this be Error, and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no Man ever loved.

In Praise of his Love.

I GRANT thou wert not married to my Muse,
And therefore may'st without Attaint o'er-look
The dedicated Words which Writers use
Of their fair Subject, blessing every Book.
Thou art as fair in Knowledge as in Hew.
Finding thy Worth a Limit past my Praise,
And therefore are inforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher Stamp of the time-bettering Days;
And do so love, yet when they have devis'd
What strained Touches Rhetorick can lend,
Thou truly fair, wert truly sympathiz'd,
In true plain Words, by thy true-telling Friend.
And their gross Painting might be better us'd,
Where Cheeks need Blood; in thee it is abus'd.

I never ſaw, that you did Painting need,
And therefore to you Fair no Painting ſet.
I found (or thought I found) you did exceed
The barren tender of a Poet's Debt:
And therefore have I ſlept in your Report;
That you your ſelf being extant well might ſhow,
How far a modern Quill doth come too ſhort,
Speaking of Worth, what Worth in you doth grow.
This Silence of my Sin you did impute,
Which ſhall be moſt my Glory, being dumb;
For I impair not Beauty being mute,
When others wou'd give Life, and bring a Tomb.
There lives more Life in one of your fair Eyes,
Than both your Poets can in Praiſe deviſe.

Who is it, that ſays moſt, which can ſay more,
Than this rich Praiſe, that you alone are you?
In whoſe Confine immured is the Store,
Which ſhould Example, where your Equal grew.
Lean Penurie within that Pen doth dwell,
That to his Subject lends not ſome ſmall Glory:
But he, that writes of you, if he can tell,
That You are You, ſo dignifies his Story.
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worſe what Nature made ſo clear,
And ſuch a Counter-part ſhall fame his Writ,
Making him ſtill admir'd every where.
You to your beauteous Bleſſing add a Curſe,
Being fond of Praiſe, which makes your Praiſes worſe.

My Tongue-ty'd Muſe in Manners holds her ſtill,
While Comments of your Praiſe richly compil'd,
Reſerve their Character with golden Quill,
And precious Phraſe by all the Muſes fill'd.

I think good Thoughts, whilſt others write good Words,
And like unletter'd Clerk ſtill cry Amen
To every Hymn, that able Spirit affords,
In poliſht Form of well-refined Pen.
Hearing you praiſed, I ſay 'tis ſo, 'tis true,
And to the moſt of Praiſe add ſomething more,
But that is in my Thought, whoſe Love to you
(Tho' Words come hind-moſt) holds his Rank before:
Then others, for the breath of Words, reſpect
Me for my dumb Thoughts, ſpeaking in Effect.

A Reſignation.

WAS it the proudfull Sail of his great Verſe,
Bound for the Prize of (all too precious) you,
That did my ripe Thoughts in my Brain rehearſe,
Making their Tomb the Womb wherein they grew?
Was it his Spirit, by Spirits taught to write,
Above a mortal Pitch, that ſtruck me dead?
No neither he, nor his Compeers by Night
Giving him Aid, my Verſe aſtoniſhed.
He, nor that affable familiar Ghoſt
Which nightly gulls him with Intelligence,
As Victors of my Silence cannot boaſt;
I was not ſick of any fear from thence.
But when your Countenance fill'd up his Line,
Then lack't I Matter, that infeebl'd mine.

Farewel, thou art too dear for my poſſeſſing,
And like enough thou know'ſt thy Eſtimate:
The Charter of thy Worth gives thee releaſing:
My Bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting,
And for that Riches, where is my Deſerving?

The Cauſe of this fair Gift in me is wanting,
And ſo my Patent back again is ſwerving.
Thy ſelf thou gav'ſt, thy own Worth then not knowing,
Or me to whom thou gav'ſt it elſe miſtaking;
So thy great Gift upon Miſpriſion growing,
Comes home again, on better Judgment making.
Thus have I had thee, as a Dream doth flatter,
In Sleep a King, but waking no ſuch matter.

Sympathizing Love.

A fell upon a Day,
In the merry Month of May,
Sitting in a pleaſant Shade,
Which a Grove of Myrtles made;
Beaſts did leap and Birds did ſing,
Trees did grow, and Plants did ſpring:
Every thing did baniſh Moan,
Save the Nightingale alone.
She (poor Bird! as all forlorn,
Lean'd her Breaſt up-till a Thorn,
And there ſung the doleful'ſt Ditty,
That to hear it was great Pitty:
Fie, fie, fie, now would ſhe cry,
Teru, Teru, by and by,
That to hear her ſo complain,
Scarce I could from Tears refrain:
For her Griefs ſo lovely ſhown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah! (thought I) thou mourn'ſt in vain,
None takes Pity on thy Pain;
Senſleſs Trees, they cannot hear thee,
Ruthleſs Bears, they will not chear thee;
King Pandion he is dead;

All

All thy Friends are lapp'd in Lead;
All thy fellow Birds do ſing,
Careleſs of thy ſorrowing:
Whilſt as fickle Fortune ſmil'd,
Thou, and I, were both beguil'd,
Every one, that flatters thee,
Is no Friend in Miſery.
Words are eaſie, like the Wind,
Faithful Friends are hard to find:
Every Man will be thy Friend,
Whilſt thou haſt wherewith to ſpend:
But if ſtore of Crowns be ſcant,
No Man will ſupply thy Want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call:
And with ſuch like Flattering,
Pity but he was a King.
If he be addict to Vice,
Quickly him they will intice.
If to Women he be bent,
They have him at Commandment.
But if Fortune once do frown,
Then farewel his great Renown.
They, that fawn'd on him before,
Uſe his Company no more.
He, that is thy Friend indeed,
He will help thee in thy Need.
If thou ſorrow, he will weep;
If thou awake, he cannot ſleep.
Thus of every Grief in Heart,
He with thee doth bear a Part.
Theſe are certain Signs to know
Faithful Friend, from flattering Foe.

A Requeſt to his ſcornful Love.

WHEN thou ſhalt be diſpos'd to ſet me light,
And place my Merit in the Eye of Scorn,
Upon thy Side, againſt thy ſelf I'll fight,
And prove thee Vertuous, tho' thou art Forſworn.
With mine own Weakneſs being beſt acquainted,
Upon thy Part I can ſet down a Story
Of Faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted:
That thou in loſing me, ſhalt win much Glory:
And I by this will be a Gainer too.
For bending all my loving Thoughts on thee,
The Injuries that to my ſelf I doe.
Doing thee Vantage, double vantage me.
Such is my Love, to thee I ſo belong,
That for thy Right, my ſelf will bear all Wrong.

Say that thou didſt forſake me for ſome Fault,
And I will comment upon that Offence;
Speak of my Lameneſs, and I ſtraight will halt;
Againſt thy Reaſons making no Defence.
Thou canſt not (Love) diſgrace me half ſo ill,
To ſet a a Form upon deſired Change,
As I'll my ſelf diſgrace; knowing thy Will,
I will Acquaintance ſtrangle, and look ſtrange;
Be abſent from thy Walks and in my Tongue,
Thy ſweet beloved Name no more ſhall dwell,
Leſt I (too much profane) ſhould do it Wrong,
And haply of our old Acquaintance tell.
For thee, againſt my ſelf I'll vow Debate,
For I muſt ne'er Love him, whom thou doſt Hate.

Then Hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now,
Now while the World is bent my Deeds to croſs;

Joyn with the Spight of Fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-Loſs:
Ah! do not, when my Heart hath 'ſcapt this Sorrow,
Come in the Rereward of a Conquer'd Woe!
Give not a windy Night a rainy Morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd Overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me laſt,
When other petty Griefs have done their Spight;
But in the Onſet come, ſo ſhall I taſte
At firſt the very worſt of Fortune's might.
And other Strains of Woe, which now ſeem Woe,
Compar'd with loſs of thee, will not ſeem ſo.

Some glory in their Birth, ſome in their Skill;
Some in their Wealth; ſome in their Bodies force;
Some in their Garments tho' new-fangled ill;
Some in their Hawks and Hounds, ſome in their Horſe:
And every Humour hath his adjunct Pleaſure,
Wherein it finds a Joy above the reſt.
But theſe Particulars are not my Meaſure,
All theſe I better in one general Beſt.
Thy Love is better, than high Birth to me,
Richer than Wealth, prouder than Garments Coſt;
Of more Delight, than Hawks or Horſes be:
And having thee, of all Mens Pride I boaſt.
Wretched in this alone, that thou mayſt take
All this away, and me moſt Wretched make.

A Lover's Affection, tho' his Love prove Unconſtant.

BUT do thy worſt to ſteal thy ſelf away,
For Term of Life thou art aſſured mine;
And Life no longer, than my Love will ſtay,
For it depends upon that Love of thine.
Then need I not to fear the worſt of Wrongs,
When in the leaſt of them my Life hath End;
I ſee a better State to me belongs,
Than that, which on my Humour doth depend.
Thou canſt not vex me with inconſtant Mind,
Since that my Life on thy Revolt doth lie.
Oh! what a happy Title do I find,
Happy to have thy Love, happy to die!
But what's ſo bleſſed Fair that fears no Blot?
Thou mayſt be Falſe, and yet I know it not.

So ſhall I live, ſuppoſing thou art true,
Like a deceived Husband; ſo Love's Face
May ſtill ſeem Love to me, tho' alter'd new:
Thy Looks with me, thy Heart in other Place.
For there can live no Hatred in thine Eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy Change.
In manies Looks the falſe Heart's Hiſtory
Is writ in Moods, and Frowns, and Wrinkles ſtrange:
But Heaven in thy Creation did decree,
That in thy Face ſweet Love ſhould ever dwell;
Whate'er thy Thoughts, or thy Heart's workings be,
Thy Looks ſhall nothing thence but Sweetneſs tell.
How like Eve's Apple doth thy Beauty grow,
If thy ſweet Vertue anſwer not thy Show?

They

They that have Power to hurt, and will do none,
That do not do the Thing, they muſt do Show,
Who moving others, are themſelves as Stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to Temptation ſlow;
They rightly do inherit Heaven's Graces,
And husband Nature's Riches from Expence;
They are the Lords and Owners of their Faces,
Others but Stewards of their Excellence.
The Summer's Flower is to the Summer ſweet,
Tho' to it ſelf it only live and die;
But if that Flower with baſe Infection meet,
The baſeſt Weed out-braves his Dignity:
For ſweeteſt things turn ſowereſt by their Deeds,
Lillies that feſter, ſmell far worſe than Weeds.

How ſweet and lovely doſt thou make the Shame,
Which like a Canker in the fragrant Roſe,
Doth ſpot the Beauty of thy budding Name?
Oh! in what Sweets doſt thou thy Sins incloſe!
That Tongue, that tells the Story of thy Days,
(Making laſcivious Comments on thy Sport)
Cannot diſpraiſe; but in a kind of Praiſe,
Naming thy Name, bleſſes an ill Report.
Oh! what a Manſion have thoſe Vices got,
Which for their Habitation chooſe out thee!
Where Beauty's Veil doth cover every Blot,
And all things turn to Fair, that Eyes can ſee!
Take heed (dear Heart!) of this large Privilege,
The hardeſt Knife ill us'd doth loſe his Edge.

Complaint for his Lover's Abſence.

HOW like a Winter hath my Abſence been
From thee, the Pleaſure of the fleeting Year!
What Freezings have I felt, what dark Days ſeen?
What old December's Bareneſs every where?
And yet this Time remov'd was Summer's Time;
The teeming Autumn big with rich Increaſe,
Bearing the wanton Burthen of the Prime,
Like widow'd Wombs after their Lord's Deceaſe.
Yet this abundant Iſſue ſeem'd to me,
But Hope of Orphans and un-father'd Fruit;
For Summer and his Pleaſures wait on thee,
And thou away, the very Birds are mute:
Or if they ſing, 'tis with ſo dull a Chear,
That Leaves look pale, dreading the Winters near.

From you have I been abſent in the Spring,
When proud py'd April, dreſt in all his Trim,
Hath put a Spirit of Youth in every thing;
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him.
Yet not the Lays of Birds, nor the ſweet Smell
Of different Flowers in Odour and in Hew,
Cou'd make me any Summer's Story tell;
Or from their proud Lap pluck them where they grew.
Nor did I wonder at the Lillies White,
Nor praiſe the deep Vermilion in the Roſe;
They were but ſweet, but Figures of Delight,
Drawn after you, you Pattern of all thoſe.
Yet ſeem'd it Winter ſtill, and you away,
As with your Shadow, I with theſe did play.

The forward Violet thus did I chide,
Sweet Thief! whence didſt thou ſteal thy Sweet that ſmells,

If

If not from my Love's Breath? The purple Pride,
Which on thy ſoft Cheek for Complexion dwells,
In my Love's Veins thou haſt too groſly dy'd:
The Lilly I condemned for thy Hand,
And Buds of Marjoram had ſtol'n thy Hair,
The Roſes fearfully on Thorns did ſtand,
One bluſhing Shame, another white Deſpair;
A third nor red, nor white, had ſtol'n of both,
And to his Robb'ry had annext thy Breath;
But for his Theft, in Pride of all his Growth,
A vengeful Canker eat him up to Death.
More Flowers I noted, yet I none could ſee,
But Sweet, or Colour, it had ſtol'n from thee.

An Invocation to his Muſe.

WHERE art thou Muſe, that thou forget'ſt ſo long,
To ſpeak of that, which gives thee all thy Might?
Spend'ſt thou thy Fury on ſome worthleſs Song,
Darkning thy Power to lend baſe Subjects Light?
Return, forgetful Muſe, and ſtraight redeem,
In gentle Numbers, Time ſo idely ſpent;
Sing to the Ear, that doth thy Lays eſteem,
And give thy Pen both Skill and Argument.
Riſe, reſty Muſe, my Love's ſweet Face ſurvey,
If Time hath any Wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a Satire to Decay,
And make Time's Spoils deſpiſed every where.
Give my Love Fame, faſter than Time waſts Life,
So thou prevent'ſt his Scithe, and crooked Knife.

Oh! truant Muſe! what ſhall be thy Amends,
For thy neglect of Truth in Beauty dy'd?

But Truth and Beauty on my Love depends:
So doſt thou too, and therein dignify'd.
Make anſwer, Muſe, wilt thou not haply ſay,
Truth needs no Colour with his Colour fixt;
Beauty no Pencil, Beauty's Truth to lay;
But beſt is beſt, if never intermixt.
Becauſe he needs no Praiſe, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuſe no Silence ſo, for't lies in thee,
To make her much out-live a gilded Tomb,
And to be prais'd of Ages yet to Be.
Then do thy Office, Muſe, I teach thee how,
To make her ſeem long hence, as ſhe ſhows now.

Conſtant Affection.

TO me, fair Love, you never can be Old;
For as you were when firſt your Eye I ey'd,
Such ſeems your Beauty ſtill. Three Winters cold
Have from the Foreſts ſhook three Summers Pride;
Three beauteous Springs to yellow Autumn turn'd,
In Proceſs of the Seaſons, have I ſeen;
Three April Perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since firſt I ſaw you freſh, which yet are green.
Ah! yet doth Beauty, like a Dial-Hand,
Steal from his Figure, and no Place perceiv'd.
So your ſweet Hew, which methinks, ſtill does ſtand,
Hath Motion, and mine Eye may be deceiv'd;
For fear of which, hear this, thou Age unbred,
E'er you was born, was Beauty's Summer dead.

Let not my Love be call'd Idolatry,
Nor my Beloved as an Idol Show;

Since

Since all alike my Songs and Praiſes be
To one, of one, ſtill ſuch, and ever ſo:
Kind is my Love to day, to morrow kind,
Still conſtant in a wondrous Excellence;
Therefore my Verſe to Conſtancy confin'd,
One thing expreſſing, leaves out Difference.
Fair, kind, and true, is all my Argument;
Fair, kind, and true, varying to other Words;
And in this Change is my Invention ſpent,
Three Theams in one, which wondrous Scope affords.
Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone;
Which three, till now, have never ſate in one.

When in the Chronicle of waſted Time,
I ſee Deſcriptions of the faireſt Wights,
And Beauty making beautiful old Rhime,
In praiſe of Ladies dead, and lovely Knights:
Then in the Blazon of ſweet Beauty's beſt,
Of Hand, of Foot, of Lip, of Eye, of Brow,
I ſee their antick Pen would have expreſt
E'en ſuch a Beauty as you maſter now.
So all their Praiſes are but Prophecies
Of this our Time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining Eyes,
They had not ſtill enough your Worth to ſing:
For we who now behold theſe preſent Days,
Have Eyes to wonder, but lack Tongues to praiſe.

Amazement

Amazement.

MY Love is ſtrengthned, tho' more weak in ſeeming;
I love not leſs, tho' leſs the Show appear:
That Love is merchandiz'd, whoſe rich Eſteeming
The Owner's Tongue doth publiſh every where.
Our Love was new, and then but in the Spring,
When I was wont to greet it in my Lays;
As Philomel in Summer's Front doth ſing,
And ſtops his Pipe in Growth of riper Days.
Not that the Summer is leſs pleaſant now,
Than when her mournful Hymns did huſh the Night;
But that wild Muſick burthens every Bough,
And Sweets grown common loſe their dear Delight.
Therefore like her I ſometime hold my Tongue,
Becauſe I would not dull you with my Song.

Alack! what Poverty my Muſe brings forth!
That having ſuch a Scope to ſhow her Pride,
The Argument all bare, is of more Worth,
Than when it hath my added Praiſe beſide.
Oh! blame me not, if I no more can write!
Look in your Glaſs, and there appears a Face,
That overgoes my blunt Invention quite,
Dulling my Lines, and doing me Diſgrace.
Were it not ſinful then, ſtriving to mend,
To marr the Subject that before was well?
For to no other paſs my Verſes tend,
Than of your Graces, and your Gifts to tell;
And more, much more, than in my Verſe can ſit,
Your own Glaſs ſhows you, when you look in it.

A Lover's Excuſe for his long Abſence.

OH! never ſay that I was falſe of Heart,
Tho' Abſence ſeem'd my Flame to qualify;
As eaſie might I from my ſelf depart,
As from my Soul which in my Breaſt doth lie.
That is my Home of Love; if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again
Juſt to the Time, not with the Time exchang'd;
So that my ſelf bring Water for my Stain.
Never believe, tho' in my Nature reign'd
All Frailties, that beſiege all Kinds of Blood,
That it could ſo prepoſterouſly be ſtain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy Sum of Good:
For nothing this wide Univerſe I call,
Save thou, my Roſe in it, thou art my All.

Alas! 'tis true, I have gone here and there;
And made my ſelf a Motley to the View;
Gor'd mine own Thoughts, ſold cheap what is moſt dear;
Made old Offences of Affections new.
Moſt true it is, that I have look'd on Truth
Aſcance and ſtrangely: But by all above,
Theſe Blenches gave my Heart another Youth,
And worſe Aſſays prov'd thee my beſt of Love.
Now all is done, have what ſhall have no End,
Mine Appetite I never more will grind
On newer Proof, to try an older Friend,
A God in Love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then give me welcome, next my Heaven the beſt,
E'en to thy pure and moſt moſt loving Breaſt.

A Complaint.

OH! For my ſake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty Goddeſs of my harmleſs Deeds,
That did not better for my Life provide,
Than publick Means which publick Manners breeds.
Thence comes it that my Name receives a Brand,
And almoſt thence my Nature is ſubdued
To what it works in, like the Dyer's Hand.
Pity me then, and wiſh I were renew'd;
Whilſt like a willing Patient I will drink
Potions of Eyſel 'gainſt my ſtrong Infection,
No Bitterneſs, that I will bitter think,
Nor double Penance to correct Correction.
Pity me then, dear Friend, and I aſſure ye,
E'en that your Pity is enough to cure me.

Your Love and Pity doth th' Impreſſion fill,
Which vulgar Scandal ſtamp'd upon my Brow:
For what care I who calls me well, or ill,
So you o'er-skreen my bad, my good allow?
You are my all, the World and I muſt ſtrive
To know my Shames, and Praiſes from your Tongue;
None elſe to me, nor I to none alive,
That my ſteel'd Senſe or changes right or wrong,
In ſo profound Abyſme I throw all Care
Of others Voices, that my Adders Senſe
To Critic, and to Flatterer ſtopped are:
Mark how with my Neglect I do diſpenſe.
You are ſo ſtrongly in my Purpoſe bred,
That all the World beſides me, thinks I'm dead.

Self-

Self-flattery of her Beauty.

SINCE I left you, mine Eye is in my Mind;
And that which governs me to go about,
Doth part his Function, and is partly blind;
Seems ſeeing, but effectually is out.
For it no Form delivers to the Heart,
Of Birds, or Flowers, or Shape, which it doth lack;
Of his quick Objects hath the Mind no Part,
Nor his own Viſion holds what it doth catch:
For if it ſee the rud'ſt, or gentleſt Sight,
The moſt ſweet Favour, or deformedſt Creature,
The Mountain or the Sea, the Day or Night,
The Crow, or Dove, it ſhapes them to your Feature:
Incapable of more, repleat with you,
My moſt true Mind thus maketh mine untrue.

Or whether doth my Mind, being crown'd with you,
Drink up the Monarch's Plague, this Flattery?
Or whether ſhall I ſay mine Eye ſaith true,
And that your Love taught it this Alchymy?
To make of Monſters, and things indigeſt,
Such Cherubims as your ſweet ſelf reſemble;
Creating every Bad a perfect Beſt,
As faſt as Objects to his Beams aſſemble?
Oh! 'tis the firſt, 'tis Flatt'ry in my ſeeing,
And my great Mind moſt kindly drinks it up;
Mine Eye well knows what with his Guſt is 'greeing,
And to his Palat doth prepare the Cup:
If it be poiſon'd, 'tis the leſſer Sin,
That mine Eye loves it, and doth firſt begin.

Thoſe Lines that I before have writ, do lye,
E'en thoſe that ſaid I could not love you dearer:

Yet then my Judgment knew no Reason why,
My most full Flame should afterwards burn clearer,
But reck'ning Time, whose million Accidents
Creep in 'twixt Vows, and change Decrees of Kings,
Tann sacred Beauty, blunt the sharp'st Intents,
Divert strong Minds to th' Course of alt'ring Things.
Alas! Why fearing of Time's Tyranny,
Might I not then say, now I love you best,
When I was certain o'er Incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a Babe; then might I not say so,
To give full Growth to that, which still doth grow?

A Trial of Love's Constancy.

ACCUSE me thus; That I have scanted all,
Wherein I should your great Deserts repay;
Forgot upon your dearest Love to call,
Whereto all Bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown Minds,
And given to Time your own dear-purchas'd Right;
That I have hoisted Sail to all the Winds,
Which should transport me farthest from your Sight:
Book both my Wilfulness and Error down,
And on just Proof, Surmise, Accumulate;
Bring me within the Level of your Frown,
But shoot not at me in your wakened Hate:
Since my Appeal says, I did strive to prove
The Constancy and Vertue of your Love.

Like as, to make our Appetites more keen,
With eager Compounds we our Palate urge;

As

As, to prevent our Maladies unſeen,
We ſicken to ſhun Sickneſs, when we purge:
Even ſo being full of your near cloying Sweetneſs,
To bitter Sauces did I frame my Feeding;
And ſick of Welfare, found a kind of Meetneſs,
To be diſeas'd e'er that there was true needing.
Thus Policy in Love t' anticipate
The Ills that were not, grew to Faults aſſured,
And brought to Medicine a healthful State,
Which rank of Goodneſs would by Ill be cured.
But thence I learn, and find the Leſſon true,
Drugs poiſon him, that ſo fell ſick of you.

What Potions have I drunk of Syren Tears,
Diſtill'd from Limbecks foul as Hell within?
Applying Fears to Hopes, and Hopes to Fears,
Still loſing when I ſaw my ſelf to win.
What wretched Errors hath my Heart committed,
Whilſt it hath thought it ſelf ſo bleſſed never?
How have mine Eyes out of their Spheres been fitted,
In the Diſtraction of this madding Feaver?
O! Benefit of Ill! now I find true,
That better is by Evil ſtill made better;
And ruin'd Love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at firſt, more ſtrong, far greater.
So I return Rebuke to my Content,
And gain by Ills thrice more than I have ſpent.

A good Conſtruction of his Love's Unkindneſs.

THAT you were once unkind befriends me now;
And for that Sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs muſt I under my Tranſgreſſion bow,
Unleſs my Nerves were Braſs, or hammer'd Steel.
For if you were by my Unkindneſs ſhaken,
As I by yours, y' have paſt a Hell of Time;
And I a Tyrant have no Leiſure taken,
To weigh how once I ſuffered in your Crime.
O! that our Night of Woe might have remembred
My deepeſt Senſe, how hard true Sorrow hits!
And ſoon to you, as you to me then tendred
The humble Salve, which wounded Boſoms fits!
But that your Treſpaſs now becomes a Fee,
Mine ranſoms yours, and yours muſt ranſom me.

Error in Opinion.

TIS better to be vile, than vile eſteemed,
When not to be, receives Reproach of Being;
And the juſt Pleaſure's loſt, which is ſo deemed,
Not by our Feeling, but by others Seeing.
For why ſhould others falſe adulterate Eyes
Give Salutation to my ſportive Blood?
Or on my Frailties, why are frailer Spies;
Which in their Wills count bad, what I think good?
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my Abuſes, reckon up their own;
I may be ſtreight, though they themſelves be bevel,
By their rank Thoughts my Deeds muſt not be ſhown;
Unleſs this general Evil they maintain,
All Men are bad, and in their Badneſs reign.

Upon

Upon the Receipt of a Table-Book from his Miſtreſs.

THY Gift, thy Tables, are within my Brain
Full character'd with a laſting Memory,
Which ſhall above that idle Rank remain,
Beyond all Date, even to Eternity;
Or at the leaſt, ſo long as Brain and Heart
Have Faculty by Nature to ſubſiſt;
Till each to raz'd Oblivion yield his Part,
Of thee thy Record never can be miſt.
That poor Retention could not ſo much hold,
Nor need I Tallies thy dear Love to ſcore;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To truſt thoſe Tables, that receive thee more.
To keep an Adjunct to remember thee,
Were to import Forgetfulneſs in me.

A Vow.

NO, Time! thou ſhalt not boaſt that I do change
Thy Pyramids built up with newer Might,
To me are nothing novel, nothing ſtrange;
They are but Dreſſings of a former Sight.
Our Dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou doſt foiſt upon us that is Old;
And rather make them born to our Deſire,
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy Regiſters and thee I both defie,
Not wondring, at the Preſent, nor the Paſt;
For thy Records, and what we ſee doth lye,
Made more or leſs by thy continual Haſte.

This

This I do vow, and this ſhall ever be;
I will be true, deſpight thy Scithe and Thee.

Love's Safety.

IF my dear Love were but the Child of State,
It might for Fortune's Baſtard be unfather'd;
As ſubject to Time's Love, or to Time's Hate,
Weeds among Weeds, or Flowers with Flowers gather'd.
No, it was builded far from Accident,
It ſuffers not in ſmiling Pomp, nor falls
Under the Blow of thralled Diſcontent;
Whereto th' inviting Time our Faſhion calls:
It fears not Policy, that Heretic,
Which works on Leaſes of ſhort numbred Hours:
But all alone ſtands hugely Politick,
That it nor grows with Heat, nor drowns with Showers.
To this I Witneſs call the Fools of Time,
Which die for Goodneſs, who have liv'd for Crime.

An Intreaty for her Acceptance.

WER 'T ought to me, I bore the Canopy,
With my Extern the outward Honouring;
Or laid great Baſes for Eternity,
Which proves more ſhort, than Waſte or Ruining?
Have I not ſeen Dwellers on Form and Favour,
Loſe all, and more, by paying too much Rent,
For Compound-ſweet, foregoing ſimple Savour;
Pitiful Thrivers, in their Gazing ſpent!

No,

No, let me be obſequious in thy Heart,
And take thou my Oblation, poor, but free,
Which is not mixt with Seconds, knows no Art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence thou ſuborn'd Informer! a true Soul,
When moſt impeacht, ſtands leaſt in thy Controul.

Upon her playing on the Virginals.

HOW oft, when thou thy Muſick, Muſick play'ſt,
Upon that bleſſed Wood, whoſe Motion ſounds
With thy ſweet Fingers, when thou gently ſway'ſt
The witty Concord, that mine Ear confounds;
Do I envy thoſe Jacks, that nimble leap,
To kiſs the tender Inward of thy Hand?
Whilſt my poor Lipps, which ſhould that Harveſt reap,
At the Wood's Boldneſs by thee bluſhing ſtand.
To be ſo tickled, they would change their State
And Situation with thoſe dancing Chipps,
O'er whom thy Fingers walk with gentle Gate,
Making dead Wood more bleſt than living Lipps.
Since ſaucy Jacks ſo happy are in this,
Give them thy Fingers, me thy Lipps to kiſs.

Immoderate Luſt.

TH' Expence of Spirit in a Waſte of Shame,
Is Luſt in Action; and till Action, Luſt
Is perjur'd, murd'rous, bloody, full of Blame,
Savage, extream, rude, cruel, not to truſt;
Injoy'd no ſooner, but deſpiſed ſtreight,
Paſt Reaſon hunted, and no ſooner had,

Paſt

Paſt Reaſon hated as a ſwallowed Bait,
On purpoſe laid to make the Taker mad;
Mad in Purſuit, and in Poſſeſſion ſo;
Had, having, and in queſt, to have extream;
A Bliſs in Proof, and prov'd a very Woe;
Before a Joy propos'd, behind a Dream.
All this the World well knows, yet none knows well
To ſhun the Heaven, that leads Men to this Hell.

In praiſe of her Beauty, tho black.

IN the old Age Black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not Beauty's Name:
But now is Black Beauty's ſucceſſive Heir,
And Beauty ſlander'd with a Baſtard Shame.
For ſince each Hand hath put on Nature's Power,
Fairing the Foul with Art's falſe borrow'd Face,
Sweet Beauty hath no Name, no holy Bower,
But is prophan'd, if not lives in Diſgrace.
Therefore my Miſtreſs' Eyes are Raven-black,
Her Eyes ſo ſuited, that they Mourners ſeem,
At ſuch who not born fair no Beauty lack,
Slandering Creation with a falſe Eſteem;
Yet ſo they mourn becoming of their Woe,
That every Tongue ſays, Beauty ſhou'd look ſo.

My Miſtreſs' Eyes are nothing like the Sun;
Coral is far more red, than her Lipps red.
If Snow be white, why then her Breaſts are dun;
If Hairs be Wires, black Wires grow on her Head.
I have ſeen Roſes, damask, red, and white,
But no ſuch Roſes ſee I in her Cheeks;
And in ſome Perfumes is there more Delight,
Than in the Breath that from my Miſtreſs reeks.

I love to hear her ſpeak, yet well I know,
That Muſick hath a far more pleaſing Sound.
I grant I never ſaw a Goddeſs go;
My Miſtreſs when ſhe walks treads on the Ground;
And yet, by Heaven, I think my Love as rare,
As any She bely'd with falſe Compare.

Thou art as tyranous, yes ſo thou art,
As thoſe whoſe Beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'ſt, to my dear doating Heart,
Thou art the faireſt, and moſt precious Jewel:
Yet in good Faith ſome ſay, that thee behold,
Thy Face hath not the Power to make Love groan.
To ſay they err, I dare not be ſo bold,
Altho' I ſwear it to my ſelf alone.
And to be ſure, that is not falſe I ſwear,
A thouſand Groans, but thinking on thy Face,
One on another's Neck do witneſs bear,
Thy Black is faireſt in my Judgment's Place.
In nothing art thou black ſave in thy Deeds,
And thence this Slander, as I think, proceeds.

Thine Eyes I love, and they as pitying me,
Knowing thy Heart torments me with Diſdain,
Have put on black, and loving Mourners be,
Looking with pretty Ruth upon my Pain.
And truly not the Morning Sun of Heaven
Better becomes the grey Cheeks of the Eaſt;
Nor that full Star that uſhers in the Even,
Doth half that Glory to the ſober Weſt;
As thoſe two mourning Eyes become thy Face.
O! let it then as well beſeem thy Heart
To mourn for me, ſince Mourning doth thee grace,
And ſute thy Pity like in every Part.
Then will I ſwear, Beauty her ſelf is black,
And all they foul, that thy Complexion lack.

Unkind Abuſe.

BESHREW that Heart, that makes my Heart to groan
For that deep Wound it gives my Friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But Slave to Slavery my ſweet Friend muſt be?
Me from my ſelf thy cruel Eye hath taken,
And my next ſelf thou harder haſt ingroſſed;
Of him, my ſelf, and thee I am forſaken,
A Torment thrice three-fold thus to be croſſed.
Priſon my Heart in thy ſteel Boſom's Ward;
But then my Friend's Heart let my poor Heart bail:
Who e'er keeps me, let my Heart be his Guard,
Thou canſt not then uſe Rigor in my Jail.
And yet thou wilt, for I being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

So now I have confeſt, that he is thine,
And I my ſelf am mortgag'd to thy Will;
My ſelf I'll forfeit, ſo that other mine
Thou wilt reſtore to me, my Comfort ſtill.
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free;
For thou art covetous, and he is kind:
He learn'd but Surety-like to write for me
Under that Bond, that him as faſt doth bind.
The Statute of thy Beauty thou wilt take,
Thou Uſurer, that put'ſt forth all to Uſe,
And ſue a Friend, came Debtor for my ſake;
So him I loſe through my unkind Abuſe.
Him have I loſt, thou haſt both him and me;
He pays the whole, and yet I am not free.

Love-

Love-Suit.

WHOEVER hath her Wiſh, thou haſt thy Will;
And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus
More than enough, am I, that vex thee ſtill,
To thy ſweet Will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whoſe Will is large and ſpacious,
Not once vouchſafe to hide my Will in thine?
Shall Will in others ſeem right gracious,
And in my Will no fair Acceptance ſhine?
The Sea all Water, yet receives Rain ſtill,
And in Abundance addeth to his Store;
So thou being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One Will of mine to make thy large Will more.
Let no unkind, no fair Beſeechers kill,
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

If thy Soul check thee, that I come ſo near,
Swear to thy blind Soul, that I was thy Will;
And Will thy Soul knows is admitted there,
Thus far for Love, my Love-ſuit ſweet fulfil.
Will will fulfil the Treaſure of thy Love;
I fill it full with Wills, and my Will one;
In things of great receipt with eaſe we prove,
Among a Number one is reckon'd none.
Then in the Number let me paſs untold,
Tho' in thy Stores Account I one muſt be;
For nothing hold me, ſo it pleaſe thee hold
That Nothing-me, a Some-thing ſweet to thee.
Make but my Name thy Love, and love that ſtill,
And then thou lov'ſt me, for my Name is Will.

His Heart wounded by her Eye.

THOU blind Fool Love, what doſt thou to mine Eyes,
That they behold and ſee not what they ſee ?
They know what Beauty is, ſee where it lies,
Yet what the beſt is, take the worſt to be.
If Eyes corrupt by over-partial Looks,
Be anchor'd in the Bay where all Men ride,
Why of Eyes Falſhood haſt thou forged Hooks,
Whereto the Judgment of my Heart is ty'd ?
Why ſhould my Heart think that a ſeveral Plot,
Which my Heart knows the wide World's common Place ?
Or mine Eyes ſeeing this, ſay this is not,
To put fair Truth upon ſo foul a Face ;
In things right true my Heart and Eyes have err'd,
And to this falſe Plague are they now transferr'd.

O ! call not me to juſtifie the Wrong,
That thy Unkindneſs lays upon my Heart !
Wound me not with thine Eye, but with thy Tongue,
Uſe Power with Power, and ſlay me not by Art :
Tell me thou loveſt elſe-where ; but in my Sight,
Dear Heart, forbear to glance thine Eye aſide.
What needſt thou wound with Cunning, when thy Might
Is more than my o'er-preſt Defence can bide ?
Let me excuſe thee ; Ah ! my Love well knows,
Her pretty Looks have been my Enemies ;
And therefore from my Face ſhe turns my Foes,
That they elſe-where might dart their Injuries.
Yet do not ſo, but ſince I am near ſlain,
Kill me out-right with Looks, and rid my Pain.

Be wiſe, as thou art cruel, do not preſs
My Tongue-ty'd Patience with too much Diſdain :

Leaſt

Leaſt Sorrow lend me Words, and Words expreſs
The Manner of my Pity-wanting Pain.
If I might teach thee Wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet love to tell me ſo;
As teſty Sick-men, when their Deaths be near,
No News but Health from their Phyſicians know.
For if I ſhould deſpair I ſhould grow mad,
And in my Madneſs might ſpeak ill of thee;
Now this ill-wreſting World is grown ſo bad,
Mad Sland'rers by mad Ears believed be.
That I may not be ſo, nor thou bely'd,
Bear thine Eyes ſtraight, tho' thy proud Heart go wide.

A Proteſtation.

IN Faith, I do not love thee with mine Eyes;
For they in thee a thouſand Errors note:
But 'tis my Heart that loves what they deſpiſe,
Who in deſpight of View is pleas'd to dote.
Nor are mine Ears with thy Tongue's Tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling to baſe Touches prone;
Nor Taſte, nor Smell, deſire to be invited
To any ſenſual Feaſt with thee alone.
But my five Wits, nor my five Senſes can
Diſſwade one fooliſh Heart from ſerving thee,
Who leaves unſway'd the Likeneſs of a Man,
Thy proud Heart's Slave and vaſſal Wretch to be:
Only my Plague thus far I count my Gain,
That ſhe that makes me ſin, rewards me Pain.

Love is my Sin, and my dear Vertue Hate;
Hate of Sin, grounded on a ſinful Loving.
O! but with mine compare thou thine own State,
And thou ſhalt find it merits not reproving;

Or

Or if it do, not from thoſe Lips of thine,
That have profan'd their Scarlet Ornaments,
And ſeal'd falſe Bonds of Love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others Beds, Revenues of their Rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'ſt thoſe,
Whom thine Eyes woo, as mine importune thee.
Root Pity in thy Heart, that when it grows,
Thy Pity may deſerve to pity'd be.
If thou doſt ſeek to have what thou doſt hide,
By ſelf Example mayſt thou be deny'd!

An Alluſion.

LO! as a careful Huſwife runs to catch
One of her feather'd Creatures broke away,
Sets down her Babe and makes all ſwift Diſpatch,
In purſuit of the Thing ſhe would have ſtay;
Whilſt her neglected Child holds her in Chace,
Cries to catch her, whoſe buſie Care is bent,
To follow that, which flies before her Face,
Not prizing her poor Infant's Diſcontent:
So runſt thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilſt I thy Babe chaſe thee a-far behind;
But if thou catch thy Hope, turn back to me,
And play the Mother's Part, kiſs me, be kind.
So will I pray that thou may'ſt have thy Will,
If thou turn back, and my loud Crying ſtill.

Life

Life and Death.

THOSE Lips, that Love's own Hand did make,
Breath'd forth the Sound, that ſaid I hate,
To me that languiſht for her Sake.
But when ſhe ſaw my woful State,
Strait in her Heart did Mercy come,
Chiding that Tongue, that ever ſweet,
Was us'd in giving gentle Doom;
And taught it thus a-new to greet:
I hate ſhe altered with an End,
That follow'd it, as gentle Day
Doth follow Night, who like a Fiend,
From Heaven to Hell is flown away.
I hate, from Hate away ſhe threw,
And ſav'd my Life, ſaying not you.

A Conſideration of Death.

POOR Soul! the Center of my ſinful Earth,
My ſinful Earth theſe rebel Powers that thee array,
Why doſt thou pine within and ſuffer Dearth,
Painting thy outward Walls in coſtly Clay?
Why ſo large Coſt, having ſo ſhort a Leaſe,
Doſt thou upon thy faded Manſion ſpend?
Shall Worms, Inheritors of this Exceſs,
Eat up thy Charge? Is this thy Body's End?
Then Soul, live thou upon thy Servant's Loſs;
And let that pine to aggravate thy Store:
Buy Terms Divine in ſelling Hours of Droſs;
Within be fed, without be rich no more.
So ſhalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on Men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

Immoderate

Immoderate Paſſion.

MY Love is as a Fever, longing ſtill
For that which longer nurſeth the Diſeaſe;
Feeding on that, which doth preſerve the Ill,
Th' uncertain ſickly Appetite to pleaſe.
My Reaſon the Phyſician to my Love,
Angry that his Preſcriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I deſperate now approve.
Deſire is Death, which Phyſick did except.
Paſt Cure I am, now Reaſon is paſt Cure,
And frantick mad with ever-more Unreſt;
My Thoughts and my Diſcourſe as mad Mens are,
At random from the Truth vainly expreſt.
For I have ſworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as Hell, as dark as Night.

Love's powerful Subtilty.

O Me! what Eyes hath Love put in my Head,
Which have no Correſpondence with true Sight!
Or if they have, where is my Judgment fled,
That cenſures falſly what they ſee aright?
If that be fair whereon my falſe Eyes dote,
What means the World to ſay it is not ſo?
If it be not, then Love doth well denote,
Love's Eye is not ſo true as all Mens. No,
How can it? O how can Love's Eye be true,
That is ſo vext with Watching and with Tears?
No marvel then, though I miſtake my View;
The Sun it ſelf ſees not, till Heaven clears.
O! cunning Love, with Tears thou keepſt me blind,
Leaſt Eyes well-ſeeing thy foul Faults ſhould find.

Can'ſt

Canſt thou, O! cruel, ſay I love thee not,
When I againſt my ſelf with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
All of my ſelf, all, Tyrant, for thy ſake?
Who hateſt thou, that do I call my Friend,
On whom frown'ſt thou, that I do fawn upon?
Nay if thou lowr'ſt on me, do I not ſpend
Revenge upon my ſelf with preſent Moan?
What Merit do I in my ſelf reſpect,
That is ſo proud thy Service to deſpiſe?
When all my beſt doth worſhip thy Defect,
Commanded by the Motion of thine Eyes.
But, Love, hate on; for now I know thy Mind,
Thoſe that can ſee thou lov'ſt, and I am blind.

Oh! from what Power haſt thou this powerful Might,
With Inſufficiency my Heart to ſway;
To make me give the Lye to my true Sight,
And ſwear, that Brightneſs doth not grace the Day?
Whence haſt thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuſe of thy Deeds,
There is ſuch Strength and Warrantiſe of Skill,
That in my Mind thy worſt all beſts exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear, and ſee juſt cauſe of Hate?
Oh! tho' I love what others do abhor,
With others thou ſhould'ſt not abhor my State.
If thy Unworthineſs rais'd Love in me,
More worthy I, to be belov'd of thee.

Retaliation.

SO oft have I invok'd thee for my Muſe,
And found ſuch fair Aſſiſtance in my Verſe,
As every Alien Pen hath got my Uſe,
And under thee, their Poeſie diſperſe.
Thine Eyes that taught the Dumb on high to ſing,
And heavy Ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added Feathers to the Learned's Wing;
And given Grace a double Majeſty:
Yet be moſt proud of that, which I compile,
Whoſe Influence is thine, and born of thee;
In others Works thou doſt but mend the Style,
And Arts with thy ſweet Graces graced be:
But thou art all my Art, and doſt advance
As high as Learning, my rude Ignorance.

Whilſt I alone did call upon thy Aid,
My Verſe alone had all thy gentle Grace:
But now my gracious Numbers are decay'd,
And my ſick Muſe doth give another Place.
I grant (ſweet Love!) thy lovely Argument
Deſerves the Travel of a worthier Pen;
Yet what of thee thy Poet doth invent,
He robs thee of, and pays it thee agen:
He lends thee Vertue, and he ſtole that Word
From thy Behaviour. Beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy Cheek. He can afford
No Praiſe to thee, but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth ſay,
Since what he owes thee, thou thy ſelf doſt pay.

Sun

Sun-Set.

THAT Time of Year thou may'ſt in me behold,
When yellow Leaves, or none, or few do hang
Upon thoſe Boughs, which ſhake againſt the Cold,
Bare ruin'd Quires, where late the ſweet Birds ſang.
In me thou ſeeſt the Twilights of ſuch Day,
As after Sun-ſet fadeth in the Weſt;
Which by and by black Night doth take away,
Death's ſecond ſelf, that ſeals up all in Reſt.
In me thou ſeeſt the Glowing of ſuch Fire,
That on the Aſhes of his Youth doth lie,
As the Death-bed whereon it muſt expire,
Conſum'd with that, which it was nouriſh'd by.
'Tis thou perceiv'ſt, which makes thy Love more ſtrong,
To love that well, which thou muſt leave e'er long.

Thy Glaſs will ſhew thee how thy Beauties wear;
Thy Dial how thy precious Minutes waſte;
The vacant Leaves thy Mind's Imprint will bear,
And of this Book this Learning may'ſt thou taſte:
The Wrinkles, which thy Glaſs will truly ſhow,
Of mouthed Graves will give the Memory.
Thou by thy Dial's ſhady Stealth may'ſt know
Time's theeviſh Progreſs to Eternity.
Look what thy Memory cannot contain,
Commit to theſe waſte Blacks, and thou ſhalt find
Thoſe Children nurſt, deliver'd from thy Brain,
To take a new Acquaintance of thy Mind.
Theſe Offices, ſo oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee, and much inrich thy Book.

A Monument to Fame.

NOT mine own Fears, nor the prophetic Soul
Of the wide World, dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the Leaſe of my true Love controul,
Suppos'd as Forfeit to a confin'd Doom.
The mortal Moon hath her Eclipſe endur'd,
And the ſad Augurs mock their own Preſage:
Incertainties now crown themſelves aſſur'd,
And Peace proclaims Olives of endleſs Age.
Now with the Drops of this moſt balmy Time,
My Love looks freſh, and Death to me ſubſcribes;
Since ſpight of him, I'll live in this poor Rhime,
While he inſults o'er dull and ſpeechleſs Tribes.
And thou in this ſhalt find thy Monument,
When Tyrants Creſts, and Tombs of Braſs are ſpent.

What's in the Brain, that Ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true Spirit?
What's new to ſpeak, what now to regiſter,
That may expreſs my Love, or thy dear Merit?
Nothing, ſweet Love! but yet like Prayers divine,
I muſt each Day ſay o'er the very ſame;
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
E'en as when firſt I hallow'd thy fair Name.
So that eternal Love, in Love's freſh Caſe,
Weighs not the Duſt and Injuries of Age,
Nor gives to neceſſary Wrinkles Place,
But makes Antiquity for aye his Page;
Finding the firſt Conceit of Love there bred,
Where Time, and outward Form would ſhew it dead.

Perjury.

LOVE is too young to know what Conſcience is;
Yet who knows not, Conſcience is born of Love
Then, gentle Cheater, urge not my Amiſs,
Leaſt guilty of my Faults thy ſweet ſelf prove.
For thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler Part to my groſs Body's Treaſon.
My Soul doth tell my Body, that he may
Triumph in Love, Fleſh ſtays no farther Reaſon:
But riſing at thy Name, doth point out thee,
As his triumphant Prize; proud of this Pride,
He is contented thy poor Drudge to be,
To ſtand in thy Affairs, fall by thy Side.
No want of Conſcience hold it, that I call
Her Love, for whoſe dear Love I riſe and fall.

In loving thee thou know'ſt I am forſworn,
But thou art twice forſworn to me, Love-ſwearing;
In Act thy Bed-vow broke and new Faith torn,
In Vowing new Hate after new Love bearing.
But why of two Oaths Breach do I accuſe thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd moſt;
For all my Vows are Oaths but to miſuſe thee;
And all my honeſt Faith in thee is loſt:
For I have ſworn deep Oaths of thy deep Kindneſs;
Oaths of thy Love, thy Truth, thy Conſtancy;
And to enlighten thee, gave Eyes to Blindneſs,
Or made them ſwear againſt the thing they ſee.
For I have ſworn thee Fair: more perjur'd I,
To ſwear againſt the Truth ſo foul a Lye.

The

The Tale of Cephalus and Procris.

BENEATH Hymettus Hill well-cloth'd with Flowers,
A holy Well her ſoft Springs gently pours:
Where ſtands a Cops, in which the Wood-Nymphs ſhrove,
(No Wood) it rather ſeems a ſlender Grove.
The humble Shrubs and Buſhes hide the Graſs,
Here Lawrel, Roſemary, here Myrtle was:
Here grew thick Box, and Tam'risk, that excells,
And made a meer Confuſion of ſweet Smells:
The Triffoly, the Pine; and on this Heath
Stands many a Plant that feels cool Zephyrs Breath.
Here the young Cephalus tyr'd in the Chace,
Us'd his Repoſe and Reſt, alone t' embrace;
And where he ſat, theſe Words he would repeat,
Come Air, ſweet Air, come cool my mighty Heat!
Come gentle Air, I never will forſake thee,
I'll hug thee thus, and in my Boſom take thee.
Some double-duteous Tell-tale hapt to hear this,
And to his jealous Wife doth ſtraight-way bear this.
Which Procris hearing, and withal the Name
Of Air, ſweet Air, which he did oft proclaim;
She ſtands confounded, and amaz'd with Grief,
By giving this fond Tale too ſound Belief:
And looks, as do the Trees by Winter nipt,
Whom Froſt and Cold of Fruit and Leaves half ſtript.
She bends like Corveil, when too rank it grows,
Or when the ripe Fruits clog the Quince-tree Boughs.
But when ſhe comes t' her ſelf, ſhe tears
Her Garments, her Eyes, her Cheeks, and Hairs;
And then ſhe ſtarts, and to her Feet applies her,
Then to the Woods (ſtark Woad) in rage ſhe hies her.

Approaching

Approaching ſome-what near, her Servants they
By her Appointment in a Valley ſtay;
Whilſt ſhe alone with creeping Paces ſteals
To take the Strumpet, whom her Lord conceals.
What mean'ſt thou, Procris, in theſe Groves to hide thee?
What rage of Love doth to this Madneſs guide thee?
Thou hop'ſt the Air he calls, in all her Bravery,
Will ſtraight approach, and thou ſhalt ſee their Knavery.
And now again it irks her to be there,
For ſuch a killing Sight her Heart will tear.
No Truce can with her troubled Thoughts diſpenſe;
She would not now be there, nor yet be thence.
Behold the Place, her jealous Mind foretells,
Here do they uſe to meet, and no where elſe:
The Graſs is laid, and ſee their true Impreſſion;
E'en here they lay: Ay, here was their Tranſgreſſion.
A Body's Print ſhe ſaw, it was his Seat,
Which makes her faint Heart 'gainſt her Ribs to beat.
Phœbus the lofty Eaſtern Hill had ſcal'd,
And all moiſt Vapours from the Earth exhal'd:
Now in his Noon-tide point he ſhineth bright;
It was the middle Hour, 'twixt Noon and Night.
Behold young Cephalus draws to the Place,
And with the Fountain Water ſprinks his Face:
Procris is hid; upon the Graſs he lies,
And come, ſweet Zephyr, come ſweet Air, he cries.
She ſees her Error now from where he ſtood,
Her Mind returns to her, and her freſh Blood;
Among the Shrubs and Briers ſhe moves and ruſtles,
And the injurious Boughs away ſhe juſtles;
Intending as he lay, there to repoſe him,
Nimbly to run, and in her Arms incloſe him.

He

He quickly caſts his Eye upon the Buſh,
Thinking therein ſome ſavage Beaſt did ruſh;
His Bow he bends, and a keen Shaft he draws:
Unhappy Man, what doſt thou! Stay, and pauſe;
It is no brute Beaſt thou would'ſt reave of Life;
O! Man unhappy! thou haſt ſlain thy Wife!
Oh! Heaven, ſhe cries, Oh! help me, I am ſlain;
Still doth thy Arrow in my Wound remain:
Yet though by timeleſs Fate my Bones here lie,
It glads me moſt, that I no Cuck-quean die.
Her Breath (thus in the Arms ſhe moſt affected)
She breaths into the Air (before ſuſpected)
The whilſt he lifts her Body from the Ground,
And with his Tears doth waſh her bleeding Wound.

Cupid's Treachery.

CUPID laid by his Brand and fell aſleep;
A Maid of Dian's this Advantage found;
And his love-kindling Fire did quickly ſteep
In a cold Vally-Fountain of that Ground:
Which borrow'd from his holy Fire of Love,
A dateleſs lively Heat ſtill to endure,
And grew a ſeething Bath, which yet Men prove,
Againſt ſtrange Maladies a ſovereign Cure.
But at my Miſtreſs' Eyes Love's Brand new fired,
The Boy for Trial needs would touch my Breaſt;
I ſick withall the Help of Bath deſired,
And thither hy'd a ſad diſtemper'd Gueſt;
But found no Cure, the Bath for my help lyes
Where Cupid got new Fire, my Miſtreſs' Eyes.

The little Love-God lying once aſleep,
Laid by his Side his Heart in flaming Brand,

Whilſt

Whilſt many Nymphs that vow'd chaſt Life to keep,
Came tripping by, but in her maiden Hand,
The faireſt Votary took up that Fire,
Which many Legions of true Hearts had warm'd;
And ſo the General of hot Deſire
Was ſleeping, by a Virgin Hand diſarm'd.
This Brand ſhe quenched in a cool Well by,
Which from Love's Fire took Heat perpetual,
Growing a Bath and healthful Remedy,
For Men diſeas'd; but I my Miſtreſs' Thrall
Came there for Cure, and this by that I prove,
Love's Fire heats Water, Water cools not Love.

That Menelaus was the Cauſe of his own Wrongs.

WHEN Menelaus from his Houſe is gone,
Poor Helen is afraid to lie alone;
And to allay theſe Fears (lodg'd in her Breaſt)
In her warm Boſom ſhe receives her Gueſt.
What Madneſs was this? Menelaus, ſay:
Thou art abroad, whilſt in thy Houſe doth ſtay
Under the ſelf-ſame Roof, thy Gueſt, and Love:
Mad-man! unto the Hawk thou truſts the Dove.
And who but ſuch a Gull would give to keep Unto the Mountain Wolf, full Folds of Sheep?
Helen is blameleſs, ſo is Paris too,
And did what thou, or I my ſelf would do.
The Fault is thine, I tell thee to thy Face,
By limiting theſe Lovers Time and Place.
From thee the Seeds of all thy Wrongs are grown;
Whoſe Counſels have they follow'd, but thine own?
(Alack!) what ſhould they do? Abroad thou art,
At home thou leav'ſt thy Gueſt to play thy Part.

To lie alone the poor Queen is afraid;
In the next Room an amorous Stranger ſtaid.
Her Arms are ope t' embrace him, he falls in;
And Paris, I acquit thee of the Sin.

And in another Place ſomewhat reſembling this.

Oreſtes liked, but not loved dearly
Hermione, till he had loſt her clearly.
Sad Menelaus, why doſt thou lament
Thy late Miſhap? I prithee be content.
Thou know'ſt the amorous Helen fair and ſweet;
And yet without her didſt thou ſail to Crete:
And thou waſt blithe, and merry all the Way;
But when thou ſaw'ſt ſhe was the Trojan's Prey,
Then waſt thou mad for her, and for thy Life,
Thou canſt not now one Minute want thy Wife.
So ſtout Achilles, when his lovely Bride
Briſeis, was diſpos'd to great Atride;
Nor was he vainly mov'd, Atrides too
Offer'd no more, than he of force muſt do.
I ſhould have done as much, to ſet her free;
Yet I (Heaven knows!) am not ſo wiſe as he.

VULCAN

VULCAN was JUPITER's Smith, an excellent Workman, on whom the Poets father many rare Works, among which I find this one.

MARS and VENUS.

THIS Tale is blaz'd thro' Heav'n; how once unware
Venus and Mars were took in Vulcan's Snare.
The God of War doth in his Brow diſcover
The perfect and true Pattern of a Lover.
Nor could the Goddeſs Venus be ſo cruel
To deny Mars (ſoft Kindneſs is a Jewel
In any Woman, and becomes her well)
In this the Queen of Love doth moſt excel.
(Oh Heaven!) how often have they mockt and flouted
The Smith's Polt-foot (while nothing he miſdoubted)
Made Jeſts of him, and his begrimed Trade;
And his ſmoog'd Viſage, black with Cole-duſt made.
Mars tickled with loud Laughter, when he ſaw
Venus like Vulcan limp, to halt and draw
One Foot behind another with ſweet Grace,
To counterfeit his lame uneven Pace.
Their Meetings firſt the Lovers hide with Fear
From every jealous Eye, and captious Ear.
The God of War, and Love's laſcivious Dame,
In publick View were full of baſhful Shame.
But the Sun ſpies, how this ſweet Pair agree,
(Oh what, bright Phœbus, can be hid from thee?)
The Sun both ſees and blabs the Sight forthwith,
And in all poſt he ſpeeds to tell the Smith.
(Oh Sun!) what bad Examples doſt thou ſhow?
What thou in ſecret ſeeſt, muſt all Men know?

For Silence, ask a Bribe from her fair Treaſure;
She'll grant thee that ſhall make thee ſwell with Pleaſure.
The God, whoſe Face is ſmoog'd with Smoke and Fire,
Placeth about their Bed a Net of Wyar,
So quaintly made, that it deceives the Eye.
Strait (as he feigns) to Lemnos he muſt hie:
The Lovers meet, where he the Train hath ſet,
And both lie faſt catcht in a wiery Net:
He calls the Gods, the Lovers naked ſprall,
And cannot riſe; the Queen of Love ſhews all.
Mars chafes, and Venus weeps, neither can flinch;
Grappled they lie, in vain they kick and wince.
Their Legs are one within another ty'd;
Their Hands ſo faſt, that they can nothing hide.
Amongſt theſe high Spectators, one by chance,
That ſaw them naked in this pitfall Dance,
Thus to himſelf ſaid; If it tedious be,
Good God of War! beſtow thy Place on me.

The Hiſtory how the Minotaur was begot.

IDA of Cedars and tall Trees ſtands full,
Where fed the Glory of the Herd, a Bull,
Snow-white, ſave 'twixt his Horns one Spot there grew;
Save that one Stain, he was of milky Hew.
This fair Steer did the Heifers of the Groves
Deſire to bear as Prince of all the Droves:
But moſt Paſiphae with adulterous Breath,
Envies the wanton Heifers to the Death.
'Tis ſaid, that for this Bull the doating Laſs,
Did uſe to crop young Boughs, and mow freſh Graſs;
Nor was the amorous Cretan Queen afeard
To grow a kind Companion to the Herd.

Thus

Thus through the Champian ſhe is madly born,
And a wild Bull to Minos gives the Horn.
'Tis not for Bravery he can love, or loath thee,
Then why, Paſiphae, doſt thou richly cloath thee?
Why ſhould'ſt thou thus thy Face and Looks prepare?
What mak'ſt thou with thy Glaſs ord'ring thy Hair?
Unleſs thy Glaſs could make thee ſeem a Cow;
But how can Horns grow on that tender Brow?
If Minos pleaſe thee, no Adulterer ſeek thee;
Or if thy Husband Minos do not like thee,
But thy laſcivious Thoughts are ſtill increas'd,
Deceive him with a Man, not with a Beaſt.
Thus by the Queen the wild Woods are frequented,
And leaving the King's Bed, ſhe is contented
To uſe the Groves, born, by the Rage of Mind,
Even as a Ship with a full Eaſtern Wind.
Some of theſe Strumpet Heifers the Queen ſlew,
Her ſmoaking Altars their warm Bloods imbrew;
Whilſt by the ſacrificing Prieſt ſhe ſtands,
And gripes their trembling Entrails in her Hands.
At length, the Captain of the Herd beguil'd
With a Cow's Skin, by curious Art compil'd,
The longing Queen obtains her full Deſire,
And in her Infant's Form bewrays the Sire.

This Minotaur, when he came to growth, was inclos'd in the Labyrinth, which was made by the curious Arts-maſter Dedalus, whoſe Tale likewiſe we thus purſue.

WHEN Dedalus the Labyrinth had built,
In which t'include the Queen Paſiphae's Guilt;
And that the time was now expired full,
To incloſe the Minotaur, half Man, half Bull;
Kneeling he ſays, juſt Minos, end my Moans,
And let my native Soil intomb my Bones:
Or if, dread Sovereign! I deſerve no Grace,
Look with a piteous Eye on my Son's Face;
And grant me leave from whence we are exil'd,
Or pity me, if you deny my Child.
This and much more he ſpeaks, but all in vain;
The King both Sun and Father will detain,
Which he perceiving ſays: Now, now, 'tis fit,
To give the World Cauſe to admire my Wit;
Both Land and Sea are watcht by Day and Night,
Nor Land nor Sea lies open to our Flight,
Only the Air remains; then let us try
To cut a Paſſage thro' the Air, and fly.
Jove be auſpicious in my Enterprize,
I covet not to mount above the Skies:
But make this Refuge, ſince I can prepare
No Means to fly my Lord, but thro' the Air,
Make me immortal, bring me to the Brim
Of the black Stygian Water, Styx I'll ſwim.
Oh! human Wit, thou canſt invent much Ill;
Thou ſearcheſt ſtrange Arts, who would think by Skill,

A heavy Man, like a light Bird ſhou'd ſtray,
And thro' the empty Heavens find a Way?
He placeth in juſt Order all his Quills,
Whoſe Bottoms with reſolved Wax he fills;
Then binds them with a Line, and b'ing faſt tied,
He placeth them like Oars on either Side:
The tender Lad the downy Feathers blew,
And what his Father meant, he nothing knew.
The Wax he faſten'd, with the Strings he play'd,
Not thinking for his Shoulders they were made.
To whom his Father ſpake (and then look'd pale)
With theſe ſwift Ships we to our Land muſt ſail.
All Paſſages doth cruel Minos ſtop,
Only the empty Air he ſtill leaves ope.
That Way muſt we; the Land and the rough Deep
Doth Minos bar, the Air he cannot keep.
But in thy Way beware thou ſet no Eye
On the Sign Virgo, nor Bootes high:
Look not the black Orion in the Face,
That ſhakes his Sword; but juſt with me keep Pace.
Thy Wings are now in faſtning, follow me,
I will before thee fly; as thou ſhalt ſee
Thy Father mount, or ſtoop, ſo I aread thee;
Make me thy Guard, and ſafely I will lead thee.
If we ſhould ſoar too near great Phœbus' Seat,
The melting Wax will not endure the Heat;
Or if we fly too near the humid Seas,
Our moiſten'd Wings we cannot ſhake with Eaſe.
Fly between both, and with the Guſts that riſe,
Let thy light Body ſail amidſt the Skies.
And ever as his little Son he charms,
He fits the Feathers to his tender Arms:
And ſhews him how to move his Body light,
As Birds firſt teach their little young ones Flight.

By this he calls to Council all his Wits,
And his own Wings unto his Shoulders fits;
Being about to riſe, he fearful quakes,
And in this new way his faint Body ſhakes.
Firſt e'er he took his Flight, he kiſs'd his Son,
Whilſt by his Cheeks the briniſh Waters run.
There was a Hillock, not ſo towring tall
As lofty Mountains be, nor yet ſo ſmall
To be with Valleys even, and yet a Hill;
From this thus both attempt their uncouth Skill.
The Father moves his Wings, and with Reſpect
His Eyes upon his wandering Son reflect.
They bear a ſpacious Courſe, and the apt Boy
Fearleſs of Harm, in his new tract doth joy,
And flies more boldly. Now upon them looks
The Fiſhermen, that angle in the Brooks;
And with their Eyes caſt upward frighted ſtand.
By this is Samos Iſle on their left Hand,
Upon the right Lebinthos they forſake,
Aſtipale and the Fiſhy Lake,
Shady Pachine full of Woods and Groves.
When the raſh Youth, too bold in vent'ring roves;
Loſeth his Guide, and takes his Flight ſo high,
That the ſoft Wax againſt the Sun doth fry,
And the Cords ſlip that kept the Feathers faſt,
So that his Arms have Power upon no Blaſt.
He fearfully from the high Clouds looks down
Upon the lower Heavens, whoſe curl'd Waves frown
At his ambitious Height, and from the Skies
He ſees black Night and Death before his Eyes.
Still melts the Wax, his naked Arms he ſhakes,
And thinking to catch hold, no hold he takes.
But now the naked Lad down headlong falls,
And by the Way, he Father, Father, calls,

Help Father, help, I die; and as he ſpeaks,
A violent Surge his Courſe of Language breaks.
Th' unhappy Father, but no Father now,
Cries out aloud, Son Icarus, where art thou?
Where art thou, Icarus, where doſt thou fly?
Icarus, where art? When lo he may eſpy
The Feathers ſwim; aloud he doth exclaim.
The Earth his Bones, the Sea ſtill bears his Name.

Achilles his Concealment of his Sex in the Court of Lycomedes.

NOW from another World doth ſail with Joy,
A welcome Daughter to the King of Troy.
The whilſt the Grecians are already come,
(Mov'd with that general Wrong 'gainſt Ilium)
Achilles in a Smock his Sex doth ſmother,
And lays the blame upon his careful Mother.
What mak'ſt thou, great Achilles, teazing Wool,
When Pallas in a Helm ſhould claſp thy Scull?
What do theſe Fingers with fine Threds of Gold,
Which were more fit a warlike Shield to hold?
Why ſhould that right Hand, Rock, or Tow contain,
By which the Trojan Hector muſt be ſlain?
Caſt of thy looſe Veils, and thy Armour take,
And in thy Hand the Spear of Pallas ſhake.
Thus Lady-like he with a Lady lay,
Till what he was, her Belly muſt bewray.
Yet was ſhe forc'd (ſo ſhould we all believe)
Not to be forc'd ſo, now her Heart would grieve.
When he ſhould riſe from her, ſtill would ſhe cry,
(For he had arm'd him, and his Rock laid by)

And with a ſoft Voice ſpeak: Achilles ſtay,
It is too ſoon to riſe, lie down I pray:
And then the Man that forc'd her, ſhe would kiſs.
What Force (Deidameia) call you this?

A Lover's Complaint.

FROM off a Hill, whoſe concave Womb reworded
A plaintful Story from a ſiſt'ring Vale,
My Spirits t' attend this double Voice accorded,
And down I laid to liſt the ſad-tun'd Tale;
E'er long eſpied a fickle Maid full pale,
Tearing of Papers, breaking Rings a-twain,
Storming her Words with Sorrows Wind and Rain:
Upon her Head a platted Hive of Straw,
Which fortify'd her Viſage from the Sun,
Whereon the Thought might think ſometime it ſaw
The Carcaſs of a Beauty ſpent and done.
Time had not ſcithed all, that Youth begun;
Nor Youth all quit, but ſpight of Heavens fell Rage,
Some Beauty peept through Lettice of ſear'd Age.
Oft did ſhe heave her Napkin to her Eyne,
Which on it had conceited Characters:
Laundring the ſilken Figures in the Brine,
That ſeaſon'd Woe had pelleted in Tears:
And often reading what Contents it bears:
As often ſhreiking undiſtinguiſh'd Woe,
In Clamours of all Size both high and low.
Sometimes her level'd Eyes their Carriage ride,
As they did batt'ry to the Spheres intend:
Sometimes diverted, their poor Balls are ty'd
To th' orbed Earth; ſometimes they do extend

Their

Their view right on; anon their Gazes lend
To every Place at once, and no where fixt;
The Mind and Sight diſtractedly commixt.
Her Hair nor looſe, nor ty'd in formal Plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careleſs Hand of Pride:
For ſome untuck'd deſcended her ſheav'd Hat,
Hanging her pale and pined Cheek beſide;
Some in her threaden Fillet ſtill did bide,
And true to Bondage would not break from thence,
Though ſlackly braided in looſe Negligence.
A thouſand Favours from a Maund ſhe drew,
Of Amber, Chryſtal, and of beaded Jet;
Which one by one ſhe in a River threw,
Upon whoſe weeping Margent ſhe was ſet;
Like Uſury applying wet to wet;
Or Monarchs Hands, that let not Bounty fall,
Where Want crys ſome, but where Exceſs begs all.
Of folded Schedules had ſhe many a one,
Which ſhe perus'd, ſigh'd, tore, and gave the Flood;
Crack'd many a Ring of poſied Gold and Bone,
Bidding them find their Sepulchers in Mud;
Found yet moe Letters ſadly pen'd in Blood,
With ſleided Silk, feat and affectedly
Enſwath'd and ſeal'd to curious Secrecy.
Theſe often bath'd ſhe in her fluxive Eyes,
And often kiſs'd, and often gave a Tear;
Cry'd, O falſe Blood! thou Regiſter of Lyes,
What unapproved Witneſs doſt him bear!
Ink would have ſeem'd more black and damned here!
This ſaid, in Top of Rage the Lines ſhe rents,
Big Diſcontent ſo breaking their Contents.
A Reverend Man that graz'd his Cattle nigh,
Sometime a Bluſterer, that the Ruffle knew
Of Court, of City, and had let go by,

The ſwifteſt Hours obſerved as they flew,
Towards this afflicted Fancy faſtly drew.
And privileg'd by Age, deſires to know,
In brief the Grounds and Motives of her Woe.
So ſlides he down upon his grained Bat,
And comely diſtant ſits he by her Side;
When he again deſires her, being ſat,
Her Grievance with his Hearing to divide;
If that from him there may be ought applied,
Which may her ſuffering Ecſtaſie aſſwage:
'Tis promis'd in the Charity of Age.
Father, ſhe ſays, tho' in me you behold
The Injury of many a blaſting Hour,
Let it not tell your Judgment, I am Old;
Not Age, but Sorrow, over me hath Power.
I might as yet have been a ſpreading Flower,
Freſh to my ſelf, if I had ſelf applied
Love to my ſelf, and to no Love beſide.
But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful Suit; it was to gain my Grace:
O! one by Nature's Outwards ſo commended,
That Maidens Eyes ſtuck over all his Face:
Love lack'd a Dwelling, and made him her Place;
And when in his fair Parts ſhe did abide,
She was new lodg'd and newly Deified.
His browny Locks did hang in crooked Curls;
And every light Occaſion of the Wind
Upon his Lips their ſilken Parcels hurls.
What's ſweet to do, to do will aptly find;
Each Eye, that ſaw him, did inchant the Mind.
For on his Viſage was in little drawn,
What Largeneſs thinks in Paradiſe was ſawn:
Small ſhew of Man was yet upon his Chin;
His Phœnix Down began but to appear,

Like

Like unſhorn Velvet, on that termleſs Skin,
Whoſe Bare out-brag'd the Web it ſeem'd to wear.
Yet ſhew'd his Viſage by that Coſt moſt dear,
And nice Affections wavering ſtood in doubt,
If beſt 'twere as it was, or beſt without.
His Qualities were beauteous as his Form,
For maiden-Tongu'd he was, and thereof free;
Yet if Men mov'd him, was he ſuch a Storm,
As of 'twixt May and April is to ſee,
When Winds breathe ſweet, unruly tho' they be.
His Rudeneſs ſo with his authoriz'd Youth,
Did livery Falſeneſs in a pride of Truth.
Well could he ride, and often Men would ſay,
That Horſe his Mettel from his Rider takes;
Proud of Subjection, noble by the Sway,
What Rounds, what Bounds, what Courſe, what Stop he makes!
And Controverſie hence a Queſtion takes,
Whether the Horſe by him became his Deed,
Or he his manag'd, by th' well-doing Steed?
But quickly on this Side the Verdict went,
His real Habitude gave Life and Grace
To Appertainings and to Ornament,
Accompliſh'd in himſelf, not in his Caſe;
All Aids themſelves made fairer by their Place,
Came for Additions, yet their Purpoſe trim
Piec'd not his Grace, but were all grac'd by him.
So on the Tip of his ſubduing Tongue
All kind of Arguments and Queſtions deep,
All Replication prompt, and Reaſon ſtrong
For his Advantage ſtill did wake and ſleep:
To make the Weeper laugh, the Laugher weep
He had the Dialect, and different Skill,
Catching all Paſſions in his Craft of Will;

That

That he did in the general Boſom reign
Of Young, of Old, and Sexes both inchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In perſonal Duty, following where he haunted.
Conſent's bewitcht, e'er he deſire have granted,
And dialogu'd for him what he would ſay,
Ask'd their own Wills, and made their Wills obey.
Many there were that did his Picture get
To ſerve their Eyes, and in it put their Mind;
Like Fools, that in th' Imagination ſet
The goodly Objects, which abroad they find,
Of Lands and Manſions, their's in Thought aſſign'd,
And labouring in moe Pleaſures to beſtow them,
Than the true gouty Land-lord, who doth own them:
So many have, that never touch'd his Hand,
Sweetly ſuppos'd them Miſtreſs of his Heart:
My Woful ſelf, that did in Freedom ſtand,
And was my own Fee-ſimple, not in Part,
What with his Art in Youth, and Youth in Art,
Threw my Affections in his charmed Power;
Reſerv'd the Stalk, and gave him all my Flower.
Yet did I not, as ſome my Equals did,
Demand of him, nor being deſired, yielded;
Finding my ſelf in Honour ſo forbid,
With ſafeſt Diſtance I my Honour ſhielded:
Experience for me many Bulwarks builded
Of Proofs new bleeding, which remain'd the Foil
Of this falſe Jewel, and his amorous Spoil.
But ah! whoever ſhunn'd by Precedent
The deſtin'd Ill She muſt her ſelf aſſay?
Or forc'd Exampes, 'gainſt her own Content,
To put the by-paſt Perils in her Way?
Counſel may ſtop a-while what will not ſtay:
For when we rage, Advice is often ſeen,
By blunting us, to make our Wits more keen.

Nor

Nor gives it Satisfaction to our Blood,
That we muſt curb it upon others Proof;
To be forbid the Sweets, that ſeem ſo good,
For fear of Harms, that preach in our Behoof.
O Appetite! from Judgment ſtand aloof.
The one a Palate hath, that needs will taſte,
Though Reaſon weep, and cry it is thy laſt.
For further, I could ſay this Man's untrue,
And knew the Patterns of his foul beguiling,
Heard where his Plants in others Orchards grew,
Saw how Deceits were gilded in his ſmiling,
Knew Vows were ever Brokers to defiling,
Thought Characters and Words meerly but Art,
And Baſtards of his foul adult'rate Heart.
And long upon theſe Terms I held my City,
Till thus he 'gan beſiege me: Gentle Maid,
Have of my ſuffering Youth ſome feeling Pity,
And be not of my holy Vows afraid;
What's to you ſworn, to none was ever ſaid.
For Feaſts of Love I have been call'd unto,
'Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow:
All my Offences, that abroad you ſee,
Are Errors of the Blood, none of the Mind:
Love made them not, with Acture they may be,
Where neither Party is nor true nor kind:
They ſought their Shame, that ſo their Shame did find.
And ſo much leſs of Shame in me remains,
By how much of me their Reproach contains.
Among the many, that mine Eyes have ſeen,
Not one whoſe Flame my Heart ſo much as warmed,
Or my Affection put to th' ſmalleſt Teen,
Or any of my Leiſures ever charmed:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmed;
Kept Hearts in Liveries, but mine own was free,
And reign'd commanding in his Monarchy.

Look here what Tributes wounded Fancy ſent me,
Of pallid Pearls, and Rubies red as Blood;
Figuring, that they their Paſſions likewiſe lent me
Of Grief, and Bluſhes aptly underſtood;
In bloodleſs White, and the encrimſon'd Mood,
Effects of Terror, and dear Modeſty,
Encamp'd in Hearts, but fighting outwardly.
And lo! behold theſe Talents of their Hair,
With twiſted Mettle amorouſly empleach'd,
I have receiv'd from many a ſeveral Fair;
Their kind Acceptance, weepingly beſeech'd,
With th' Annexions of fair Gems inrich'd,
And deep-brain'd Sonnets, that did amplifie
Each Stone's dear Nature, Worth, and Quality.
The Diamond! why, 'twas beautiful and hard,
Whereto his invis'd Properties did tend.
The deep green Emrald, in whoſe freſh Regard,
Weak Sights their ſickly Radiance do amend.
The Heav'n-hew'd Saphyr, and the Ophal blend,
With Objects manifold; each ſeveral Stone,
With Wit well blazon'd, ſmil'd, or made ſome moan.
Lo! all theſe Trophies of Affections hot,
Of penſiv'd and ſubdu'd Deſires the Tender,
Nature hath charg'd me, that I hoard them not,
But yield them up where I my ſelf muſt render:
That is, to you my Origin, and Ender.
For theſe of force muſt your Oblations be,
Since I their Altar, you enpatron me.
Oh! then advance (of yours) that phraſeleſs Hand,
Whoſe White weighs down the airy Scale of Praiſe;
Take all theſe Similes unto your own command,
Hallow'd with Sighs, that burning Lungs did raiſe;
What me your Miniſter for you obeys,
Works under you, and to your Audit comes,
Their diſtract Parcels in combined Sums.

Lo!

Lo! this Deviſe was ſent me from a Nun,
Or Siſter ſanctified of holieſt Note,
Which late her noble Suit in Court did ſhun,
Whoſe rareſt Havings made the Bloſſoms dote;
For ſhe was ſought by Spirits of richeſt Coat,
But kept cold Diſtance, and did thence remove,
To ſpend her Living in eternal Love.
But oh! my Sweet, what Labour is't to leave
The thing we have not, maſtring what not ſtrives?
Playing the Place which did no Form receive;
Playing patient Sports in unconſtrained Gives?
She that her Fame ſo to her ſelf contrives,
The Scars of Battle ſcapeth by the Flight,
And makes her Abſence valiant, not her Might.
Oh! pardon me in that my Boaſt is true,
The Accident which brought me to her Eye,
Upon the Moment did her Force ſubdue,
And now ſhe would the caged Cloiſter flie.
Religious Love put out Religious Eye:
Not to be tempted would ſhe be immured,
And now to tempt, all Liberty procured.
How mighty then you are, Oh hear me tell!
The broken Boſoms that to me belong,
Have emptied all their Fountains in my Well;
And mine I pour your Ocean all among.
I ſtrong o'er them, and you o'er me being ſtrong,
Muſt for your Victory us all congeſt,
As compound Love to Phyſick your cold Breaſt.
My Parts had Power to charm a ſacred Sun,
Tho' diſciplin'd I dieted in Grace,
Believ'd her Eyes, when they t'aſſail begun,
All Vows and Conſecrations giving Place.
O! moſt potential Love, Vow, Bond, nor Space,
In thee hath neither String, Knot, nor Confine;
For thou art all, and all things elſe are thine.

When thou impreſſeſt, what are Precepts worth
Of ſtale Example? when thou wilt enflame,
How coldly thoſe Impediments ſtand forth
Of Wealth, of filial Fear, Law, Kindred, Fame?
Love's Arms are Peace, 'gainſt Rule, 'gainſt Senſe, 'gainſt Shame,
And Sweetneſs in the ſuffering Pang it bears,
The Aloes of all Forces, Shocks, and Fears.
Now all theſe Hearts, that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding Groans they pine,
And ſupplicant their Sighs to you extend,
To leave the Battery, that you make 'gainſt mine,
Lending ſoft Audience to my ſweet Deſign:
And credent Soul, to that ſtrong bonded Oath,
That ſhall prefer and undertake my Troth.
This ſaid, his watry Eyes he did diſmount,
Whoſe Sights till then were level'd on my Face.
Each Cheek a River running from a Fount,
With briniſh Current down-ward flow'd apace.
Oh! how the Channel to the Stream gave Grace!
Who glaz'd with Chryſtal Gate the glowing Roſes,
That flame through Water which their Hew incloſes.
Oh! Father, what a Hell of Witch-craft lies
In the ſmall Orb of one particular Tear?
But with the Inundation of the Eyes
What rocky Heart to Water will not wear?
What Breaſt ſo cold, that is not warmed here?
Oh! cleft Effect! cold Modeſty, hot Wrath,
Both Fire from hence, and chill Extincture hath.
For loe his Paſſion but an Art of Craft,
Even there reſolv'd my Reaſon into Tears;
There my white Stole of Chaſtity I daft,
Shook off my ſober Guards, and civil Fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears:
All melting, tho' our Drops this difference bore,
His poiſon'd me, and mine did him reſtore.

In

In him a plenitude of ſubtil Matter,
Applied to Cautles, all ſtrange Forms receives
Of burning Bluſhes, or of weeping Water,
Or ſwooning Paleneſs; and he takes and leaves,
In either's Aptneſs as it beſt deceives,
To bluſh at Speeches rank, to weep at Woes,
Or to turn white, and ſwoon at Tragic Shows.
That not a Heart, which in his level came,
Could 'ſcape the Hail of his all-hurting Aim,
Shewing fair Nature is both wild, and tame:
And veil'd in them did win whom he would maim,
Againſt the thing he ſought, he wou'd exclaim
When he moſt burnt in Heart-wiſh'd Luxury,
He preach'd pure Maid, and prais'd cold Chaſtity.
Thus merely with the Garment of a Grace,
The naked and concealed Fiend he cover'd,
That th' unexperienc d gave the Tempter place,
Which like a Cherubin above them hover'd:
Who Young and Simple wou'd not be ſo lover'd?
Ah me! I fell, and yet do queſtion make,
What I ſhould do again for ſuch a ſake.
Oh! that infected Moiſture of his Eye!
Oh! that falſe Fire, which in his Cheek ſo glow'd!
Oh! that forc'd Thunder from his Heart did flie!
Oh! that ſad Breath his ſpungy Lungs beſtow'd!
Oh! all that borrowed Motion ſeeming owed!
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled Maid.

The Amorous Epiſtle of Paris to Helen.

HEALTH unto Leda's Daughter, Priam's Son
Sends in theſe Lines, whoſe Health cannot be won
But by your Gift, in whoſe Power it may lie
To make me whole, or ſick; to live, or die.
Shall I then ſpeak? or doth my Flame appear
Plain without Index? Oh! 'tis that I fear!
My Love without diſcovering Smile takes place,
And more than I could wiſh ſhines in my Face.
When I could rather in my Thoughts deſire
To hide the Smoak, till Time diſplay the Fire;
Time, that can make the Fire of Love ſhine clear,
Untroubled with the miſty Smoak of Fear.
But I diſſemble it, for who I pray
Can Fire conceal? that will it ſelf betray.
Yet if you look, I ſhould affirm that plain
In Words, which in my Countenance I maintain.
I burn, I burn, my Faults I have confeſs'd,
My Words bear witneſs how my Looks tranſgreſs'd.
Oh! pardon me, that have confeſs'd my Error,
Caſt not upon my Lines a Look of Terror:
But as your Beauty is beyond compare,
Suit unto that your Looks, (Oh! you moſt Fair!)
That you my Letter have receiv'd by this;
The Suppoſition glads me, and I wiſh
By Hope incourag'd, Hope that makes me ſtrong,
You will receive me in ſome ſort e'er long.
I ask no more, than what the Queen of Beauty
Hath promis'd me, for you are mine by Duty.
By her I claim you, you for me were made,
And ſhe it was my Journey did perſwade.
Nor, Lady, think your Beauty vainly ſought;
I by divine Inſtinct was hither brought;

And

And to this Enterprize the heavenly Powers
Have given Conſent, the Gods proclaim me Yours.
I aim at Wonders, for I covet you;
Yet pardon me, I ask but what s my Due.
Venus her ſelf my Journey hither led,
And gives you freely to my promis'd Bed.
Under her Conduct ſafe the Seas I paſt,
Till I arriv'd upon theſe Coaſts at laſt.
Shipping my ſelf from the Sygæan Shore,
Whence unto theſe Confines my Courſe I bore.
She made the Surges gentle, the Winds fair;
Nor marvel whence theſe Calms proceeded are.
Needs muſt ſhe Power upon the ſalt-Seas have,
That was Sea-born, created from a Wave.
Still may ſhe ſtand in her Ability,
And as ſhe made the Seas with much Facility
To be through-ſail'd, ſo may ſhe calm my Heat,
And bear my Thoughts to their deſired Seat.
My Flames I found not here; no, I proteſt,
I brought them with me cloſed in my Breaſt;
My ſelf tranſported them without Attorney,
Love was the Motive to my tedious Journey.
Not bluſtring Winter, when he triumph'd moſt,
Nor any Error drove me to this Coaſt.
Not led by Fortune where the rough Winds pleaſe,
Nor Merchant like for Gain croſt I the Seas.
Fullneſs of Wealth in all my Fleet I ſee,
I'm rich in all things, ſave in wanting thee.
No Spoil of petty Nations my Ship ſeeks;
Nor land I as a Spie among the Greeks.
What need we? See of all things we have Store.
Compar'd with Troy, alas! your Greece is poor.
For thee I come, thy Fame hath thus far driven me,
Whom golden Venus hath by promiſe given me.

I wiſh'd thee e'er I knew thee, long ago,
Before theſe Eyes dwelt on this glorious Show.
I ſaw thee in my Thoughts; know, Beauteous Dame,
I firſt beheld you with the Eyes of Fame.
Nor marvel, Lady, I was ſtroke ſo far.
Thus Darts, or Arrows ſent from Bows of War,
Wound a great Diſtance off; ſo was I hit
With a deep-ſmarting Wound that ranckles yet.
For ſo it pleas'd the Fates, whom leaſt you blame,
I'll tell a true Tale to confirm the ſame.

When in my Mother's Womb full ripe I lay,
Ready the firſt Hour to behold the Day,
And ſhe at Point to be deliver'd ſtrait,
And to unlade her of her Royal Freight,
My Birth-hour was delay'd, and that ſad Night
A fearful Viſion did the Queen affright.
In a Son's Stead, to pleaſe the aged Sire,
She dreamt ſhe had brought forth a Brand of Fire.
Frighted ſhe riſes, and to Priam goes;
To the old King this ominous Dream ſhe ſhows.
He to the Prieſt, the Prieſt doth this return,
That the Child born ſhall ſtately Ilium burn.
Better than he was ware, the Prophet gheſt,
For lo! a kindled Brand flames in my Breaſt.
To prevent Fate, a Peaſant I was held,
Till my fair Shape all other Swains excell'd;
And gave the doubtful World Aſſurance good,
Your Paris was deriv'd from Royal Blood.

Amid the Idæan Fields, there is a Place
Remote, full of high Trees, which hide the Face
Of the green-mantled Earth, where in thick Rows,
The Oak, the Elm, the Pine, the Pitch-Tree grows.

Here

Here never yet did browze the wanton Ewe,
Nor from his Plot the ſlow Ox lick the Dew.
The ſavage Goat, that feeds among the Rocks,
Hath not graz'd here, nor any of their Flocks.
Hence the Dardanian Walls I might eſpy,
The lofty Towers of Ilium reared high.
Hence I the Seas might from the firm Land ſee,
Which to behold, I leant me on a Tree.
Believe me, for I ſpeak but what is true,
Down from the Skie, with feather'd Pinions, flew
The Nephew to great Atlas, and doth ſtand,
With golden Caduceus in his Hand.
This, as the Gods to me thought good to ſhow,
I hold it good, that you the ſame ſhould know.
Three Goddeſſes behind young Hermes move;
Great Juno, Pallas, and the Queen of Love;
Who as in Pomp, and Pride of Gaite they paſs,
Scarce with their Weight they bend the Tops of Graſs.
Amaz'd I ſtart, and endlong ſtands my Hair,
When Maia's Son thus ſays, Abandon Fear,
Thou courteous Swain, that to theſe Groves repaireſt,
And freely judge, which of theſe three is faireſt.
And leſt I ſhould this curious Sentence ſhun,
He tells me by Jove's Sentence all is done.
And to be Judge I no way can eſchew.
This having ſaid, up through the Air he flew.
I ſtraight took Heart-a-grace, and grew more bold;
And there their Beauties one by one behold.
Why am I made the Judge to give this Doom?
Methinks all three are worthy to o'er-come.
To injure two ſuch Beauties, what Tongue dare?
Or prefer one where they be all ſo fair?
Now this ſeems faireſt, now again that other;
Now would I ſpeak, and now my Thoughts I ſmother.

And yet at length the Praiſe of one moſt ſounded,
And from that one my preſent Love is grounded.
The Goddeſſes out of their earneſt Care,
And Pride of Beauty to be held moſt Fair,
Seek with large Arms, and Gifts of wondrous Price,
To their own Thoughts my Cenſure to entice.
Juno the Wife of Jove doth firſt inchant me;
To judge her Faireſt, ſhe a Crown will grant me.
Pallas, her Daughter, next doth undertake me;
Give her the Prize, and Valiant ſhe will make me.
I ſtraight deviſe which can moſt Pleaſure bring,
To be a valiant Soldier, or a King.
Laſt Venus ſmiling, came with ſuch a Grace,
As if ſhe ſway'd an Empire in her Face:
Let not (ſaid ſhe) theſe Gifts the Conqueſt bear;
Combats and Kingdoms are both fraught with Fear.
I'll give thee what thou lov'ſt beſt, (lovely Swain)
The faireſt Saint, that doth on Earth remain,
Shall be thine own: make thou the Conqueſt mine;
Fair Leda's faireſt Daughter ſhall be thine.
This ſaid, when with my ſelf I had deviſed,
And her rich Gifts and Beauty jointly prized;
Venus the Victor, o'er the reſt is plac'd;
Juno and Pallas leave the Mount diſgrac'd.
Mean time my Fate a proſperous Courſe had run,
And by known Signs King Priam call'd me Son.
The Day of my reſtoring is kept Holy
Among the Saints-Days, conſecrated ſolely
To my Remembrance, being a Day of Joy,
For ever in the Calendars of Troy.

As I wiſh you, I have been wiſh'd by others;
The faireſt Maids by me would have been Mothers.
Of all my Favours I beſtow'd not any;
You only may enjoy the Loves of many.

Nor

Nor by the Daughters of great Dukes and Kings,
Have I alone been ſought, whoſe Marriage Rings
I have turn'd back; but by a Strain more high,
By Nymphs and Faries, ſuch as never die.
No ſooner were you promis'd as my Due,
But I all hated to remember You.
Waking I ſaw your Image; if I dreamt,
Your beauteous Figure ſtill appear'd to tempt,
And urge this Voyage; till your Face excelling
Theſe Eyes beheld, my Dreams were all of Helen.
Imagine how your Face ſhould now incite me,
Being ſeen, that unſeen did ſo much delight me.
If I was ſcorch'd ſo far off from the Fire,
How am I burnt to Cinders thus much nigher?
Nor could I longer owe my ſelf this Treaſure,
But thro' the Ocean I muſt ſearch my Pleaſure.
The Phrygian Hatchets to the Roots are put
Of the Idæan Pines, aſunder cut
The Wood-land Mountain yielded me large Fees,
Being deſpoil'd of all her talleſt Trees;
From whence we have ſquar'd out unnumbred Beams,
That muſt be waſh'd within the Marine Streams.
The grounded Oaks are bowed, tho' ſtiff as Steel,
And to the tough Ribs is the bending Keel
Woven by Ship-wrights Craft; then the Main-Maſt,
Acroſs whoſe Middle is the Sail-Yard plac'd,
Tackles and Sails; and next you may diſcern
Our painted Gods upon the hooked Stern.
The God, that bears me on my happy Way,
And is my Guide, is Cupid. Now the Day,
In which the laſt Stroke of the Hammer's heard
Within our Navy, in the Eaſt appear'd:
And I muſt now lanch forth (ſo the Fates pleaſe)
To ſeek Adventures in the Ægean Seas.

My Father and my Mother move Delay,
And by Intreaties would inforce my Stay.
They hang about my Neck, and with their Tears,
Woe me! defer my Journey; but their Fears
Can have no Power to keep me from thy Sight:
And now Caſſandra, full of ſad Affright,
With looſe diſhevel'd Tramels, madly skips,
Juſt in the Way, betwixt me and my Ships.
Oh! whither wilt thou headlong run, ſhe cries?
Thou beareſt Fire with thee, whoſe Smoak up-flies
Unto the Heavens (Oh Jove!) thou little feareſt
What quenchleſs Flames thou thro the Water beareſt.
Caſſandra was too true a Propheteſs;
Her quenchleſs Flames ſhe ſpake of, I confeſs:
My hot Deſires burn in my Breaſt ſo faſt,
That no red Furnace hotter Flames can caſt.

I paſs the City Gates, my Bark I boar'd,
The favourable Winds calm Gales afford,
And fill my Sails; unto your Land I ſteer;
For whither elſe his Courſe ſhould Paris bear?
Your Husband entertains me as his Gueſt;
And all this hapneth by the Gods Beheſt:
He ſhews me all his Paſtures, Parks, and Fields,
And every rare thing Lacedæmon yeilds.
He holds himſelf much pleaſed with my Being,
And nothing hides, that he eſteems worth ſeeing.
I am on fire, till I behold your Face,
Of all Achaia's Kingdom the ſole Grace.
All other curious Objects I defie;
Nothing but Helen can content mine Eye:
Whom when I ſaw, I ſtood transform'd with Wonder,
Senſeleſs, as one ſtruck dead by Jove's ſharp Thunder.
As I revive, my Eyes I rowl and turn,
Whilſt my flam'd Thoughts with hotter Fancies burn:

Even

Even ſo, as I remember, look'd Love's Queen,
When ſhe was laſt in Phrygian Ida ſeen:
Unto which Place by Fortune I was train'd,
Where, by my Cenſure, ſhe the Conqueſt gain'd.
But had you made a fourth in that Contention,
Of Venus' Beauty there had been no mention:
Helen aſſuredly had born from all
The Prize of Beauty, the bright golden Ball.

Only of you may this your Kingdom boaſt,
By you it is renown'd in every Coaſt.
Rumor hath every where your Beauty blaz'd:
In what remote Clime is not Helen prais'd?
From the bright eaſtern Sun's Up-riſe inquire,
Even to his Down-fall where he ſlacks his Fire;
There lives not any of your Sex, that dare
Contend with you, that are proclaim'd ſo fair.
Truſt me; for Truth I ſpeak, nay what's moſt true;
Too ſparingly the World hath ſpoke of you.
Fame, that hath undertook your Name to blaze,
Play'd but the envious Houſewife in your Praiſe.
More than Report could promiſe, or Fame blazon,
Are theſe divine Perfections, that I gaze on.
Theſe were the ſame that made Duke Theſeus laviſh,
Who in thy Prime and Nonage did thee raviſh.
And worthy Rape for ſuch a worthy Man!
Thrice happy Raviſher! to ſeize thee then,
When thou wert ſtript ſtark-naked to the Skin;
A Sight of Force to make the Gods to Sin.
Such is your Country's Guiſe at Seaſons when
With naked Ladies they mixt naked Men.
That he did ſteal thee from thy Friends, I praiſe him,
And for that Deed, I to the Heavens will raiſe him.
That he return'd thee back, by Jove, I wonder;
Had I been Theſeus, he that ſhould aſſunder

Have parted us, or ſnatch'd thee from my Bed,
Firſt from my Shoulders ſhould have par'd my Head.
So rich a Purchaſe, ſuch a glorious Prey,
Sould conſtantly have been detain'd for aye.
Could theſe my ſtrong Arms poſſibly unclaſp,
Whilſt in their amorous Folds they Helen graſp?
Neither by free Conſtraint, nor by free Giving,
Could you depart that Compaſs, and I living.
But if by rough Inforce I muſt reſtore you,
Some Fruits of Love (which I ſo long have bore you)
I firſt would reap, and ſome ſweet Favour gain,
That all my Suit were not beſtow'd in vain.
Either with me you ſhall abide and ſtay,
Or for your Paſs your Maidenhead ſhould pay.
Or ſay I ſpar'd you that, yet would I try,
What other Favour I could elſe come by.
All that belongs to love, I would not miſs;
You ſhould not lett me both to clip, and kiſs.

Give me your Heart, fair Queen, my Heart you owe,
And what my Reſolution is you know.
Till the laſt Fire my breathleſs Body take,
The Fire within my Breaſt can never ſlake.
Before large Kingdoms I preferr'd your Face,
And Juno's Love, and potent Gifts diſgrace.
To fold you in my amorous Arms I chus'd,
And Pallas Vertues ſcornfully refus'd:
When they with Venus on the Hill of Ide,
Made me the Judge their Beauties to decide.
Nor do I yet repent me, having took Beauty, and Strength and Scepter'd Rule forſook.
Methinks I chus'd the beſt, (nor think it ſtrange)
I ſtill perſiſt, and never mean to change:
Only that my Imployment be not vain,
Oh! your more Worth than any Empires gain!

Let

Let me intreat, leaſt you my Birth ſhould ſcorn,
Or Parentage, know I am Royal born.
By marrying me, you ſhall not wrong your State,
Nor be a Wife to one degenerate.
Search the Records where we did firſt begin,
And you ſhall find the Pleiads of our Kin;
Nay Jove himſelf, all others to forbear,
That in our Stock renowned Princes were.
My Father of all Aſia reigns ſole King,
Whoſe boundleſs Coaſt ſcarce any feather'd Wing
Can give a Girdle to; a happier Land,
A Neighbour to the Ocean cannot ſtand.
There in a narrow Compaſs you may ſee,
Cities and Towers, more than may numbred be.
The Houſes gilt, rich Temples that excel,
And you will ſay, I near the great Gods dwell.
You ſhall behold high Ilium's lofty Towers,
And Troy's brave Walls built by no mortal Powers;
But made by Phœbus the great God of Fire,
And by the Touch of his melodious Lyre.
Ask if w'have People to inhabit, when
The ſad Earth groans to bear ſuch Troops of Men,
Judge Helen; likewiſe when you come to Land,
The Aſian Women ſhall admiring ſtand,
Saluting thee with Welcome, more and leſs,
In preſſing Throngs, and Numbers numberleſs.
More, that our Courts can hold of you (moſt fair)
You to your ſelf will ſay, alas! how bare,
And poor Achaia is! when, with great Pleaſure,
You ſee each Houſe contain a City's Treaſure.

Miſtake me not, I Sparta do not ſcorn,
I hold the Land bleſt, where my Love was born:
Tho' barren elſe, rich Sparta Helen bore,
And therefore I that Province muſt adore.

Yet

Yet is your Land, methinks, but lean and empty,
You worthy of a Clime, that flows with Plenty.
Full Troy I proſtrate, it is yours by Duty;
This petty Seat becomes not your rich Beauty.
Attendance, Preparation, Curt'ſie, State,
Fit ſuch a Heavenly Form, on which ſhould wait,
Coſt, freſh Variety, delicious Diet,
Pleaſure, Contentment, and luxurious Riot.
What Ornaments we uſe, what Faſhions feign,
You may perceive by me and my proud Train.
Thus we attire our Men; but with more Coſt
Of Gold and Pearl, the rich Gowns are imboſt,
Of our chief Ladies; gheſs by what you ſee;
You may be ſoon induc'd to credit me.

Be tractable, fair Spartan, nor contemn
A Trojan born, deriv'd from Royal Stem.
He was a Trojan, and allied to Hector,
That waits upon Jove's Cup, and fills him Nectar.
A Trojan did the fair Aurora wed,
And nightly ſlept within her Roſeat Bed.
The Goddeſſes, that ends Night, and enters Day,
From our fair Trojan Coaſt ſtole him away.
Anchiſes was a Trojan, whom Love's Queen,
(Making the Trees of Ida a thick Screen
'Twixt Heaven and her) oft lay with. View me well,
I am a Trojan too, in Troy I dwell.
Thy Husband Menelaus hither bring,
Compare our Shapes, our Years, and every thing.
I make you Judgeſs, wrong me if you can;
You needs muſt ſay, I am the properer Man.
None of my Line hath turn'd the Sun to Blood,
And robb'd his Steeds of their ambroſial Food.
My Father grew not from the Caucaſs Rock,
Nor ſhall I graft you in a bloody Stock.

Priam

Priam ne'er wrong'd the guiltleſs Soul, or further,
Made the Myrtæan Sea look red with Murther:
Nor thirſteth my great Grand-Sire in the Lake
Of Lethe, Chin-deep, yet no Thirſt can ſlake;
Nor after ripen'd Apples vainly skips,
Who flie him ſtill, and yet ſtill touch his Lips.
But what of this? If you be ſo deriv'd,
You notwithſtanding are no Right depriv'd.
You grace your Stock, and being ſo Divine,
Jove is of force compell'd into your Line.

Oh Miſchief! whilſt I vainly ſpeak of this,
Your Husband, all-unworthy of ſuch Bliſs,
Injoys you this long Night, infolds your Waſte,
And where he liſts, may boldly touch and taſte.
So when you ſat at Table, many a Toy
Paſſeth between you, my vext Soul t'annoy.
At ſuch high Feaſts I wiſh my Enemy ſit,
Where Diſcontent attends on every Bit.
I never yet was plac'd at any Feaſt,
But oft it irkt me, that I was your Gueſt.
That which offends me moſt, thy rude Lord knows;
For ſtill his Arms about thy Neck he throws:
Which I no ſooner ſpy but I grow mad,
And hate the Man whoſe Courting makes me ſad.
Shall I be plain? I am ready to ſink down,
When I behold him wrap you in his Gown;
When you ſit ſmiling on his amorous Knee,
His Fingers preſs, where my Hands itch to be.
But when he hugs you, I am forc'd to frown;
The Meat I'm eating will by no means down,
But ſticks half way: amidſt theſe Diſcontents,
I have obſerv'd you laugh at my Laments;
And with a ſcornful, yet a wanton Smile,
Deride my Sighs and Groans: Oft to beguile

My

My Paſſions, and to quench my fiery Rage,
By quaffing Healths I've thought my Flame t' aſſwage;
But 'Bacchus' full Cups make my Flames burn higher:
Add Wine to Love, and you add Fire to Fire.
To ſhun the Sight of many a wanton Feat
Betwixt your Lord and you, I ſhift my Seat,
And turn my Head; but thinking of your Grace,
Love ſcrews my Head to gaze back on your Face.
What were I beſt to do? To ſee you play,
Mads me, and I perforce muſt turn away;
And to forbear the Place where you abide,
Would kill me dead, ſhould I but ſtart aſide.
As much as lies in me I ſtrive to bury,
The Shape of Love, and in Mirth's ſpight ſeem merry.
But oh! the more I ſeek it to ſuppreſs,
The more my blabbing Looks my Love profeſs.

You know my Love, which I in vain ſhould hide;
Would God it did appear to none beſide.
Oh Jove! how often have I turn'd my Cheek,
To hide th' apparent Tears, that Paſſage ſeek
From forth my Eyes; and to a Corner ſtept,
Leſt any Man ſhould ask wherefore I wept!
How often have I told you piteous Tales,
Of conſtant Lovers, and how Love prevails?
When ſuch great Heed to my Diſcourſe I took,
That every Accent ſuited to your Look.
In forged Names my ſelf I repreſented:
The Lover ſo perplex'd, and ſo tormented,
If you will know, Behold I am the ſame,
Paris was meant in that true Lover's Name.
As often, that I might the more ſecurely
Speak looſe immodeſt Words, that ſound impurely;
That they offenceleſs might your ſweet Ears touch,
I've liſpt them up, like one had drunk too much.

Once

Once I remember, your looſe Veil betray'd
Your naked Skin, and a fair Paſſage made
To my enamour'd Eye. Oh! Skin much brighter,
Than Snow, or pureſt Milk, in Colour whiter
Than your fair Mother Leda, when Jove grac'd her,
And in the Shape of feathered Swan embrac'd her;
Whilſt at this raviſhing Sight I ſtood amaz'd,
And without Interruption freely gaz'd;
The wreathed Handle of the Bowl I graſp'd
Fell from my hold, my ſtrengthleſs Hand unclaſp'd.
A Goblet at that time I held by chance,
And down it fell, for I was in a Trance.
Kiſs your Fair Daughter, and to her I skip,
And ſnatch your Kiſſes from your ſweet Child's Lip.
Sometimes I throw my ſelf along, and lie,
Singing Love-Songs; and if you caſt your Eye
On my effeminate Geſture, I ſtill find
Some pretty cover'd Signs to ſpeak my Mind;
And then my earneſt Suit bluntly invades
Æthra and Climene, your two chief Maids.
But they return me Anſwers full of Fear,
And to my Motions lend no further Ear.
Oh! that you were the Prize of ſome great Strife,
And he that wins, might claim you for his Wife.
Hippomenes with ſwift Atlanta ran,
And at one Courſe the Goal and Lady won.
Even ſhe, by whom ſo many Suiters periſh'd,
Was in the Boſom of her new Love cheriſh'd.
So Hercules for Dejaneira ſtrove,
Brake Achelous' Horn, and gain'd his Love.
Had I ſuch Liberty, ſuch Freedom granted,
My Reſolution never could be daunted.
Your ſelf ſhould find, and all the World ſhou'd ſee,
Helen a Prize alone reſerv'd for me.

There is not left me any Means (moſt Fair)
To court you now, but by Entreats and Prayer;
Unleſs (as it becomes me) you think meet,
That I ſhould proſtrate fall, and kiſs your Feet.
Oh! all the Honour, that our laſt Age wins,
Thou Glory of the two Tindarian Twins!
Worthy to be Jove's Wife, in Heaven to reign,
Were you not Jove's own Daughter, of his Strain,
To the Sygean Confines I will carry thee,
And in the Temple of great Pallas marry thee;
Or in this Iſland where I vent my Moans,
I'll beg a Tomb for my exiled Bones.
My Wound is not a ſlight Raze with an Arrow,
But it hath pierc'd my Heart, and burnt my Marrow.
This Prophecy my Siſter oft hath ſounded,
That by an heavenly Dart I ſhould be wounded.
Oh! then forbear (fair Helen!) to oppoſe you
Againſt the Gods, they ſay I ſhall not loſe you.
Yield you to their Beheſt, and you ſhall find
The Gods to your Petitions likewiſe kind.
A thouſand things at once are in my Brain,
Which that I may eſſentially complain,
And not in Papers empty all my Head,
Anon at Night receive me to your Bed.
Bluſh you at this? or, Lady, do you fear
To violate the Nuptial Laws auſtere?
Oh! ſimple Helen! Fooliſh I might ſay,
What Profit reap you to be chaſt, I pray?
Is't poſſible, that you, a World to win,
Should keep that Face, that Beauty without Sin?
Rather you muſt your glorious Face exchange,
For one (leſs fair) or elſe not ſeem ſo ſtrange.
Beauty, and Chaſtity at variance are,
'Tis hard to find one Woman chaſt and fair.

Venus

Venus will not have Beauty over-aw'd,
High Jove himſelf ſtoln Pleaſures will applaud;
And by ſuch theeviſh Paſtimes we may gather,
How Jove, 'gainſt Wedlock's Laws, become your Father.
He and your Mother Leda both tranſgreſs'd;
When you were got, ſhe bare a tender Breaſt.
What Glory can you gain Love-Sweets to ſmother?
Or to be counted chaſter than your Mother?
Profeſs ſtrict Chaſtity, when with great Joy,
I lead you as my Bride-eſpous'd through Troy.
Then, I intreat you, rein your Pleaſures in,
I wiſh thy Paris may be all thy Sin.
If Citherea her firm Covenant keep,
Tho' I within your Boſom nightly Sleep,
We ſhall not much miſdo, but ſo offend,
That we by Marriage may our Guilt amend.

Your Husband hath himſelf this Buſineſs aided,
And tho' not with his Tongue, he hath perſwaded,
By all his Deeds (as much) leaſt he ſhould ſtay
Our private Meetings, he is far away,
Of Purpoſe rid unto the fartheſt Weſt,
That he might leave his Wife unto his Gueſt.
No fitter Time he could have found to viſit
The Creſſian royal Scepter, and to ſieze it.
O ſimple, ſimple Husband! but he's gone,
And going, left you this to think upon:
Fair Wife (quoth he) I prithee in my Place,
Regard the Trojan Prince, and do him Grace.
Behold, a Witneſs I againſt you ſtand,
You have been careleſs of this kind Command.
Count from his firſt Day's Journey, never ſince
Did you regard or grace the Trojan Prince.
What think you of your Husband? that he knows
The worth and value of the Face he owes?

Who (but a Fool) ſuch Beauty wou'd endanger?
Or truſt it to the Mercy of a Stranger?
Then (royal Queen! if neither may intreat,
My quenchleſs Paſſion, nor Love's raging Heat,
Can win you; we are woo'd both to this Crime,
Even by the fit Advantage of the Time:
Either to love ſweet Sport we muſt agree;
Or ſhew our ſelves to be worſe Fools, than He.
He took you by the Hand the Hour he rode,
And knowing I with you muſt make abode,
Brings you to me; what ſhou'd I further ſay?
It was his Mind to give you quite away.

What meant he elſe? Then let's be blith and jolly,
And make the beſt uſe of your Husband's Folly.
What ſhould we do? Your Husband is far gone,
And this cold Night (poor Soul) you lie alone.
I want a Bedfellow, ſo do we either,
What lets us then, but that we lie together?
You ſlumbring think on me, on you I dream.
Both our Deſires are fervent and extream.
Sweet, then appoint the Night; why do you ſtay?
O Night! more clearer than the brighteſt Day.
Then I dare freely ſpeak, proteſt, and ſwear,
And of my Vows the Gods ſhall Record bear.
Then will I ſeal the Contract and the Strife;
From that Day forward we are Man and Wife.
Then queſtionleſs I ſhall ſo far perſwade,
That you with me ſhall Troy's rich Coaſt invade,
And with your Phrygian Gueſt at laſt agree,
Our potent Kingdom and rich Crown to ſee.
But if you (bluſhing) fear the vulgar Bruit,
That ſays, you follow me, to me make Suit,
Fear it not, Helen; I'll ſo work with Fame,
I will (alone) be guilty of all blame.

Duke

Duke Theſeus was my Inſtance, and ſo were
Your Brothers, Lady; can I come more near
To enſample my Attempts by? Theſeus haled
Helen perforce; your Brothers they prevailed
With the Leucippian Siſters: now from theſe,
I'll count my ſelf the fourth (if Helen pleaſe.)
Our Trojan Navy rides upon the Coaſt,
Rigg'd, Arm'd, and Man'd, and I can proudly boaſt,
The Banks are high, why do you longer ſtay?
The Winds and Oars are ready to make way.
You ſhall be like a high Majeſtick Queen,
Led through the Dardan City, and be ſeen
By Millions, who your State having commended,
Will (wondring) ſwear, ſome Goddeſs is deſcended.
Where e'er you walk, the Prieſts ſhall Incenſe burn,
No way you ſhall your Eye, or Body turn,
But ſacrificed Beaſts the Ground ſhall beat,
And bright religious Fires the Welkin heat.
My Father, Mother, Brother, Siſters, all
Ilium and Troy in pomp Majeſtical,
Shall with rich Gifts preſent you (but alas)
Not the leaſt part (ſo far they do ſurpaſs)
Can my Epiſtle ſpeak; you may behold
More, than my Words or Writings can unfold.

Nor fear the Bruit of War, or threatning Steel,
When we are fled, to dog us at the Heel;
Or that all Græcia will their Powers unite:
Of many raviſh'd, can you one recite,
Whom War repurchas'd? Theſe be idle Fears;
Rough bluſtering Boreas fair Orithea bears
Unto the Land of Thrace; yet Thrace ſtill free,
And Athens rais'd no rude Hoſtility.

In

In winged Pegaſus did Jaſon ſail;
And from great Colchos he Medea ſtale;
Yet Theſſaly you ſee can ſhew no Scar
Of former Wounds in the Theſſalian War.
He that firſt raviſh'd you, in ſuch a Fleet,
As ours is, Ariadne brought from Crete.
Yet Minos, and Duke Theſeus were agreed,
About that Quarrel, not a Breaſt did bleed.
Leſs is the Danger (truſt me) than the Fear,
That in theſe vain and idle Doubts appear.
But ſay, rude War ſhould be proclaim'd at length,
Know, I am valiant, and have ſinewy Strength.
The Weapons that I uſe are apt to kill.
Aſia beſides, more ſpacious Fields can fill
With armed Men, than Greece. Amongſt us are More perfect Soldiers, more Beaſts apt for War:
Nor can thy Husband Menelaus be
Of any high Spirit and Magnanimity;
Or ſo well prov'd in Arms: For Helen I,
Being but a Lad, have made my Enemies fly;
Regain'd the Prey from out the Hands of Thieves,
Who had deſpoild our Herds, and ſtol'n our Beeves.
By ſuch Adventures I my Name obtain'd,
(Being but a Lad) the Conqueſt I have gain'd,
Of young Men in their Prime, who much could do;
Deiphubus, Ilioneos too
I have o'ercome in many ſharp Contentions;
Nor think theſe are my vain and forg'd Inventions;
Or that I only hand to hand can fight,
My Arrows when I pleaſe ſhall touch the White.
I'm expert in the Quarry, and the Bow;
You cannot boaſt your heartleſs Husband ſo.
Had you the Power in all things to ſupply me,
And ſhould you nothing in the World deny me;

To

To give me ſuch a Hector to my Brother,
You could not, the Earth bears not ſuch another.
By him alone all Aſia is well mann'd;
He like an Enemy 'gainſt Greece ſhall ſtand,
Oppos'd to your beſt Fortunes; wherefore ſtrive you?
You do not know his Valour that muſt wive you,
Or what hid Worth is in me; but at length
You will confeſs, when you have prov'd my Strength.
Thus either War ſhall ſtill our Steps purſue,
Or Greece ſhall fall in Troy's all-conquering View.
Nor would I fear for ſuch a Royal Wife,
To ſet the univerſal World at Strife.
To gain rich Prizes, Men will venture far,
The Hope of Purchaſe makes us bold in War.
If all the World about you ſhould contend,
Your Name would be eterniz'd without End;
Only be bold; and fearleſs may we ſail
Into my Country, with a proſperous Gale!
If the Gods grant me my expected Day,
I to the full ſhall all theſe Covenants pay.

Helen

Helen to Paris.

NO ſooner came mine Eye unto the Sight
Of thy rude Lines, but I muſt needs re-write.
Dar'ſt thou (Oh ſhameleſs) in ſuch heinous wiſe,
The Laws of Hoſpitality deſpiſe?
And being a Stranger, from thy Country's Reach,
Sollicit a chaſt Wife to Wedlock's Breach?
Was it for this, our free Tænarian Port
Receiv'd thee and thy Train in friendly ſort?
And when great Neptune nothing could appeaſe,
Gave thee ſafe Harbour from the ſtormy Seas?
Was it for this, our Kingdom's Arms ſpread wide,
To entertain thee from the Water-ſide?
Yet thou of foreign Soil remote from hence,
A Stranger, coming we ſcarce knew from whence.
Is perjur'd Wrong the Recompence of Right?
Is all our Friendſhip guerdon'd with Deſpight?
I doubt me then, whether in our Court doth tarry
A friendly Gueſt, or a fierce Adverſary.
Nor blame me, for if juſtly you conſider,
And theſe Preſumptions well compare together,
So ſimple my Complaint will not appear,
But you your ſelf muſt needs excuſe my Fear.
Well, hold me ſimple, much it matters not,
Whilſt I preſerve my chaſt Name far from Spot.
For when I ſeem touch'd with a baſhful Shame,
It ſhews how highly I regard my Fame.
When I ſeem ſad, my Countenance is not fained,
And when I lower, my Look is unconſtrained.
But ſay my Brow be cloudy; my Name's clear,
And reverently you ſhall of Helen hear.

No

No Man from me adulterate Spoils can win,
For to this Hour I have ſported without Sin;
Which makes me in my Heart the more to wonder,
What Hope you have in time to bring me under;
Or from mine Eye what Comfort thou canſt gather,
To pity thee, and not deſpiſe thee rather.
Becauſe once Theſeus hurried me from hence,
And did to me a kind of Violence;
Follows it therefore, I am of ſuch Price,
That raviſh'd once, I ſhould be raviſh'd twice?
Was it my Fault, becauſe I ſtriv'd in vain,
And wanted Strength his Fury to reſtrain?
He flatter'd, and ſpake fair, I ſtrugled ſtill,
And what he got was much againſt my Will.
Of all his Toil, he reap'd no wiſhed Fruit,
For with my wrangling I withſtood his Suit.
At length I was reſtor'd, untoucht, and clear,
In all my Rape I ſuffer'd nought, ſave Fear,
A few untoward Kiſſes, he (God wot)
Of further Favours he could never boaſt;
Dry without Reliſh, by much Striving got,
And them with much ado, and to his Coſt.
I doubt your Purpoſe aims at greater Bliſſes,
And hardly would alone be pleas'd with Kiſſes.
Thou haſt ſome further Aim, and ſeek'ſt to do,
What (Jove defend) I ſhould conſent unto.
He bore not thy bad Mind, but did reſtore me,
Unblemiſh'd, to the Place from whence he bore me.
The Youth was baſhful, and thy Boldneſs lackt,
And 'tis well known, repented his bold Fact.
Theſeus repented, ſo ſhould Paris do,
Succeed in Love, and in Repentance too.
Nor am I angry; who can angry be
With him that loves her? If your Heart agree

With your kind Words, your Suit I could applaud,
So I were ſure your Lines were void of Fraud.
I caſt not theſe ſtrange Doubts, or this diſpenſe,
Like one, that were bereft all Confidence;
Nor that I with my ſelf am in Diſgrace,
Or do not know the Beauty of my Face:
But becauſe too much Truſt hath damag'd ſuch,
As have believ'd Men in their Loves too much.
And now the general Tongue of Women ſaith,
Mens Words are full of Treaſon, void of Faith.

Let others ſin, and Hours of Pleaſures waſte;
'Tis rare to find the ſober Matron chaſt.
Why, ſay it be that Sin prevails with fair ones,
May not my Name be rank'd among the rare ones?
Becauſe my Mother Leda was beguil'd,
Muſt I ſtray too, that am her eldeſt Child?
I muſt confeſs my Mother made a Rape,
But Jove beguil'd her in a borrow'd Shape.
When ſhe (poor Soul) not dreamt of God nor Man,
He trod her like a milk-white feather'd Swan.
She was deceiv'd by Error, if I yield
To your unjuſt Requeſt, nothing can ſhield
Me from Reproach; I cannot plead concealing.
'Twas in Her Error; 'Tis in Me Plain-dealing.
She happily err'd; he that her Honour ſpilt,
Had in himſelf full Power to ſalve the Guilt.
Her Error happy'd me too (I confeſs)
If to be Jove's Child, be a Happineſs.

T' omit high Jove, of whom I ſtand in awe,
As the great Grandſire to our Father-in-Law;
To paſs the Kin I claim from Tantalus,
From Pelops, and from noble Tyndarus.

Leda

Leda by Jove, in Shape of Swan, beguil'd,
Her ſelf ſo chang'd, and by him made with Child,
Proves Jove my Father. Then you idly ſtrive,
Your Name from Gods and Princes to derive.
What need you of old Priam make relation;
Laomedon, or your great Phrygian Nation?
Say, all be true; what then? He of whom moſt,
To be of your Alliance you ſo boaſt.
Jove (five Degrees at leaſt) from you removed,
To be the firſt from me, is plainly proved.
And tho (as I believ'd well) Troy may ſtand,
Powerful by Sea, and full of Strength by Land;
And no Dominion to your State ſuperior,
I hold our Clime nothing to Troy inferior.
Say, you in Riches paſs us, or in Number
Of People, whom you boaſt your Streets to comber;
Yet yours a barbarous Nation is, I tell you,
And in that kind, do we of Greece excel you.
Your rich Epiſtle doth ſuch Gifts preſent,
As might the Goddeſſes themſelves content,
And woo them to your Pleaſure; but if I
Should paſs the Bounds of Shame, and tread awry;
If ever you ſhould put me to my Shifts;
Your ſelf ſhould move me, more than all your Gifts.
Or if I ever ſhall tranſgreſs by ſtealth,
It ſhall be for your ſake, not for your Wealth.
But as your Gifts I ſcorn not, ſo ſuch ſeem
Moſt precious, where the Giver we eſteem.
More then your Preſence, it ſhall Helen pleaſe,
That you for her have paſt the ſtormy Seas;
That ſhe hath caus'd your Toil, that you reſpect her,
And more than all your Trojan Dames affect her.

But ye're a Wag in troth, the Notes and Signs;
You make at Table, in the Meats and Wines,

I have obſerv'd, when I leaſt ſeem'd to mind them,
For at the firſt my curious Eye did find them.
Sometimes (you Wanton) your fixt Eye advances
His Brightneſs againſt mine, darting ſweet Glances,
Out-gazing me with ſuch a ſtedfaſt Look,
That my daz'd Eyes their Splendor have forſook;
And then you ſigh, and by and by you ſtretch
Your amorous Arm outright, the Bowl to reach
That next me ſtands, making Excuſe to ſip
Juſt in the ſelf-ſame Place, that kiſs'd my Lip.
How oft have I obſerv'd your Finger make
Tricks and conceited Signs, which ſtraight I take?
How often doth your Brow your ſmooth Thoughts cloke,
When (to my ſeeming) it hath almoſt ſpoke?
And ſtill I fear'd my Husband would have ſpy'd you,
In troth you are to blame, and I muſt chide you.
You are too manifeſt a Lover, (tuſh)
At ſuch known Signs I could not chuſe but bluſh.
And to my ſelf I oft was forc'd to ſay,
This Man at nothing ſhames. Is this (I pray)
Ought ſave the Truth? oft times upon the Board,
Where Helen was ingraven, you the Word
Amo have under-writ, in new-ſpilt Wine:
(Good ſooth) at firſt I could not ſcan the Line,
Nor underſtand your Meaning. Now (Oh! ſpight)
My ſelf am now taught ſo to read and write.
Should I offend, as Sin to me is ſtrange,
Theſe Blandiſhments have Power chaſt Thoughts to change.
Or if I could be mov'd to ſtep aſtray,
Theſe would provoke me to laſcivious Play.
Beſides, I muſt confeſs, you have a Face,
So admirable, rare, ſo full of Grace,
That it hath Power to woo, and to make ſeiſure
Of the moſt bright chaſt Beauties to your Pleaſure.

Yet had I rather ſtainleſs keep my Fame,
Than to a Stranger hazard my good Name.
Make me your Inſtance, and forbear the Fair,
Of that which moſt doth pleaſe you, make moſt ſpare.
The greateſt Virtues of which wiſe Men boaſt,
Is to abſtain from that, which pleaſeth moſt.
How many gallant Youths (think you) deſire
That which you covet, ſcorch'd with the ſelf-ſame Fire?
Are all the World Fools? Only Paris wiſe?
Or is there none ſave you have judging Eyes?
No, no, you view no more than others ſee,
But you are plainer and more bold with me.
You are more earneſt to purſue your Game;
I yield you not more Knowledge, but leſs Shame.
I would to God, that you had ſail'd from Troy,
When my Virginity and Bed to enjoy,
A thouſand gallant Princely Suiters came.
Had I beheld young Paris, I proclaim,
Of all thoſe thouſand I had made you Chief,
And Spartan Menelaus to his Grief,
Should to my Cenſure have ſubſcrib'd and yielded.
But now, alas! your Hopes are weakly builded:
You covet Goods poſſeſt, Pleaſures fore-taſted,
Tardy you come, that ſhould before have haſted;
What you deſire, another claims as due:
As I could wiſh t'have been eſpous'd to you;
So let me tell you, ſince it is my Fate,
I hold me happy in my preſent State.
Then ceaſe, fair Prince, an idle Suit to move,
Seek not to harm her whom you ſeem to love.
In my contented State let me be guided,
As both my States and Fortunes have provided.
Nor in ſo vain a Queſt your Spirits toil,
To ſeek at my Hands an unworthy Spoil.

But ſee how ſoon poor Women are deluded,
Venus her ſelf this Covenant hath concluded;
For in the Idæan Vallies you eſpy
Three Goddeſſes ſtripp'd naked to your Eye;
And when the firſt had promis'd you a Crown,
The ſecond, Fortitude and Wars Renown;
The third, beſpake you thus: Crown, nor War's Pride
Will I bequeath, but Helen to thy Bride.
I ſcarce believe, thoſe high immortal Creatures
Would to your Eye expoſe their naked Features.
Or ſay the firſt Part of your Tale be pure,
And meet with Truth; the ſecond's falſe I'm ſure,
In which poor I was thought the greateſt Meed,
In ſuch a high Cauſe by the Gods decreed.
I have not of my Beauty ſuch Opinion,
T' imagine it preferr'd before Dominion,
Or Fortitude; nor can your Words perſwade me,
The greateſt Gift of all the Goddeſs made me.
It is enough to me, Men praiſe my Face;
But from the Gods I merit no ſuch Grace.
Nor doth the Praiſe, you charge me with, offend me,
If Venus do not enviouſly commend me.
But lo! I grant you, and imagine true,
Your free Report, claiming your Praiſe as due;
Who would in pleaſing Things call Fame a Lyar,
But give that Credit, which we moſt deſire?

That we have mov'd theſe Doubts, be not you griev'd;
The greateſt Wonders are the leaſt believ'd.
Know then, I firſt am pleas'd that Venus ought me
Such undeſerved Grace; next, that you thought me
The greateſt Meed. Nor Scepter, nor War's Fame,
Did you prefer before poor Helen's Name.

(Hard

(Hard Heart! tis time thou ſhouldſt at laſt come down)
Therefore I am your Valour, I your Crown.
Your Kindneſs conquers me do what I can;
I were hard-hearted, not to love this Man.
Obdurate I was never, and yet coy,
To favour him whom I can ne'er enjoy.
What profits it the barren Sands to plow,
And in the Furrows our Affections ſow.
In the ſweet Theft of Venus I am rude,
And know not how my Husband to delude.
Now I theſe Love-lines write, my Pen, I vow,
Is a new Office taught, not known till now.
Happy are they, that in this Trade have Skill;
Alas! I am a Fool and ſhall be ſtill;
And having till this Hour not ſtept aſtray,
Fear in theſe Sports, leaſt I ſhould miſs my Way.
The Fear (no doubt) is greater than the Blame,
I ſtand confounded and amaz'd with Shame;
And with the very Thought of what you ſeek,
Think every Eye fixt on my guilty Cheek.
Nor are theſe Suppoſitions merely vain,
The murmuring People whiſperingly complain,
And my Maid Æthra hath by liſtning ſlily
Brought me ſuch News, as touch'd mine Honour highly.
Wherefore (dear Lord) diſſemble or deſiſt,
Being over-Eyed, we cannot as we liſt
Faſhion our Sports, our Loves pure Harveſt gather;
But why ſhould you deſiſt? Diſſemble rather.
Sport (but in ſecret) ſport where none may ſee.
The greater, but not greateſt Liberty,
Is limited to our laſcivious Play,
That Menelaus is far hence away.
My Husband about great Affairs is poſted,
Leaving his Royal Gueſt ſecurely hoſted;

His

His Buſineſs was important and material,
Being employed about a Crown Imperial.
And as he now is mounted on his Steed,
Ready on his long Journey to proceed;
E'en as he queſtions to depart, or ſtay,
Sweet Heart (quoth I) Oh! be not long away.
With that he reach'd me a ſweet parting Kiſs,
(How loth he was to leave me, gheſs by this)
Farewel fair Wife (ſaith he) bend all thy Cares
To my domeſtick Buſineſs, home Affairs;
But as the thing that I affection beſt,
Sweet Wife, look well unto my Trojan Gueſt.
It was no ſooner out, but with much Pain
My itching Spleen from Laughter I reſtrain,
Which ſtriving to keep in and bridle ſtill,
At length I wrung forth theſe few Words (I will.)
He's on his Journey to the Iſle of Crete,
But think not we may therefore ſafely meet:
He is ſo abſent, that as preſent I
Am ſtill within his Reach, his Ear, his Eye;
And tho' abroad, his Power at home commands;
For know you not, Kings have long reaching Hands?
The Fame for Beauty you beſides have given me,
Into a great Exigent hath driven me.
The more your Commendation fill'd his Ear,
The more juſt Cauſe my Husband hath to fear.
Nor marvel you the King hath left me ſo,
Into remote and foreign Climes to go;
Much Confidence he dares repoſe in me,
My Carriage, Haviour, and my Modeſty,
My Beauty he miſtruſts, my Heart relies in,
My Face he fears, my chaſt Life he affies in.

To take Time now, when Time is, you perſwade me,
And with his apt fit Abſence you invade me,

I would, but fear, nor is my Mind well ſet;
My Will wou'd further what my Fear doth lett.
I have no Husband here, and you no Wife;
I love your Shape, you mine, dear as your Life.
The Nights ſeem long to ſuch as ſleep alone;
Our Letters meet to interchange our Moan.
You judge me beauteous, I eſteem you fair;
Under one Roof we Lovers lodged are:
And, let me die, but every thing conſider,
Each thing perſwades us we ſhall lie together.
Nothing we ſee moleſts us, nought we hear;
And yet my forward Will is ſlack through Fear.
I would to God, that what you ill perſwade,
You could as well compel; ſo I were made
Unwilling willing, pleaſingly abus'd;
So my Simplicity might be excus'd.
Injuries Force is oft-times wondrous pleaſing
To ſuch as ſuffer Eaſe in their diſeaſing.
If what I will, you 'gainſt my Will ſhould do,
I with ſuch Force could be well pleaſed too.

But whilſt our Love is young and in the Bud,
Suffer his infant Vigor be withſtood.
A Flame new kindled is as eaſily quench'd,
And ſudden Sparks in little Crops are drench'd.
A Traveller's Love is like himſelf, unſtay'd,
And wanders where he walks; it is not laid
On any firmer Ground; for when we alone
Think him to us, the Wind blows fair, he's gone.
Witneſs Hypſipile, alike betray'd;
Witneſs with her the bright Mynoian Maid:
Nay then your ſelf, as you your ſelf have ſpoken,
To fair OEnone have your Promiſe broken.
Since I beheld your Face firſt, my Deſire
Hath been, of Trojan Paris to inquire.

I know you now in every true Reſpect;
I'll grant you thus much then, ſay you affect
Me (whom you term your own) I'll go thus far;
Do not the Phrygian Mariners prepare
Their Sails and Oars, and now whilſt we recite
Exchange of Words about the wiſhed Night?
Say that, even now you were prepar'd to clime
My long-wiſh'd Bed, juſt at th' appointed time,
The Wind ſhould alter and blow fair for Troy,
You muſt break off, in midſt of all your Joy,
And leave me in the Infancy of Pleaſure;
Amid my Riches, I ſhall loſe my Treaſure.
You will forſake the Sweets my Bed affords,
T' exchange for Cabins, Hatches, and pitch'd Boards.
Then what a fickle Courtſhip you commence,
When, with the firſt Wind, all your Love blows hence?
But ſhall I follow you when you are gone,
And be the Grand-child to Laomedon?
And Ilium ſee whoſe Beauty you proclaim?
I do not ſo deſpiſe the Bruit of Fame,
That ſhe to whom I am in debt ſuch Thanks,
Should fill the Earth with ſuch adulterate Pranks.
What will Achaia? what will Sparta ſay?
What will your Troy report, and Aſia?
What may old Priam, or his reverend Queen?
What may your Siſters, having Helen ſeen?
Or your Dardanian Brothers deem of me?
Will they not blame my looſe Inchaſtity?
Nay, how can you your ſelf faithful deem me,
And not amongſt the looſeſt Dames eſteem me?
No Stranger ſhall your Aſian Ports come near,
But he ſhall fill your guilty Soul with Fear.
How often, angry at ſome ſmall Offence,
Will you thus ſay; Adultreſs, get thee hence?

For-

Forgetting you your ſelf have been the Chief
In my Tranſgreſſion, tho' not in my Grief.
Conſider what it is, forgetful Lover,
To be Sin's Author, and Sin's ſharp Reprover.
But e'er the leaſt of all theſe Ills betide me,
I wiſh the Earth may in her Boſom hide me.

But I ſhall all your Phrygian Wealth poſſeſs,
And more than your Epiſtle can expreſs.
Gifts, woven Gold, Imbroidery, rich Attire,
Purple and Plate, or what I can deſire.
Yet give me leave, think you all this extends
To countervail the Loſs of my chief Friends?
Whoſe Friendſhip, or whoſe Aid ſhall I imploy,
To ſuccour me when I am wrong'd in Troy?
Or whether can I, having thus miſ-done,
Unto my Father, or my Brothers run?
As much as you to me, falſe Jaſon ſwore
Unto Medea, yet from Æſon's Door
He after did exile her. Now poor Heart,
Where is thy Father that ſhould take thy part?
Old Ætes, or Chalciope? thou tookeſt
No Aid from them, whom thou before forſookeſt.
Or ſay thou didſt (alas! they cannot hear
Thy ſad Complaints) yet I no ſuch thing fear.
No more Medea did; good Hopes ingage
Themſelves ſo far, they fail in their Preſage.
You ſee the Ships, that in the Main are toſt,
And many times by Tempeſts wrackt and loſt,
Had at their lanching from the Haven's Mouth,
A ſmooth Sea, and a calm Gale from the South.
Beſides, the Brand your Mother dreamt ſhe bare,
The Night before your Birth, breeds me freſh Care:
It propheſy'd, e'er many Years expire,
Inflamed Troy muſt burn with Greekiſh Fire.

As Venus favours you, becauſe ſhe gain'd
A doubtful Prize by you; yet the diſdain'd
And vanquiſh'd Goddeſſes, diſgrac'd ſo late,
May bear you hard; I therefore fear their Hate.
Nor make no queſtion, but if I conſort you,
And for a Raviſher our Greece report you;
War will be wag'd with Troy, and you ſhall rue;
The Sword (alas) your Conqueſt ſhall purſue.
When Hippodamia at her bridal Feaſt,
Was rudely raviſh'd by her Centaur Gueſt,
Becauſe the Salvages the Bride durſt ſeize,
War grew betwixt them and the Lapythes.
Or think you Menelaus hath no Spleen?
Or that he hath not Power t' avenge his Teen?
Or that old Tyndarus this Wrong can ſmother?
Or the two famous Twins, each lov'd of other?

So where your Valour and rare Deeds you boaſt,
And warlike Spirits, in which you triumph moſt;
By which you have attain'd 'mongſt Souldiers Grace;
None will believe you, that but ſees your Face.
Your Feature, and fair Shape, is fitter far
For amorous Courtſhips, than remorſleſs War.
Let rough-hew'd Soldiers warlike Dangers prove;
'Tis pity Paris ſhould do ought ſave love.
Hector (whom you ſo praiſe) for you may fight:
I'll find you War to skirmiſh every Night,
Which ſhall become you better. Were I wiſe,
And bold withal, I might obtain the Prize,
In ſuch ſweet ſingle Combats, hand to hand,
'Gainſt which no Woman that is wiſe will ſtand.
My Champion I'll encounter Breaſt to Breaſt,
Though I were ſure to fall, and be o'erpreſt.

If

If that you private Conference intreat me,
I apprehend you, and you cannot cheat me:
I know the Meaning, durſt I yield thereto,
Of what you would confer, what you would do.
You are too forward, you too far would wade;
But yet (God knows) your Harveſt's in the Blade.
My tired Pen ſhall here its Labour end;
A guilty Senſe in thieviſh Lines I ſend.
Speak next, when your Occaſion beſt perſwades,
By Clymene and Æthra, my two Maids *.

The Paſſionate Shepherd to his Love.

LIVE with me, and be my Love,
And we will all the Pleaſure prove,
That Hills and Vallies, Dale and Field,
And all the craggy Mountains yield.
There will we ſit upon the Rocks,
And ſee the Shepherds feed their Flocks,
By ſhallow Rivers, by whoſe Falls
Melodious Birds ſing Madrigales.
There will I make thee Beds of Roſes,
With a thouſand fragrant Poſies;
A Cap of Flowers, and a Girdle
Imbroider'd all with leaves of Myrtle;
A Gown made of the fineſt Wool,
Which from our pretty Lambs we pull;
Fair lined Slippers for the cold,
With Buckles of the pureſt Gold;

---

* N. B. The Tranſlation of theſe Epiſtles is looſe, and not without Errors, and yet they juſtify what I have ſaid in the Preface, concerning Shakeſpear's Learning.

A Belt of Straw, and Ivie Buds,
With Coral Claſps, and Amber Studs.
And if theſe Pleaſures may thee move,
Then live with me, and be my Love.
The Shepherds Swains ſhall dance and ſing,
For thy Delight each May Morning.
If theſe Delights thy Mind may move,
Then live with me, and be my Love.

The Nymph's Reply to the Shepherd.

IF that the World and Love were young,
And Truth in every Shepherd's Tongue;
Theſe pretty Pleaſures might me move,
To live with thee, and be thy Love.
Time drives the Flocks from Field to Fold,
When Rivers rage, and Rocks grow cold;
And Philomel becometh dumb,
And all complain of Cares to come:
The Flowers do fade, and wanton Fields
To wayward Winter reckoning yields.
A honey Tongue, a Heart of Gall,
Is Fancy's Spring, but Sorrow's Fall.
Thy Gowns, thy Shoes, thy Bed of Roſes,
Thy Cap, thy Girdle, and thy Poſies;
Some break, ſome wither, ſome forgotten,
In Folly ripe, in Reaſon rotten.
Thy Belt of Straw and Ivie Buds,
Thy Coral Claſps and Amber Studs,
All theſe in me no means can move,
To come to thee, and be thy Love.
But could Youth laſt, and Love ſtill breed,
Had Joys no date, and Age no need;

Then

Then theſe Delights my Mind might move,
To live with thee, and be thy Love.

Another of the ſame Nature.

COME live with me and be my Dear,
And we will revel all the Year,
In Plains and Groves, on Hills and Dales,
Where fragrant Air breeds ſweeteſt Gales.
There ſhall you have the beauteous Pine,
The Cedar, and the ſpreading Vine,
And all the Woods to be a Skreen,
Leſt Phœbus kiſs my Summer's Queen.
The Seat of your Diſport ſhall be
Over ſome River in a Tree;
Where ſilver Sands and Pebbles ſing
Eternal Ditties to the Spring.
There ſhall you ſee the Nymphs at play,
And how the Satyrs ſpend the Day;
The Fiſhes gliding on the Sands,
Offering their Bellies to your Hands
The Birds with heavenly-tuned Throats,
Poſſeſs Woods Ecchoes with ſweet Notes;
Which to your Senſes will impart
A Muſick to inflame the Heart.
Upon the bare and leafeleſs Oak,
The Ring-Doves Wooings will provoke
A colder Blood than you poſſeſs,
To play with me, and do no leſs.
In Bowers of Laurel trimly dight,
We will outwear the ſilent Night;
While Flora buſie is to ſp ead
Her richeſt Treaſure on our Bed.

The

The Glow-worms ſhall on you attend,
And all their ſparkling Lights ſhall ſpend,
All to adorn and beautifie
Your Lodging with moſt Majeſty.
Then in my Arms will I incloſe
Lillies fair Mixture with the Roſe;
Whoſe nice Perfections in Love's Play,
Shall tune me to the higheſt Key.
Thus as we paſs the welcome Night
In ſportful Pleaſures and Delight,
The nimble Fairies on the Grounds
Shall dance and ſing melodious Sounds.
If theſe may ſerve for to intice
Your Preſence to Love's Paradiſe,
Then come with me, and be my Dear,
And we will ſtrait begin the Year.

TAKE, O! take thoſe Lips away,
That ſo ſweetly were forſworn,
And thoſe Eyes, the break of Day,
Lights which do miſlead the Morn.
But my Kiſſes bring again,
Seals of Love, tho' ſeal'd in vain.

Hide, O! hide thoſe Hills of Snow,
Which thy frozen Boſom bears,
On whoſe Tops the Pinks that grow,
Are of thoſe that April wears.
But my poor Heart firſt ſet free,
Bound in thoſe Icy Chains by thee.

LET

LET the Bird of loweſt lay
On the ſole Arabian Tree,
Herauld ſad, and Trumpet be,
To whoſe Sound chaſt Wings obey.
But thou ſhrieking Harbinger,
Foul Procuror of the Fiend,
Augur of the Feavers End,
To this Troop come thou not near.
From this Seſſion interdict
Every Fowl of Tyrant Wing,
Save the Eagle feather'd King;
Keep the Obſequy ſo ſtrict;
Let the Prieſt in Surplice white,
That defunctive Muſick can,
Be the Death-divining Swan,
Leſt the Requiem lack his Right.
And thou treble-dated Crow,
That thy ſable Gender mak'ſt,
With the breath thou giv'ſt and tak'ſt,
'Mongſt our Mourners ſhalt thou go.
Here the Anthem doth commence,
Love and Conſtancy is dead,
Phœnix and the Turtle fled,
In a mutual Flame from hence.
So they loved as Love in twain
Had the Eſſence but in one,
Two Diſtincts but in none;
Number there in Love was ſlain,
Hearts remote, yet not aſunder,
Diſtance and no Space was ſeen
'Twixt thy Turtle, and his Queen,
But in them it were a Wonder.

So between them Love did ſhine,
That the Turtle ſaw his Right,
Flaming in the Phœnix Sight,
Either was the others mine.
Property was thus appalled,
That the ſelf was not the ſame,
Single Natures, double Name,
Neither two nor one was called.
Reaſon in it ſelf confounded,
Saw Diviſion grow together,
To themſelves yet either, neither
Simple were ſo well compounded,
That it cried, how true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one;
Love hath Reaſon, Reaſon none,
If what parts can ſo remain.
Whereupon it made this Threne,
To the Phœnix and the Dove,
Co-ſupreams and Stars of Love,
As Chorus to their tragick Scene.

THRENES

THRENES.

BEAUTY, Truth, and Rarity,
Grace in all Simplicity,
Hence incloſed, in Cinders lie.
Death is now the Phœnix Neſt,
And the Turtle's loyal Breaſt
To Eternity doth reſt.
Leaving no Poſterity,
'Twas not their Infirmity,
It was married Chaſtity.
Truth may ſeem, but cannot be,
Beauty brag, but 'tis not ſhe,
Truth and Beauty buried be.
To this Urn let thoſe repair,
That are either true, or fair;
For theſe dead Birds ſigh a Prayer.

WHY ſhould this Deſart be,
For it is unpeopled? No,
Tongue I'll hang on every Tree,
That ſhall civil Sayings ſhow.
Some how brief the Life of Man
Runs his erring Pilgrimage,
That the ſtretching of a Span
Buckles in his Sum of Age
Some of violated Vows
'Twixt the Souls of Friend and Friend.
But upon the faireſt Boughs,
Or at every Sentence end,

Will

Will I Rosalinda write,
  Teaching all that read to know
The Quintessence of every Sprite,
  Heaven would in little show.
Therefore Heaven Nature chang'd,
  That one Body should be fill'd
With all Graces wide enlarg'd,
  Nature presently distill'd,
Helen's Cheek, but not her Heart,
  Cleopatra's Majesty;
Atalanta's better Part,
  Sad Lucretia's Modesty.
Thus Rosalind of many Parts,
  By heavenly Synods was devis'd,
Of many Faces, Eyes and Hearts,
  To have the Touches dearest priz'd.
Heaven would these Gifts She should have,
  And I to live and die her Slave.

REMARKS
ON THE PLAYS
OF
SHAKESPEAR.

I HAVE in my Eſſay prefix'd to this Volume, laid down Rules by which the Reader may judge of the Miſtakes of our Poet ſo far, as by his Authority not to be drawn into an Imitation of his Errors, by miſtaking them for Beauties. I ſhall now in theſe Remarks point out the Beauties of this Author, which are worthy the Obſervation of all the ingenious Lovers of this Art, and thoſe who deſire to arrive at any Perfection in it.

Mr. Rowe has very well obſerv'd, that the Fable is not the Province of the Drama, in which the Strength and Maſtery of Shakeſpear lies; yet I ſhall give a Scheme of all his Plots, that ſo we may the more eaſily ſee how far he has ſucceeded by the Force of Nature, and where he has fail'd. I begin in the Order in which they are printed in this new Edition. And in the Firſt we find his Tempeſt.

The Argument or Fable of the TEMPEST.

" Proſpero Duke of Milan being entirely given up to his Study, re-
" poſes the Truſt of the Government in his Brother Antonio, who having
" all the Sovereignty but the Name, is unſatisfy'd, till he obtains that by
" Treaſon. Wherefore having made a ſecret Compact with the King of

" Naples, he lets him into Milan in the Night; and ſeizing his Brother " and his Infant Daughter, ſends them out to Sea in a tatter'd, unrigg'd " Boat. Gonzalo, who by the Tyrant was commanded to put this in " execution, out of his own Compaſſion furniſhes him with ſome Proviſion, " and ſome of his own Books. Being thus defenceleſs left to the Mercy " of the Ocean, Providence drove him on a barren Iſland, where he found " no body but a ſort of Incubus, Son to a notorious Witch of Algiers. " And here he liv'd twelve Years in Solitude, and in the Study and Exer- " ciſe of the Art of Natural Magic. Till now the ſame King of Naples, " his only Son, and Antonio, Proſpero's treacherous Brother, and others, " returning from marrying the Daughter of Naples to the King of Tunis, " fall into his Spells; for Proſpero raiſing a Storm, has them all caſt away " on this barren enchanted Iſland, tho none of them periſh in the Wreck " —Here the Play begins — Theſe Princes being all caſt aſhore and diſ- " pers'd in the Iſland, the Pangs of their evil Deeds, and the ſuppos'd " Loſs of the King's Son torment the guilty King and ſome of his Train; " while his Son indeed is by Proſpero's Spirits brought to the Sight of " Miranda, Proſpero's Daughter, who before had ſeen none of Mankind " but her Father. The young Pair fall mutually in love with each other. " The King likewiſe and his Train having undergone great Pains, Agonies, " and Terrors, are brought to Proſpero's Cave by his Spirit Ariel; where " having been upbraided by Proſpero, who owns himſelf to them, they " all are reconcil'd, Proſpero's Daughter being to be married to Ferdinand " the King's Son; ſo with the promiſe of a proſperous Voyage the Play " ends.

I can't find that this Plot was taken from any Novel, at leaſt not from any that Mr. Langbain had ſeen, who was very converſant with Books of that nature. But it does not at all follow, that there was no ſuch Story in any of the Books of his time, which might never reach our Age; nor is it of much Importance.

Tho the Fable of this Play may come ſhort of Perfection in ſome Particulars, yet I muſt ſay this, that we have few on the Engliſh Stage that can compare with it for Excellence. For firſt it is the Imitation of one Action, i. e. The Reſtoration of Proſpero to his Dutchy of Milan. The Action is of a juſt Extent, for it has a Beginning, Middle and End; the caſting away of the King of Naples, Antonio, &c. on the enchanted Iſland, is plainly the Beginning, ſince to this there is nothing neceſſary to be before; it is the Sequel indeed of ſomething elſe, but not the Effect. Thus their being caſt on the Coaſt, produces all that happens to them, till the Diſcovery, which is the Middle: and when Proſpero is reconcil'd by their Sufferings, and his Paſſions abated, the Middle, which is their Sufferings, produces the End in the Reconciliation of the Parties. Here is likewiſe in this Fable a Peripetie and Diſcovery. For the State, Condition and Fortune of the King is changed from the extremeſt Miſery to Happineſs by the the Diſcovery of Proſpero, and Ferdinand. 'Tis true, the Diſcovery of Proſpero is not ſo fine as that of Ulyſſes by the Nurſe, but it is ev'ry whit as good as the Diſcovery that Ulyſſes makes of himſelf to the Shepherds. There is a perfect Unity in the Action, and in the Time; which tho a little confuſedly expreſs'd (which I attribute to the repeated Errors of the Editors, not to Shakeſpear) yet it is concluded by Alonzo, and the Sailors, to be but three Hours. Proſpero in the firſt Act demands of his Spirit Ariel——What is the time of the Day——who anſwers Ariel, Paſt the mid Seaſon. Proſp. At leaſt two Glaſſes. The Time 'twixt ſix and now, muſt by us be ſpent moſt preciouſly.

ACT V. SCENE I.

Proſp. How's the Day?
Ariel. On the ſixth Hour, at which Time, my Lord,
You ſaid our Work ſhould ceaſe.
Proſp. I did ſay ſo when firſt I rais'd the Tempeſt.

The whole Time from the raiſing the Storm to the End of the Play is but ſix Hours; the Play plainly opens at the very End of the Storm, ſo that we cannot ſuppoſe it more than three Hours and a half; which is far more regular in that Particular, than any that I know of on the Stage. The Unity of Place is not quite ſo regular, and yet we have few Plays that excel it even in this Particular. But if the Scene of the Storm were out, and which has very little to do there, the Place would be brought into a much leſs compaſs, and the ſeveral Scenes may very well be allow'd to be reaſonably ſuppos'd pretty contiguous. At leaſt when two Gentlemen ſet themſelves to alter a Poet of Shakeſpear's Genius, one wou'd expect, that they ſhou'd endeavour to correct his Errors, not to add more. It had been extremely eaſy for Sir William, and Mr. Dryden to have remedy'd this Particular, which they have not at all attempted; nay, they have added nothing but what makes their Compoſition not only much leſs perfect, but infinitely more extravagant, than this Poem which they pretend to alter; as I ſhall ſhow when I come to the Characters. Shakeſpear has met with this fortune in many of his Plays, while Mr. Durfey and Mr. Cibber have only given us their wiſe Whimſeys for what they blotted out of the Poet. The Pretenders to alter this Poet ſhou'd never meddle with him unleſs they cou'd mend his Fable and Conduct, ſince they can never give us the Manners, Sentiments, Paſſions, and Diction, finer and more perfect, than they find them in the Original.

As the Fable has all theſe Advantages, ſo is the Conduct of the Play very regular. Ariſtotle divides the Parts of Quantity of a Play into four Parts, which he calls the Prologue, the Epiſode, the Exode, and the Chorus. By the Prologue he does not mean what is now a-days ſpoke before the Play, and has ſeldom any relation to the Play, and will therefore ſerve any other Play, as well as that to which it is ſpoken: but by the Prologue here is underſtood all our firſt Act; and it is to explain to the Audience not only what concerns the Subject of the Poem, but what is proper and neceſſary; and makes a true Part of it. Thus Proſpero, to ſatisfy his Daughter of the Cauſe of his raiſing the Storm, very artfully lets the Audience know the material part of his Hiſtory which paſt before that Hour; and that neceſſarily: for it was not only natural for Miranda to enquire into the Cauſe of ſo terrible a Storm, the Effects of which had extremely mov'd her Compaſſion; and the Work that was going to be done by Proſpero ſeems to mark out that, as the only proper time that he cou'd ever have related his Fortunes to her, and inform her of her Condition, and that he had now got all his Enemies into his hands. 'Tis true, this Narration may ſeem a little too calm, and that it had been more Dramatic had it been told in a Paſſion; but if we conſider the Story as Proſpero tells it, it is not without a Pathos. And if this firſt Narration cou'd be brought under this Cenſure, yet the ſecond is far from it, being very artfully thrown into a ſort of Paſſion, or Anger againſt Ariel, and is therefore truly Dramatic; for in the Drama indeed there ſhou'd be very little that is not Action, and Paſſion. It was neceſſary likewiſe, that when the Poet was giving the Audience a Creature of his own formation, he ſhou'd let them know whence he ſprung; his very Origin preparing us for a Character ſo much out of the way, and makes us expect that Language from him, which he utters. But there being ſtill ſome things done which fell not into the knowledge of Proſpero, and yet were neceſſary to be known to the Audience, the Poet in the firſt Scene of the ſecond Act, makes the ſhipwreck'd Princes diſcover it very judiciouſly.

The next to the Prologue is the Epiſode, which was all that us'd formerly to go betwixt the four Chorus's, which with us is the ſecond, third, and fourth Act; that is, it contains all the Subject of the Play, or rather the Intrigues and Plot, till the Unravelling. And the Exode, which was all that came after the laſt ſinging of the Chorus, contain'd the Perepitie, and Diſcovery or the unravelling of the Plot, which anſwered our fifth Act; and is the Unravelling, or Cataſtrophe of the Piece. This diviſion of Ariſtotle is perfectly obſerv'd by Shakeſpear in the Conduct of this Play of the Tempeſt. For, as we have ſeen, the firſt Act diſcovers all that was neceſſary for the Audience to know of the Story, that happen'd before the Commencement of the Action of the Play, and that in an admirable and judicious manner: next, all the Intrigue of the Play, as the ſeveral Adventures and Torments of the King, the uniting the Hearts of Miranda and Ferdinand, and the Attempts of the Mob Characters, make up the ſecond, third, and fourth Acts: the fifth is wholly employ'd in the Diſcovery and Perepitie, or in the Unravelling of the Plot, and reſtoring Tranquillity to all the Dramatic Perſons. The Scene likewiſe is generally unbroken; unbroken ; eſpecially in the firſt, fourth and fifth, they are perfectly entire. The Manners are every way juſt, they are well-mark'd, and convenient and equal ; there is no room here for the Likeneſs, the Story being a Fiction. Thus we find every one perfectly diſtinct from the other. Caliban, as born of a Witch, ſhews his original Malice, ill-Nature, Sordidneſs, and Villany. Antonio is always ambitious and treacherous, and even there promoting and perſuading Sebaſtian to the committing the ſame unnatural Act againſt his Brother, that he had againſt Proſpero, with this Aggravation, of adding Fratricide to Uſurpation.

The Sentiments are every where the juſt Effect of the Manners, and the Diction generally juſt and elegant, as we ſhall ſee in thoſe beautiful Thoughts I ſhall add to my Remarks on this Play. But I can't leave my general Conſideration of this Play, till I have added a word about the moſt queſtionable Part of it, and that is the Magic, or Sorcery.

Thoſe who make this a Fault in our Poet know little of the matter ; for it is ſufficient for him to go upon received Notions, no matter whether philoſophicaly, or abſolutely true, or not. Shakeſpear liv'd in an Age, not ſo remote from a Time in which the Notion of Spirits and Conjurers, and the ſtrange and wonderful Power of Magic, were ſo common, that it was almoſt an Article of Faith among the Many, I mean not the very Mob, but Men of Figure and true Learning. Arioſto is full of this, and inſtead of one enchanted Iſle, gives us many enchanted Caſtles. Nay, Lavater and ſeveral others have wrote ſeriouſly upon this Head ; Mizaldus gives us many Receipts for magical Operations ; and the Roſicrucians, and Cabaliſts profeſs a Converſation with Spirits of the Earth, the Air, Water, and elemental Fire. Doctor Beaumont has even in our Time wrote a Book in Engliſh upon this Head, and has declared to many his frequent Converſation with theſe Hobgoblins ; nor is there to this day ſcarce a venerable Citizen, or Country Squire, but as firmly believes theſe Beings, as they do their own. And tho it is not our buſineſs here to enter into the Examination of this Point philoſophically, common Opinion being ſufficient to juſtify Shakeſpear, yet perhaps the niceſt Philoſopher would be puzzl'd to demonſtrate the Falſhood of this Notion : At leaſt we are ſure, that there are Spirits departed, ſince the Scripture it ſelf aſſures us of it. The ſame wou'd hold againſt Virgil and Homer for their Cyclops, their Harpeys, their Circes, &c. if common Opinion could not clear them. Our Poet therefore is at leaſt on as good a bottom in this, as thoſe great Men of Antiquity, and has manag'd theſe Machines as well as either of them in this Play.

The Reader having ſeen all the Beauties of the Fable, Conduct and Manners of this Play, may perhaps think it would not be from the Purpoſe if I ſhould take ſome notice of the Alteration made of it by Mr. Dryden and Sir William Davenant ; and ſince it ſeems a ſort of juſtice to Shakeſpear, I ſhall venture to ſhow how far they have been from improving our Author.

thor. Mr. Dryden in his Preface, after he has told us that the Play it ſelf had been acted with Succeſs, and that Fletcher and Sir John Suckling had made bold with our Poet in their Sea-Voyage, and the Goblins—adds—Sir William Davenant, as he was a Man of a quick and piercing imagination, ſoon found, that ſomewhat might be added to the Deſign of Shakeſpear, of which neither Fletcher nor Suckling had ever thought, (ſomething I hope to add to his Excellence, or elſe it had better never have been added) and therefore to put the laſt Hand to it, he deſign'd the Counterpart to Shakeſpear's Plot, namely that of a Man who had never ſeen a Woman, that by this means theſe two Characters of Innocence and Love, might the more illuſtrate and commend each other.

He further tells us his Approbation of Sir William's Deſign; but with ſubmiſſion to ſo great a Man as Mr. Dryden muſt be allowed to be in his way, I think he had very little Reaſon for his Approbation. For let us conſider but the Rules of true Judgment, and we ſhall find, that what theſe Gentlemen have done could be only advantageous to our Author, by improving the Fable and Conduct, the Manners, the Sentiments, the Diction, &c. But Mr. Dryden in what is quoted ſeems to place all the Benefit of the Alteration in the Counterpart of his Plot, i. e. A Man that had never ſeen a Woman, that by this means thoſe two Characters of Innocence and Love, might the more illuſtrate and commend each other. That is, by ſpoiling the natural Innocence and Character of Miranda, to foiſt in ſome Scenes betwixt a Company of unequal and inconſiſtent Characters, which are ſometimes mere Naturals indeed, and at other times Proficients in Philoſophy.

But what did theſe Characters, or what do theſe Scenes towards the improving the Plot? It has every where broken the Scenes, and embarraſs'd the Conduct, but ſcarce any where added the leaſt Beauty to make amends, unleſs in Proſpero's ſeparating Ferdinand, and the Father, in his Rage, and his Threats of his Death; thus making the meeting of Father and Son the more diſtreſsful by ſo ſudden a Calamity in their Joy. Every where elſe the Alterations are monſtrous, eſpecially in the Manners and Sentiments; to ſhew which, I ſhall give ſome Inſtances.

Dorinda ſays to her Father on his examining of her about ſeeing the Man——

Dor. No Sir, I am as well as ever I was in all my Life, but that I cannot eat nor drink for Thought of him, &c.

She ſaw him but the laſt Scene of the ſecond Act, and this is the firſt Scene of the third Act; ſo what time ſhe had to try whether ſhe cou'd eat or not I cannot tell, unleſs it was her Afternoon's Nuncion (as the Children call it) for it was near four, as Ariel aſſured us. But all that Scene indeed between Proſpero and Dorinda (a Creature of our Corrector's making, king, not of Shakeſpear's, but more out of Nature, and more inconſiſtent than Caliban) has nothing at all Dramatic in it, nor any thing conducive to the Fable, Conduct or Plot. It diſcovers nothing of the leaſt uſe; and only gives a very imperfect Sketch of the inſenſible Approaches of Love in Innocence and Ignorance, and may perhaps be worthy the Contemplation of the young Miſſes of the Nurſery.

Enter eight fat Spirits with Cornucopias in their Hands. Theſe fat Spirits I confeſs are very ſurprizing and merry, tho never thought of by Shakeſpear.

The Diſcourſe in Echo betwixt Ferdinand and Ariel, if tolerable in Proſe, is beyond meaſure ridiculous and trifling in ſinging: Ferdinand ſeems too full of Deſpair and Concern to have that petty Whim of Curioſity to come into his head; and therefore I preſume no body will think that any Improvement of Shakeſpear's Play, unleſs it be in adding the Mode, which was afterwards in the Rehearſal.

And then to ſerious Buſineſs we'll advance,
But firſt let's have a Dance.

But our Improvers have never been eminent for their Imitations of Nature in the Drama; Mr. Dryden had wandred too far in Romance, to reliſh Nature, or know how to copy her. Tho in his latter Plays Age had worn ſomething of that away, and he has given us ſome Scenes worthy his Greatneſs in other Parts of Poetry, in which lay his Excellence. But to go on ——

Soon after this Miranda ſeeing Ferdinand by an odd Caprice (which we never cou'd expect from her Character as drawn in Shakeſpear) ſhe fancies him a Spirit. Tho ſhe had before ſeen Hippolito, and had been told, that he was a Man, and aſſur'd by her Father, that ſhe ſhou'd ſoon ſee another Man of riper Growth, than him ſhe had ſeen. But this artleſs trifling Ignorance of Miranda ſpoils that Character Shakeſpear has given her, where ſhe is innocent indeed, but not a Fool: whereas this might be call'd, as alter'd, The Comedy of Fools.

But now for Hippolito, bred to Books and Philoſophy, under ſo wiſe a Maſter as Proſpero.

Hippolito and Proſpero.

Hip. Methinks I wiſh, and wiſh for what I know not;
But ſtill I wiſh: —— yet if I had that Woman,
She, I believe, cou'd tell me what I wiſh for.

This is indeed indulging Fancy with a vengeance, and throwing all Art, Nature, and Judgment aſide as uſeleſs. Certainly the firſt Wiſhes of Innocence in Love muſt be the Company of the Object belov'd; and that he

he might eaſily find and tell. But why ſhou'd he fancy (if it were not abſurd to ask a Reaſon for any thing in ſuch a Character) that the Woman cou'd tell him what he wiſh'd for, when he did not know himſelf?

Proſp. What wou'd you do to make that Woman yours?
Hip. I'd quit the reſt of the World, that I might be alone with her; ſhe never ſhou'd be from me, &c.

This is Nature indeed, and this is the real Effect of a real Paſſion: this is what Tibullus, that tender Lover, ſaid about 1700 years ago——

Sic ego ſecretis poſſum benè vivere ſilvis,
Qua nulla humano ſit via trita pede.
Tu mihi Curarum Requies, in Nocte vel atra
Lumen, & in ſolis Tu mihi turba Locis, &c.

But then our young Lover, if he wou'd have maintain'd his Character of Innocence and Love, ſhou'd have kept to that Point, and not immediately after, contrary to the Nature of Love and Innocence, run mad for all the Women in the World, as if not bred in a Cave, but a Brothel. This has neither Senſe nor Reaſon in it, but is perfectly monſtrous. In the beginning of this Scene betwixt him and Ferdinand he diſcovers all the Symptoms of a real Paſſion, which makes his after Extravagance impoſſible in Nature, even for a Debochee, at leaſt till Enjoyment was paſt.

Ferdinand's fighting him is a monſtrous Incident, and an intolerable Breach of his Character, and contrary to the Manners; he not being only a tender Stripling, but as ignorant of a Sword as a very Woman: as is plain in the Scene before the Duel; for Hippolito has deſir'd his Friendſhip, and told him, that next a Woman he found he cou'd love him.

This with his Ignorance and Innocence ought to have deterr'd a Man of any Honour, eſpecially a Prince of no ill Character, from committing ſo barbarous and inhuman a Murder for a childiſh Impertinence.

But here we muſt have a nice touch at Jealouſy. Miranda tells him,

That he is a Stranger,
Wholly unacquainted with the World, &c.

But all this will not do, Ferdinand muſt be jealous without any reaſon, to make him the more reſolute in ſo ſcandalous an Attempt, as the killing Hippolito; at leaſt of wounding him ſo, that nothing but Moly, and the Influence of the Moon, forc'd down by his good Angel, cou'd recover him to Life again. 'Tis true, when Ferdinand proves ſuch a Coxcomb to be jealous on what Miranda ſays of Hippolito, tho ſhe had aſſur'd him of her Love, and, as far as appear'd to him, ventur'd her Father's diſpleaſure

pleaſure by coming to him, we may eaſily ſuſpect he wou'd be guilty of any Folly, nay the Villany of fighting with Hippolito; nay it was a Mercy that he did not draw on Miranda too, for it had been full as heroic.

Dorinda is more ſenſible of Nature and Love than Hippolito; ſhe can tell that he can truly love but one at a time, and naturally reſents his profeſſing, that he will have all the Women. But he is more learn'd in the World in this fourth Act, than in the former: I ſuppoſe he had receiv'd ſome Intelligence of the Incontinence of the Men of this World from one of the Devils of Sycorax, for he ſays——

I've heard Men have abundance of them there——

Of whom could he hear this? of Proſpero? impoſſible; his Buſineſs had all along been to fright him from the Converſation of Women, making them Enemies and noxious to Men, and his Safety; which is directly contrary to the letting him know, that other Men had convers'd with ſo many without hurt. In this Place indeed a Poeta loquitur had not been amiſs. He had convers'd with no body but Ferdinand once, who, tho he told him that there were more Women in the World, yet was ſo far from letting him know that one had many, that he told him, that one Man was to have but one Woman.

But as knowing as Hippolito is in ſome things, and in ſome lucid Intervals, he knows not a word of Death; tho we muſt think he had read ſtrange Books, and heard odd Inſtructions, that cou'd leave him ſo entirely ignorant of that point: but were this juſt, yet that very Ignorance makes Ferdinand ſtill the more inexcuſable; nay, Ferdinand himſelf at laſt, in the fourth Act, ſeems ſenſible of his Ignorance, for he ſays,

He's ſo ignorant, that I pity him,
And fain wou'd avoid Force——

And indeed a Man wou'd think, that he might very eaſily avoid Force if he wou'd, at leaſt till Hippolito had ſeiz'd his Miſtreſs, which he had ſufficient reaſon to imagine that Proſpero wou'd never permit. But he that notwithſtanding all that had paſt between them, cou'd not before this find out his Ignorance, may do any thing.

But Hippolito in one Line ſays, he does not know what Right is, and yet in the next tells us of Baſeneſs, and Honour. His Lectures were very peculiar, that cou'd give him a notion of one and not of the other.

The Terms of the Combat or Duel are as ridiculous as all the reſt —that is— to fight till Blood is drawn from one of the two, or his Sword taken from him. Ferdinand was reſolv'd to be on the ſure ſide of the hedge with him; but he is ſo dull of Apprehenſion, that he may well be a Raſcal; for as Monſieur Rochfoucault ſays, A Fool has not Matter enough to make an honeſt Man of. Tho Hippolito had told him, that they had no Swords growing in their World, yet Ferdinand did not find it out till he had wounded him, that he was unskilful in his Weapon.

I'm loth to kill you, Sir, you are unskilful.

Riſum teneatis? was ever ſuch Stuff wrote ſince the Time of Gammar Gurton's Needle? But it would be endleſs to obſerve all the Blunders of theſe added Scenes, they are all of apiece, and ſcarce guilty of a Thought, which we could juſtly attribute to Shakeſpear. I have given Inſtances enough I hope to ſhow what I propos'd, that the Alteration has been no Benefit to the Original.

I ſhall only take notice of ſome fine things in this Play both as to Topicks and Deſcriptions, and moral Reflections, and then paſs to the next.

Ariel's Deſcription of his managing the Storm is worth remarking; and Ferdinand's Speech, when Proſpero is leading him away at the end of the firſt Act, is pathetic, and juſtly expreſſes the Nature of a true Lover.

My Father's Loſs, the Weakneſs that I feel,
The Wreck of all my Friends, nor this Man's Threats,
To whom I am ſubdu'd; are but light to me,
Might I but thro my Priſon once a Day
Behold this Maid. All Corners elſe o' th' Earth
Let Liberty make uſe of; Space enough
Have I in ſuch a Priſon.

I muſt not omit the Deſcription, that Franciſco makes in the ſecond Act, of Ferdinand's ſwimming aſhore in the Storm.

I ſaw him beat the Surges under him,
And ride upon their Backs; he trod the Water,
Whoſe Enmity he flung aſide; and breaſted
The Surge moſt ſwoln, that met him. His bold Head
'Bove the contentious Waves he kept; and oared
Himſelf with his good Arms in luſty Strokes
To th'Shoar; that over his wave-worn Back bow'd,
As ſtooping to relieve him.

The Reader may compare this with Otway's Deſcription of Jaffier's Eſcape. His Reflections and moralizing on the frail and tranſitory State of Nature are wonderfully fine.

Proſp.

Prosp. ——These our Actors
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into Air, into thin Air;
And like the baseless Fabrick of their Vision,
The cloud-capt Towers, the gorgeous Palaces,
The solemn Temples, the great Globe it self,
Yea all which it inherit, shall dissolve,
And, like this insubstantial Pageant faded,
Leave not a Track behind. We are such Stuff
As Dreams are made on; and our little Life
Is rounded with a Sleep.

The Argument of The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

THO this Play be plac'd after the Tempest, 'tis evident from the Writing, and the Faults, and even Absurdities, that it was writ long before it, for I can by no means think that Shakespear wrote worse and worse; for if his Fire may be suppos'd to abate in his Age, yet certainly his Judgment increas'd: but most of the Faults of this Play are Faults of Judgment, more than Fancy.

Valentine and Protheus are two intimate, bosom, nay, sworn Friends, Natives of Verona, and give the Name to the Play. Valentine is for travelling (tho indeed the Journey is not long) and Protheus is in love with a beautiful Lady nam'd Julia, of the same Town. Valentine being arrived at Milan, succeeds in his Amour with Silvia the Duke's Daughter; whose Lover Sir Thurio is favour'd by the Father as a Man of large Demesns, but he is silly, insolent, and cowardly. Valentine is not long gone from home, but Antonio, Sir Protheus's Father, will send him to travel too, especially to Milan, where his Friend had acquir'd so good a Reputation. He takes leave of his Mistress privately, and gives her his Oaths and Vows that he will love only her till Death. But coming to Milan, he falls in love with Silvia his Friend's Mistress; and to compass his own Ends, discovers the Amour betwixt her and Valentine to the Duke, tho trusted as a Friend by the Lovers. This causes the Banishment of Valentine, and the Misery of the Lady who lov'd him extremely. Protheus on the Credit of his having a Mistress in his own City, with whom he was mightily in love, gets the Management of Sir Thurio's Passion; and under that Pretence, makes it his Endeavours to promote his own, which Julia being come to Milan in Man's Clothes discovers, and is taken by him for a Page. Silvia being weary of Sir Thurio's Suit, and eager to be with her Lover Valentine, engages Sir Eglamour to aſſiſt her in making her eſcape to Mantua, where ſhe heard that he was, tho indeed he was taken by the Out-laws about three Leagues out of Milan, and made their Captain. Theſe ſame Out-laws ſeize Silvia, who is reſcu'd from the Force of one of them by Sir Protheus, got thither in purſuit of her; who preſſing his Amour here in vain, attempts to raviſh her, but is prevented by Valentine, who had o'er-heard all his Treachery: but on Protheus's Repentance all Animoſities are forgot, and Sir Protheus returns to his old Miſtreſs Julia here diſcover'd, and Silvia is by the Duke given to Valentine, Sir Thurio not daring to claim her; nay, out of fear of Valentine he gives her up in diſdain.

Beſides the Defect of the Plot, which is too viſible to criticize upon, the Manners are no where agreeable, or convenient. Silvia and the reſt not behaving themſelves like Princes, Noblemen, or the Sons and Daughters of ſuch. The Place where the Scene is, by the original Error of the Preſs, not yet corrected: for to be ſure the Author cou'd not make the Blunder ſometimes the Emperor's Court, ſometimes Milan, and ſometimes Padua, as is plain from running the Eye over it.

But how defective ſoever this Interlude may be in the Plot, Conduct, Manners and Sentiments, we yet ſhall ſee, that it is not deſtitute of Lines, that diſcover the Author to be Shakeſpear.

Love, or againſt Love, when ſlighted.

To be in love where Scorn is bought with Groans,
Coy Looks, with Heart-ſore Sighs: One fading Moment's Mirth,
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious Nights.
If haply won, perhaps a hapleſs Gain;
If loſt, why then a grievous Labour won!
However, but a Folly bought with Wit,
Or elſe a Wit by Folly vanquiſhed.

On Love.

Oh! how this Spring of Love reſembleth
Th' uncertain Glory of an April Day;
Which now ſhows all the Beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a Cloud takes all away.

I muſt here let the Reader know, that becauſe in going thro Shakeſpear, the ſame Topics will occur in ſeveral Places, I ſhall put my References to the Latin Poets on thoſe Topics to the alphabetical Table of them, which will be at the end of this Volume.

A comical Deſcription of Men in Love.

Speed —Firſt, you have learned (like Sir Protheus) to wreath your Arms like a Malecontent: to reliſh a Love-Song like a Robin-red-breaſt: to walk alone like one that had the Peſtilence: to ſigh like a School-boy that had loſt his A B C: to weep like a young Wench that had loſt her Grandame: to faſt like one that takes Diet: to watch like one that fears robbing: to ſpeak puling like a Beggar at Hallow-Maſs. You were wont when you laugh'd, to crow like a Cock; when you walk'd, to walk like one of the Lions: when you faſted, 'twas preſently after dinner: when you look'd ſadly, it was for want of Money. And now you are ſo metamorphoſed with a Miſtreſs, that when I look on you I can hardly think you my Maſter.

You muſt obſerve, that this is the Speech of a pert Page to his Love-ſick Maſter, and that will atone for ſome of the Smiles, while the Humour is pleaſant.

On Baniſhment for Love.

Val. And why not Death, rather than living Torment?
To die is to be baniſhed from my ſelf!
And Silvia is my ſelf. Baniſhed from her
Is ſelf, from ſelf! a deadly Baniſhment!
What Light is Light, if Silvia be not ſeen?
What Joy is Joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unleſs it be to think that ſhe is by,
And feed upon the Shadow of Perfection?
Except I be by Silvia in the Night,
There is no Muſick in the Nightingale.
Unleſs I look on Silvia in the Day,
There is no Day for me to look upon.
She is my Eſſence, and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair Influence
Foſter'd, illumin'd, cheriſh'd, kept alive.

This is extremely pathetic, as indeed all the following Scene is betwixt him and his falſe Friend Sir Protheus.

On Hope.

Hope is a Lover's Staff—walk hence with that,
And manage it againſt deſpairing Thoughts.

Sir

Sir Protheus's Advice to Sir Thurio in the managing his Addreſſes to Silvia, is pretty and ſprightly. I can't omit the Words of Julia expreſſing her Condition when ſlighted by her Lover.

——But ſince ſhe did neglect her Looking-Glaſs,
And threw her Sun-expelling Mask away,
The Air has ſtarv'd the Roſes in her Cheeks,
And pinch'd the Lilly-Tincture of her Face, &c.

The fifth Act of this Play is much the beſt, but Valentine is too eaſily reconciled to a Man, whoſe Treachery and Villany deſerv'd the Stab, eſpecially when it is diſcovered at the very Time that he goes to raviſh his Friend's betrothed.

The Merry Wives of Windſor.

I Cannot paſs this Play without a Word or two of Comedy in general, tho I ſhall be far from laying down all the Rules of that Poem, which tho not ſo excellent as Tragedy, yet is valuable enough to merit our Eſteem above all others, except the Tragic. This Poem, tho the laſt and leaſt encourag'd in the polite Times of Athens, yet was firſt and moſt advanc'd in Rome, and in England; for Politeneſs did not prevail very early in either of thoſe warlike Nations. As we have none of the Greek Comedies extant, but thoſe of Ariſtophanes, who was Maſter of the old Comedy, except what we have in Terence, who is ſaid to have tranſlated two of Menander's into one of his; ſo we cannot make a fair Judgment who excell'd in this Poem, the Greek, the Latin, or the Engliſh; yet having thoſe of Plautus and Terence, we may juſtly, with Mr. Dryden in his Eſſay, give the Victory to our own Nation over the Romans. We can indeed diſcover nothing of the Remains of Antiquity in this kind, comparable to Ben. Johnſon, and to this Play of Shakeſpear's. This and our Advantage in Comedy over all the Moderns, is juſtly proved by Mr. Dryden in his Eſſay on Dramatic Poeſy; but I confeſs I am ſurpriz'd at the Weakneſs of his Arguments in preferring our Tragedies and Tragi-comedies to thoſe of the Greeks; in which Parallel, he has betray'd ſo great Ignorance both of the Greek Plays, and of the very Deſign and Art of Tragedy, that I wonder he corrected not thoſe groſs Miſtakes before he dy'd; but ſuffer'd them to paſs to Poſterity with ſuch Defects, of which he himſelf was ſo ſenſible, as to own that when he wrote them, he knew little of the Art.

Among

Among these is his Assertion in the Beginning of the Discourse, p. 3. that Aristotle had given us no Definition of a Play, his Words are these ——He had no sooner said thus, but all desir'd the Favour of him to give the Definition of a Play; and they were the more importunate with him, because neither Aristotle, nor Horace, nor any other, who writ on that Subject, had ever done it——A Play (goes on Mr. Dryden) ought to be a just and lively Image of human Nature, representing its Passions, and Humours, and the Change of Fortune, to which it is subject, for the Delight and Instruction of Human-kind.

First Aristotle has defin'd Tragedy and Comedy too, but did not, like Mr. Dryden, blend things so contrary in their Nature in one Definition, as Tragedy and Comedy. He might indeed well say, that it was a Description rather than a Definition; for what is applicable to all sorts of Dramatic Poetry, to the Epopee, and Satire, is no Definition at all. That of Aristotle is more close, and to the purpose; for what he has said will not agree in all its Parts with any thing but Tragedy; nor will his Definition of Comedy agree with the former. I think it so material to maintain the Distinction which Nature has made between these two Poems, that I shall set down the Definitions of both from Aristotle: First of Tragedy. Tragedy is an Imitation of an Action that is grave, and entire, and hath a just Length, of which the Style is agreeably relishing, but differently in all its Parts, and which, without the Assistance of Narration by the means of Terror and Compassion, perfectly refines in us all sorts of Passions, or whatever else is like them.

I have already said enough of this Definition, and shall only observe here, that the Action which Tragedy imitates must be grave; which shews the Defect of Mr. Dryden's Description, for the imitation of any Part of human Life, will not come up to that. But all that is not Great, Solemn, and Grave, is left to the Imitation of Comedy, which he thus defines—— Comedy is an Imitation of the worst Men, I mean not in all sorts of Vices, but only in Ridicule. For Ridicule is properly a Defect, and Deformity without Pain, and which never contributes to the destruction of the Subject in which it is——This is Aristotle's Definition and Explanation of it. He has told the Subject of the Comic Imitation, which is only what is ridiculous; all other sorts of Wickedness, and Vice, can have no place here, because they raise Indignation, or Pity, which are Passions that ought by no means to reign in Comedy. Princes, Kings, and great Men ought therefore naturally to be excluded the Sock; because Ridicule ought always to be the Subject of this Poem, and those solemn Characters ought never to be made ridiculous.

In all these Particulars, Shakespear has come up to the Rules, and Definition of Aristotle; for he has in his Characters chosen the Defects and Deformities, which are without Pain, and which never contribute to the Destruction of the Subject, in which it is.

'Tis

'Tis pity, that what Ariſtotle wrote of Comedy is loſt, except this very Definition; but the Loſs is the leſs, becauſe we may very well draw ſufficient Rules to walk by in Comedy from thoſe which remain of Tragedy, obſerving this Difference, that as nothing ridiculous can come into Tragedy, ſo nothing grave or ſerious can come into Comedy juſtly, except it be ſo artfully join'd to the Ridiculous, that it ſeems natural and no Patch, as the Character of Mr. Fenton in the Play under our Conſideration; his Character is the only ſerious one in the Play.

But as Tragedy has Parts of Quality, and Parts of Quantity, ſo has Comedy. The Parts of Quality, as in the other, are the Fable, the Manners, the Sentiments, and the Diction, without which no Comedy can be truly entitled to that Name. The Comic Poet muſt firſt invent his Plot, or Fable; and when he has fix'd that, he muſt take care that the Manners of the divers Perſons be plainly expreſs'd in his Characters; that is, that they be perfectly diſtinguiſh'd, as every one of theſe of the Merry Wives of Windſor are. The Sentiments are added, becauſe without them there is no knowing the Thoughts, Deſigns, and Inclinations of the Dramatic Perſons; and theſe being not to be expreſs'd but by Diſcourſe, the Diction is added. The Fable of Comedy, that is, the Comic Fiction or Imitation, muſt be entirely free from the Marvelous, and the Prodigious, which are frequent in Tragedy and the Epopee; for it has no manner of regard to Great, Illuſtrious, Grave, Mournful, Terrible, or in one word, Tragical Things, but only domeſtic and civil Incidents, and Perſons. There is a natural Difference in Perſons and Quality, or Manners; for that which is praiſe-worthy in one degree is not ſo in another; nay, it may be a Diſgrace, for example in ſome Arts: for one of the Vulgar to play well on the Fiddle, or Heautbois, merits Praiſe, but the ſame Art in a King, is look'd on as triſling, if not deſpicable. A Woman ought to be a good Sower, Knitter or the like; at leaſt theſe Qualities are commendable in a Woman, but ridiculous in a Man. Thus 'tis a Praiſe in a Servant, that he's no Thief, but it is no Praiſe to a Nobleman or a Man of any Figure and Quality. This is ſufficient to ſhow that different Manners are agreeable to different Degrees. To know perfectly therefore what Manners we ought to give to our ſeveral Dramatic Perſons, we ought to ſtudy theſe following Precepts of Horace.

Ætatis cujuſq; notandi ſunt tibi Mores,
Mobilibuſq; decor naturis dandus, & Annis.
Reddere qui voces jam ſcit Puer, & pede certo
Signat humum, geſtit paribus colludere, & Iram
Colligit, ac ponit temerè; & mutatur in horas.
Imberbis Juvenis, tandum cuſtode remoto,
Gaudet Equis, Canibuſq; & aprici Gramine campi:
Cereus in vitium flecti, Monitoribus aſper,

Utilium

Utilium tardus Proviſor ; prodigus Æris ;
Sublimis, cupiduſq; & amata relinquere Pernix.
Converſis ſtudiis Ætas, animuſque virilis
Quærit Opes, & Amicitias ; inſervit honori.
Commiſiſſe cavet, quod mox mutare laboret.
Multa Senem circumveniunt incommoda, vel quod
Quærit, & inventis miſer abſtinet, ac timet uti ;
Vel quod res omnes timidè, gelidéq; miniſtrat ;
Dilator, ſpe longus, iners, aviduſq; futuri,
Difficilis, querulus, Laudator temporis acti
Se puero ; Cenſor, Caſtigatorq; Minorum.

And to the juſt obſerving the Characters, he juſt before gives this Advice.

Intererit multum Davus ne loquatur, an heros,
Maturuſne Senex, an adhuc florente Juventâ,
Fervidus ; An Matrona potens, an ſedula Nutrix,
Mercatorne vagus, Cultorne virentis Agelli,
Colchus, an Aſſyrius, Thebis nutritus, an Argis,
Aut Famam ſequere, aut ſibi convenientia finge.

And again,

Qui didicit Patriæ quid debeat, & quid Amicis,
Quo ſit amore Parens, quo Frater amandus, & Hoſpes, &c.

That is, he who knows the Duties of every Order and Degree of Men, both in regard of themſelves and others, is fit to meddle with the Drama.

The Excellence of the Sentiments is juſtly to expreſs the Manners, and of the Diction to give us the Sentiments in a Language agreeable to the Subject ; for if it be otherwiſe it is abominable. But the Style of Comedy ought not to be ſo ſublime as Tragedy, nor ſo low as Farce ; but ſtill diverſify'd according to the Character and Humour of the Perſon that ſpeaks.

I ſhould ſay ſomething here of Humour, but that Mr. Congreve has already handled that Point ſo nicely, that I refer the Reader to his Letter to Mr. Dennis on that Subject ; and I ſhall only add Mr. Dryden's Definition of it in his Eſſay on dramatic Poeſy, which is this.

Humour is the ridiculous Extravagance of Converſation, wherein one Man differs from others. Whether this be expreſſive enough, I leave to the Reader. But in my mind, Humour is what the Antients and Ariſtotle meant by the Ridiculous, and according to Ariſtotle it conſiſts in thoſe Vices and Follies of Mind, as well as Converſation, which carry with them

them a ridiculous Appearance. The Paſſions and Vices of Mankind have two different Faces, one ſerious and the other ridiculous; the one ſupplies Tragedy, the other Comedy. The manner how this is done may perhaps be better taught by Example than Precept: I wou'd therefore adviſe a Comic Writer to ſtudy Randolph's Muſes Looking-Glaſs thorowly; for there, I am apt to believe, he will find the Source of all Humours that are in Nature; from which Originals he may be able to make ſuch agreeable Compounds as may divert the People juſtly, to an equal Profit of his Purſe, and Reputation. At leaſt ſo much I am very ſure of, that no Man can ſhow me any Humour on the Stage that is worth taking notice of, but I will ſhow it in the Muſes Looking-Glaſs; which proves that he has gone to the Source of Things for the Draughts he has made, ſince thoſe who never read him, have fallen into the Humours he has drawn. He was one of the Sons of the famous Ben. Johnſon, and of Cambrige.

As for the Parts of Comedy which relate to the Quantity, they are the ſame with thoſe of Tragedy. That is the Protaſis or Prologue, which gives an Inſight into the Characters and Deſign or State of the Action of the Play, and this is generally the firſt Act; the Epiſode is all that is contain'd in the ſecond, third or fourth Acts, that is the Intrigue, and Struggles, and Obſtacles of the Plot: and the Exode or Cataſtrophe is the Unravelling or Diſcovery, where all things ſettle in Peace and Tranquillity, with Probability, and to the Satisfaction of the Audience.

Having thus premis'd a general View of Comedy, I ſhall come more cloſe to this under our preſent Conſideration, and firſt to the Argument——

The Argument of The Merry Wives of Windſor.

There are two Walks in this Play, but much better join'd, connected and incorporated, than in any Play that I remember, either in Latin, or Engliſh. The chief Plot or Walk is that of expoſing the Character of Sir John Falſtaff for his ridiculous Amours, or attempt on two Women at once, when by Years and other Defects he cou'd be agreeable to neither, as Mrs. Page and the reſt tell him on the Diſcovery in the fifth Act —— Why Sir John do you think, tho we cou'd have thruſt Virtue out of our Hearts by Head and Shoulders, and have given our ſelves without Scruple to Hell, that ever the Devil cou'd have made you our Delight? Ford. What a Hodge-Pudding? Mrs. Page, A puft Man? Page. Old and cold; wither'd and of intolerable Entrails? Ford. And one that is as ſlanderous as Satan? Page. As poor as Job? Ford. And as wicked as his Wife?

Sir John ſends two Letters of the ſame Contents to both the Women, that he lov'd them; but they being intimate Friends, and both paſt their Prime, communicate their Letters to each other, conſult on his Puniſhment; and employ to that end Mrs. Quickly, who in Mrs. Ford's Name makes the Appointment of Rendevouz. Ford the Husband, being of a jealous

jealous Temper, has his Suſpicion ſo heighten'd by the Information of two of Sir John's Sharpers, who had refus'd to carry the Letters, and were for that refuſal caſhier'd, that he reſolves to go to Sir John, and under the Name of Mr. Broom, try what Diſcovery he cou'd make of the truth of the Information. He finds the falſe unwieldy Knight juſt full of his Succeſs, and gives him Wine and Money to purſue Mrs. Ford, ſo as to make her Frailties known to him, that ſo he might beat her out of her Retrenchments of pretended Modeſty, and Virtue to his Wiſhes. Falſtaff, blinded with this Pretence, and the Money, tells him of the Appointment, and aſſures him of Succeſs in his Amours with Ford's Wife. Ford being gone, the Knight moves to the Damſel; who having by Concert Mrs. Page with her, makes her retire into another Room till her proper Cue of appearing. Mrs. Ford having already ordered her Servants to get the Buck-basket ready, and on notice, to carry and empty it into a Ditch in Datchet Mead, admits the Knight; who having paſt his firſt Complement, and made his aukward Profeſſions, News is brought, that Mrs. Page is coming in, which makes the Knight retire. Mrs. Page tells her, that her Husband and half the Town, were coming to ſearch for ſome Gallant of her's in the Houſe. The Knight is terribly alarm'd, and, as Mrs. Page had propos'd, gets into the Buck-basket; and as he is carrying away, the Husband comes in, but after a little ſtop ſuffers it to be carry'd away. Thus Sir John is thrown into the Ditch after he had been ſtew'd up in dirty Linnen all the way; and the Husband expoſes his ridiculous Jealouſy to no purpoſe, being not able to find any body in the Houſe. The Knight is appeas'd by Mrs. Quickly, and agrees on another Meeting the next Morning by eight or nine; is again trapan'd by the Husband, to whom, as Mr. Broom, he had told all his paſt Adventure, and his new Aſſignation. So being diſguis'd on the Husband's approach, like the old Witch of Brentford, he is ſufficiently beaten by the Husband, and yet gets off, leaving Ford as much confounded, and expos'd to the Company for his cauſeleſs Jealouſy as before, being yet not able to find any body with his Wife. Upon this Mrs. Page and Mrs. Ford agree to let their Husbands into the Secret, and by their Conſent to proceed to a third Puniſhment. This Diſcovery cures Ford of his Jealouſy, and 'tis by all agreed that the Knight ſhou'd, as he ought, be expos'd. He is prevail'd on by Mrs. Quickly at laſt to meet at Mid-night in Windſor Park, dreſs'd up as the Vulgar ſuppos'd Herne the Hunter to appear, &c. Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page meet him firſt; and juſt as he is rejoicing on his good Luck, and dividing himſelf and Favours betwixt them, Sir Hugh with his Fairies ſtart out of the Saw-pit, where they were hid for that purpoſe, and pinch and burn him with their Lights; from whom endeavouring to run away, they all come in, and the Diſcovery is made, and the Knight expos'd to publick Shame as he ought to be. Here the under-Plot or ſecond Walk is join'd in the Concluſion; for Mrs. Ann Page, Mr. Page's handſom Daughter, is in love with Mr. Fenton, a well-bred

Gentleman, and of Quality ſuperior to Page, tho he had been a little wild, and a Companion of the Prince, by which he had ſomething run his Eſtate aground, and for that reaſon rejected by Page and his Wife. The Father is for Slender, a very ſilly Country-Gentleman, of three hundred pound a year; the Mother was for Dr. Caius, an impertinent old French Phyſician, becauſe he was rich, and had Friends at Court. So that the Wife taking this opportunity of the nocturnal Mask to abuſe Sir John Falſtaff, orders the Doctor to take her Daughter who ſhou'd be dreſs'd in white, and ſo go off with her, and marry her immediately before the Father cou'd hinder it. The Father had order'd Slender to take his Daughter dreſs'd in Green, and lead her away to Eton, and there marry her without her Mother's knowledge; but the young Lady loving Fenton, deceives both ather and Mother, to obey both whom ſhe had promis'd, goes and is marry'd to her Beloved: which Diſcovery coming on that of Sir John's, concludes the Play.

All the other Perſons of the Drama are plainly join'd to and depending on thoſe two Walks, and their incorporating them into the Plot ſeems very well contriv'd. The Quarrel betwixt Sir John and Juſtice Shallow occaſions Sir Hugh's Propoſal of a Mediation, and the Match betwixt Mr. Slender and Mrs. Ann Page. This brings Mr. Page and Sir John out of Mr. Page's Houſe, where the Motion is made, and approv'd, and all invited in to dinner, where all the principal Characters of both Walks are brought acquainted with each other. The comical Duel is likewiſe to effect the Plot; for Sir Hugh ſends to the Doctor's Houſe-keeper to aſſiſt his Friend Slender in his Amour, ſhe being intimately acquainted with Mother and Daughter. This Meſſenger is intercepted by the Doctor, on which he ſends the Prieſt a Challenge; which produces the comical Scene of both their Paſſions, and Preparations for Fighting. In ſhort, the leaſt Incident of the Play, except Mrs. Page's and her Son's Confabulation with Sir Hugh his Maſter, cannot well be left out, without leaving a Gap in the Plot, and Connection of the Play.

I confeſs, that the Unities of Time, Place, and Action, are not exactly obſerv'd according to the Rule and Practice of the Antients; yet as they are now manag'd among us, they may well paſs. The Time is not above two Days and a half at moſt; the Place Windſor, and the adjacent Fields and Places. The Action is viſibly double, but ſo it is in all the Comedies of Terence.

The firſt Act ſhows all the principal Characters, except the two Fords; prepares all the Buſineſs of the Play, and enters a little into the Action, in the two Letters ſent by Sir John, and the Match propos'd by Sir Hugh, and the Doctor's Challenge to the Welſh Levite. So that 'tis an exact Protaſis or Prologue. The Epiſode begins with the ſecond Act, and carries all on to the fifth; where the Exode is in the Diſcovery and Puniſhment of the old Letcher, and the diſappointment of a forc'd Match in Fenton's marrying rying Mrs. Ann Page. Mrs. Ford's Resentment of Sir John's Letter, puts her and Mrs. Page on the Revenge of the Affront, and that Revenge furnishes the Intrigue, or Episodical Turns of the Play.

The Information of Pistol and Nim prepares, and rouses Ford's Jealousy, admirably and with a great deal of Art and Nature. Nor can any thing be more ridiculous, and entertaining, than the Scenes betwixt Ford under the name of Broom, and Sir John.

Upon the whole I think it is pretty plain, that nothing can be more agreeable to Aristotle's definition of Comedy; for he says 'tis an Imitation of the worst Sort, and that in Ridicule; it having thus all the Parts both of Quality, and Quantity.

But to make the Parts of Quality more plain, it wou'd be necessary to speak of the Humours; yet that wou'd be too tedious, as well as unnecessary, being so many and yet so various, and so plainly distinguish'd from each other, that there is no need to point out Particulars. I shall only give you what Mr. Dryden says of the Character of Falstaff in his Essay on Dramatic Poetry.—Falstaff is the best of Comic Characters——there are (says he) many Men resembling him——old, fat, merry, cowardly, drunken, amorous, vain, and lying: and the Duke of Buckingham confirms it in this Verse,

But Falstaff seems inimitable yet.

Ford's is an excellent Character of a politic, cautious, jealous Coxcomb; and all his Endeavours at the cautious and cunning Management of the Discovery of his Doubts and Fears, involve him the more, and make him the more ridiculous; for the Conferences he has with Sir John confirm him in his Suspicions, and his Disappointments expose his Folly.

The Fairys in the fifth Act make a handsome Complement to the Queen, in her Palace of Windsor, who had oblig'd him to write a Play of Sir John Falstaff in love, and which I am very well assured he perform'd in a Fortnight; a prodigious Thing, when all is so well contriv'd, and carry'd on without the least Confusion.

The Argument of Measure for Measure.

Vincentio Duke of Vienna, pretending to go a private Journey, leaves a severe Lord of his Court call'd Angelo his Deputy, to govern in his Absence, that he might not have the Odium of reviving some Sanguinary Laws, which had for some time lain dormant, and for other Reasons. Æscalus is left with him as a Counsellor, and next under Angelo in Authority.

rity. The Duke being gone, Angelo begins to revive thoſe Laws, and Claudio, a young Gentleman, is taken up to make the firſt Example of one of them; which made it Death for any Man to lie with a Woman out of Marriage. Claudio got Juliet with Child, whom he lov'd and deſign'd to marry. Angelo being inexorable, Iſabella Claudio's Siſter, juſt going to be profeſs'd a Nun, goes to beg her Brother's Life; and wins the Heart of Angelo ſo far, that he tempts her to redeem her Brother's Life by yielding to his Embraces, vowing that no other Terms ſhou'd ſave him; which ſhe telling her Brother, the Duke (who goes not to travel as he pretended, but is diſguis'd in a Fryar's Habit, and obſerves all things unknown) overhears it, and perſuades her to pretend to yield to him, and appoint ſuch a time in the Night, that Mariana his contracted Wife, whom he had rejected on the loſs of her Fortune, might go in her Place. This being done, Angelo ſends orders to have Claudio's Head brought to him by four in the Morning. The Duke manages it ſo with the Provoſt, that the Head of one dying that Night in the Priſon, and who was not unlike Claudio, ſhou'd be carry'd to him; and then ordering Mariana, and Iſabella to complain to the Duke on his Return, which wou'd be that Morning, he ſends the Deputies word of his Return, and orders them to meet him at the City Gates, there to give up his Authority. The Ladies make their Complaints, and after ſome Difficulties the Duke diſcovers his Knowledge of the whole Matter, commands Angelo to marry Mariana immediately, and then to be beheaded as Claudio was; but upon the Interceſſion of the new Wife and Iſabella, and the diſcovery that Claudio was preſerv'd alive, Angelo is pardon'd, and has no other Puniſhment than a Wife, and the publick Diſgrace.

There are ſome little under-Characters in this Play, which are produced naturally enough by the Severity of the new Law, as that of the Bawd and the Pimp, as well as of Lucio; which Character is admirably maintain'd, as Shakeſpear does every where his Comic Characters, whatever he does in his Tragic.

The Unities of Action and Place are pretty well obſerved in this Play, eſpecially as they are in the modern Acceptation. The Deſign of the Play carries an excellent Moral, and a juſt Satire againſt our preſent Reformers; who wou'd alter their Courſe of Nature, and bring us to a Perfection, Mankind never knew ſince the World was half peopled. But while they are ſo very ſevere againſt the Frailties of Men, they never think of their Villanies, Oppreſſion, Extortion, Cheating, Hypocriſy and the like, which are the Vices of Devils, not of Men: nay, which is extremely merry, many of the foreſaid Character are zealous Reformers; which proves thus much at leaſt, that the Kingdom of Hell cannot ſtand long when it is ſo divided in it ſelf. But to return to this Play.

The Scene betwixt Iſabella and Angelo in the ſecond Act is very fine; and the not bringing the yielding of Iſabella to Angelo on the Stage, is artfully artfully manag'd; for it wou'd have been a difficult matter to have contriv'd it ſo, that it ſhou'd not have given a ſlur to her Modeſty in regard to the Audience, tho they knew it diſſembled.

Allowing for ſome Peccadillos, the laſt Act is wonderful, and moving to ſuch a degree, that he muſt have very little Senſe of Things and Nature, who finds himſelf calm in the reading it.

The main Story or Fable of the Play is truly Tragical, for it is adapted to move Terror and Compaſſion; and the Action is one. Its having a fortunate Cataſtrophe is nothing to the purpoſe, for that is in many of the Greek Tragedies; tho Ariſtotle indeed makes the unfortunate Ending the moſt beautiful, and perfect. Leaving therefore a farther Examen of the Fable, Conduct, &c. to the Reader, and the Rules which I have laid down, I ſhall proceed to the fine moral Reflections and Topics of it. But it contains ſo many Beauties of this kind, that to tranſcribe them all I ſhould leave very little untouch'd; I ſhall therefore content my ſelf to give a Sample of them.

Mercy.

Iſa. ——Well, believe this,
No Ceremony, that to great Ones longs,
Not the King's Court, nor the deputed Sword,
The Marſhal's Trunchion, or the Judge's Robe,
Become them with one half ſo good a Grace
As Mercy does.——

Great Mens Abuſe of Power.

Iſa. ——Cou'd great Men thunder,
As Jove himſelf does, Jove wou'd ne'er be quiet:
For every pelting petty Officer
Wou'd uſe his Heav'n for Thunder;
Nothing but Thunder. Merciful Heav'n!
Thou rather with thy ſharp and ſulphurous Bolts
Split'ſt the unwedgable, and gnarled Oak,
Than the ſoft Myrtle. Oh! but Man! proud Man!
Dreſt in a little brief Authority;
Moſt ignorant of what he's moſt aſſur'd,
(His glaſſy Eſſence;) like an angry Ape,
Plays ſuch fantaſtick Tricks before high Heav'n,
As makes the Angels weep——

The Privilege of Authority.

Iſa. Great Men may jeſt with Saints, 'tis Wit in them;
But in the leſs, foul Profanation——
——That in the Captain's but a Choleric Word,
Which in the Soldiers is flat Blaſphemy.
Ang. Why do you put theſe Sayings upon me?
Iſa. Becauſe Authority, tho it err like others,
Hath yet a kind of Medicine in it ſelf,
That skins the Vice o' th' Top——

Angelo's laſt Speech in the ſecond Scene of the ſecond Act, is very beautiful in the Agitations of Angelo's Soul on his falling in love with Iſabella, and the Simile very fine, which only I ſhall tranſcribe.

What's this? what's this? Is this her Fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who ſins moſt? ha!
Not ſhe, nor doth ſhe tempt, but it is I,
That lying by the Violet in the Sun,
Do as the Carrion does, not as the Flower,
Corrupt with virtuous Seaſon.——

The reſt of the Speech is well worth noting, nor is Angelo's Speech in the fourth Scene of the ſame Act leſs agreeable, or the following Simile in it leſs beautiful——

——The State, whereon I ſtudy'd,
Is like a good Thing being often read,
Grown ſear'd, and tedious.——

On Place and Form.

——Oh! Place! Oh! Form!
How often doſt thou with thy Caſe, thy Habit,
Wrench Awe from Fools? and tye the wiſer Souls
To this falſe ſeeming?

I cannot omit the charming Simile in the ſame Scene.

So play the fooliſh Throngs with one that ſwoons;
All came to help him, and ſo ſtop the Air
By which he ſhou'd revive; and even ſo
The general Subject to a well-wiſh'd King,

Quit

Quit their own Part, and in obſequious Fondneſs
Croud to his Preſence, where their untaught Love
Muſt needs appear Offence.

On Life.

Duke. ——Reaſon thus with Life:
If I do looſe thee, I do looſe a thing,
That none but Fools wou'd keep. A Breath thou art,
Servile to all the Skiey Influences;
That do'ſt this Habitation where thou keep'ſt
Hourly afflict. Merely thou art Death's Fool;
For him thou labour'ſt by thy Flight to ſhun,
And yet run'ſt towards him ſtill. Thou art not noble;
For all th' Accommodations, that thou bear'ſt,
Are nurs'd by Baſeneſs. Thou art by no means valiant;
For thou do'ſt fear the ſoft and tender Fork
Of a poor Worm. Thy beſt of Reſt is Sleep,
And that thou oft provok'ſt; yet groſly fear'ſt
Thy Death, which is no more. Thou art not thy ſelf;
For thou exiſt'ſt on many a thouſand Grains,
That iſſue out of Duſt. Happy thou art not:
For what thou haſt not, ſtill thou ſtriv'ſt to get;
And what thou haſt, forget'ſt. Thou art not certain;
For thy Complexion ſhifts to ſtrange Effects,
After the Moon. If thou'rt rich, thou'rt poor;
For like an Aſs, whoſe Back with Ingots bows,
Thou bear'ſt thy heavy Riches but a Journey,
And Death unloads thee. Friend haſt thou none;
For thy own Bowels, which do call thee Sire,
The mere Effuſion of thy proper Loins,
Do curſe the Gout, Serpigo, and the Rheum,
For ending thee no ſooner. Thou haſt nor Youth nor Age,
But as it were an after-Dinner's Sleep,
Dreaming on both. For all thy bleſſed Youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the Alms
Of Palſied-Eld; and when thou'rt old and rich,
Thou haſt neither Heat, Affection, Limb, nor Beauty,
To make thy Riches pleaſant. What yet is this,
That bears the Name of Life? Yet in this Life
Lie hid more thouſand Deaths. Yet Death we fear,
That makes theſe Odds all Even.

It were to be wiſh'd, that the Pulpit cou'd declaim in this pathetic Manner; then we might perhaps have fewer Hypocrites, than Uſurers.

Death.

Claud. Death is a fearful thing.
Iſa. And ſhamed Life as hateful.
Claud. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where,
To lie in cold Obſtruction, and to rot!
This ſenſible, warm Motion to become
A kneaded Clod; and the delighted Spirit
To bathe in fiery Floods, or to reſide
In thrilling Regions of thick-ribbed Ice;
To be impriſon'd in the viewleſs Winds;
And blown with reſtleſs Violence round about
The pendant World! Or to be worſe than worſt
Of thoſe, that lawleſs, and uncertain Thought
Imagine, howling! 'Tis too horrible!
The wearieſt and moſt loathed worldly Life,
That Age, Ache, Penury, and Impriſonment
Can lay on Nature, is a Paradiſe
To what we fear of Death.

No ſhunning Slander.

No Might, nor Greatneſs in Mortality
Can Cenſure 'ſcape. Back-wounding Calumny
The whiteſt Virtue ſtrikes. What thing ſo ſtrong
Can tie the Gall up in the ſlanderous Tongue?

Place and Greatneſs.

Oh! Place and Greatneſs! Millions of falſe Eyes
Are ſtuck upon thee: Volumes of Report
Run with theſe falſe, and moſt contrarious Queſts,
Upon thy Doings. Thouſand Eſcapes of Wit
Make thee the Father of an idle Dream,
And rack thee in their Fancies——

The Plot of this Play is taken from Cynthio Giraldi, December 8. November 5. You may alſo look into Lipſii Monita, p. 125. Hiſtoires admirables de Noſtre Temps, p. 216.

The

The Fable or Argument of The Comedy of Errors.

A Merchant of Syracuſe going to Epidamnum to take care of his Affairs, left in diſorder by his Factor's Death; his Wife big with Child comes after him, and is brought to bed of Twins ſo like, that they cou'd not be known from one another. And in the ſame Inn were, at the ſame time, two Boys born to a poor Woman, as much alike as the Merchant's Sons: who therefore buys them of the Mother, to be brought up with, and to wait upon his Sons. When returning home from Epidamnum, a Storm aroſe, and the Sailers having left the Ship, he and his Wife and Children were left there, and caſt away: The Wife and one Son and his Slave were taken up by the Fiſhermen of Corinth; and he and his younger Son and his Slave, by another Veſſel. And when his Son was grown up to Eighteen, he got his Conſent to go ſeek his Brother; and with him went his Slave, and in their Travel they came to Epheſus; whither after five Years ſearch, the Father likewiſe is arriv'd, and ſeiz'd, and to be put to death for entring that Port contrary to a Law, that made it Death for any Syracuſian to come to Epheſus. They being thus all come to the ſame Town, the Play begins with Ægeon's Account of all that is gone before; on which the Duke of Epheſus gives him that Day to raiſe a thouſand Duckats to redeem his Life. The two Sons, nam'd both Antipholis, and their two Slaves, both call'd Dromio, by their Likeneſs cauſe various Errors; being taken by the very Wife, and Miſtreſs, and Acquaintance of that Antipholis, who liv'd at Epheſus, for one another: Till the Wife taking his Man and him to be mad, has them ſeiz'd and bound by a Doctor to cure them. But while they think them ſecure, the other Brother and his Man come in with their Swords drawn; and they all fly away, wondring how he got looſe, taking him for her Husband. But rallying, the other Brother and his Man fly for't into an Abbey, and are there protected by the Abbeſs. The Duke coming to ſee Ægeon beheaded by the Abbey, Adriana, the Wife of one of the Brothers, applies to him, and complains of the Abbeſs; in the mean while the Husband Antipholis getting looſe, with his Man, comes in and complains to the Duke of his Wife's Treatment of him: this produces the Abbeſs, and with her the other Antipholis, the whole Company being ſurpriz'd, the Diſcovery is made, and theſe found to be Brothers, and Ægeon their Father, and the Abbeſs Æmilia their Mother; which ends the Play.

This Play is exactly regular, as any one may ſee who will examine it by the Rules: The Place is part of one Town, the Time within the artificial Day, and the Action the finding the loſt Brother, &c. Allowing for the Puns which were the Vice of the Age he liv'd in, it is extremely diverting; the Incidents are wonderfully pleaſant, and the Cataſtrophe very happy, and ſtrongly moving. I have wondred that Mr. Dryden choſe rather Amphitrion than this, becauſe the Probability of that depending entirely on the Pagan Syſtem, ſtrains even Credulity to render it agreeable: But this Likeneſs between the Twins is what has happen'd many times; and there is, or was lately, a living Inſtance of it in two Brothers, Twins too, ſo very like, that they were perpetually miſtaken for each other; and ſuch a Sympathy between them, that when one was ill, the other ſicken'd. One was of the Band of the Muſic, that belong'd to Drury-Lane Play-Houſe; the other, if I miſtake not, a Dancing-Maſter in the Country.

This Comedy is an undeniable Proof, that Shakeſpear was not ſo ignorant of the Latin Tongue as ſome wou'd fain make him. There is (ſays the Writer of his Life) one Play of his indeed, The Comedy of Errors, in great meaſure taken from the Menœchmi of Plautus. How that happen'd I cannot eaſily divine, ſince, as I hinted before, I do not take him to have been Maſter of Latin enough to read it in the Original; and I know of no Tranſlation of Plautus ſo old as his Time.

I confeſs, with ſubmiſſion to the Writer of his Life, that I can find no ſuch need of Divination on this Head: for as it is beyond Contradiction plain, that this Comedy is taken from that of Plautus; ſo I think it as obvious to conclude from that, that Shakeſpear did underſtand Latin enough to read him, and knew ſo much of him as to be able to form a Deſign out of that of the Roman Poet; and which he has improv'd very much in my Opinion. He has made two Servants as like as their Maſters, who are not in Plautus. And the very Character of Adriana is copy'd from the Wife of Menœchmus Surreptus, as is viſible from his firſt Entrance on the Stage, in the ſecond Scene of the firſt Act. For this is the Character he gives of her.

Ni mala, ni ſtulta, ni indomita impoſq; Animi,
Quod viro eſſe odio videas, tute tibi odio habeas.
Præterhac ſi mihi tale poſt hunc Diem
Faxis, faxo foris Vidua viſas Patrem.
Nam quoties foras ire volo, me retines, revocas,
Rogitas quo ego eam? Quam rem agam? Quid negotii geram?
Quid petam? Quid feram? Quid foris egerim? &c.

How far Shakeſpear was beholden to Plautus, may, in ſome meaſure, be ſeen by the Argument of the Menœchmi.

" A Sicilian Merchant had Twin Boys, ſo like, that they cou'd not be " diſtinguiſh'd; but one of them being ſtolen away, the Father dy'd with " Grief; and his Uncle gives the Boy that remain'd, the Name of his " Brother Menœchmus, his before being Soſicles; who, being grown up to " be

" be a Man, goes in ſearch of his Brother all round the Coaſts of the " Mediterranean, Archipelago, &c. and comes at laſt to Epidamnum; " where his ſtolen Brother was ſettled, and marry'd to a termagant ſort of a " Lady before deſcrib'd. When Soſicles arriv'd, every one took him for his " Brother; his Miſtreſs, Friends, his Wife, and his Father-in-law; till at " laſt meeting together, they diſcover themſelves to be Brothers: which " ends the Play.

But this Controverſy of Shakeſpear's total Ignorance of the Latin, will be no longer on foot when we come to his Poems, where there are ſeveral Tranſlations of Ovid's Metamorphoſis, and his Epiſtles. This Play, tho ſo full of Action, is not without beautiful Reflections, and Speeches.

Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholis, look ſtrange and frown,
Some other Miſtreſs has ſome ſweet Aſpects.
I am not Adriana, nor thy Wife!
The Time was once, when thou un-urg'd wou'dſt vow,
That never Words were Muſick to thine Ear;
That never Object pleaſing in thine Eye;
That never Touch was welcome to thy Hand;
That never Meat ſweet-ſavour'd to thy Taſte;
Unleſs I ſpake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thee.

The Superiority of Man.

Luc. There's nothing ſituate under Heav'ns Eye,
But has his Bound in Earth, in Sea, or Sky.
The Beaſts, the Fiſhes, and the winged Fowls,
Are their Male's Subjects, and at their Controuls.
Man more divine, the Maſter of all theſe,
Lord of the wide World, and wide watry Seas,
Indu'd with intellectual Senſe and Soul,
Of more Pre-heminence than Fiſh or Fowl,
Are Maſters of their Females and their Lords:
Then let your Will attend on their Accords.

Slander.

For Slander lives upon Succeſſion,
For ever hous'd, where once it gets Poſſeſſion.

The

The Argument of Much Ado about Nothing.

THE Scene lies at Meſſina in Sicily, and in and near the Houſe of Leonato. Don Pedro of Arragon, with his Favourite Claudio, and Benedict, a gay young Cavalier of Padua, and Don John, the Baſtard Brother of Don Pedro, come to Leonato's the Governour of Meſſina. Claudio is in love with Hero, Leonato's Daughter, whom Don Pedro obtains for him; and while they wait the Wedding-Day, they conſult how to make Benedict and Beatrice, the Niece of Leonato, in love with each other, both being gay and eaſy and averſe to Love, and like great Talkers railing always at each other. However, by letting them over-hear their Diſcourſe, they perſuade them, that they are in love with each other. In the mean time, Don John, the very Soul of Envy and Miſchief, contrives how to break the Match betwixt Claudio and Hero; and to this purpoſe, by his Engines Conrade and Borachio, they make Claudio and the Prince believe that Hero is a Wanton, and put a plauſible Cheat on them to confirm the Suſpicion, by having Borachio talk to Hero's Maid Margaret, at the Chamber Window at Mid-night, as if ſhe were Hero. Convinc'd by this Fallacy, Claudio and Don Pedro diſgrace her in the Church where he went to marry her, rejecting her, and accuſing her of Wantonneſs with another. Hero ſwoons away; and the Prieſt interpoſing, and joining in the Atteſtation ſhe makes of her Virtue, ſhe is privately convey'd away, and reported dead. The Rogue Borachio being taken by the Watch, as he was telling the Adventure to his Comrade, diſcovers the Villany, and clears Hero; but Don John is fled. Her Innocence being known, her Father is ſatisfied with Claudio, that he hang Verſes on her Tomb that Night, and marry a Niece of his the next Morning without ſeeing her Face, which he agrees to and performs; and then it is diſcover'd that it is Hero whom he marry'd: and ſo the Play ends, with an Account of Don John's being taken.

This Fable is as full of Abſurdities, as the Writing is full of Beauties: the firſt I leave to the Reader to find out by the Rules I have laid down; the ſecond I ſhall endeavour to ſhew, and point out ſome few of the many that are contain'd in the Play. Shakeſpear indeed had the Misfortune, which other of our Poets have ſince had, of laying his Scene in a warm Climate, where the Manners of the People are very different from ours; and yet has made them talk and act generally like Men of a colder Country. Marriage Alamode has the ſame Fault.

This Play we muſt call a Comedy, tho ſome of the Incidents and Diſcourſes too are more in a Tragic Strain; and that of the Accuſation of Hero is too ſhocking for either Tragedy or Comedy; nor cou'd it have come come off in Nature, if we regard the Country, without the Death of more than Hero. The Impoſition on the Prince and Claudio ſeems very lame, and Claudio's Conduct to the Woman he lov'd, highly contrary to the very Nature of Love, to expoſe her in ſo barbarous a Manner, and with ſo little concern and ſtruggle, and on ſuch weak Grounds, without a farther Examination into the Matter; yet the Paſſions this produces in the old Father, make a wonderful amends for the Fault. Beſides which, there is ſuch a pleaſing Variety of Characters in the Play, and thoſe perfectly maintain'd, as well as diſtinguiſh'd, that you looſe the Abſurdities of the Conduct in the Excellence of the Manners, Sentiments, Diction and Topics. Benedict and Beatrice are two ſprightly, witty, talkative Characters, and, tho of the ſame Nature, yet perfectly diſtinguiſh'd; and you have no need to read the Names, to know who ſpeaks. As they differ from each other, tho ſo near a-kin, ſo do they from that of Lucio in Meaſure for Meaſure, who is likewiſe a very talkative Perſon; but there is a groſs Abuſiveneſs, Calumny, Lying, and Leudneſs in Lucio, which Benedict is free from. One is a Rake's Mirth and Tattle; the other that of a Gentleman, and a Man of Spirit, and Wit.

The Stratagem of the Prince on Benedict and Beatrice, is manag'd with that Nicety and Addreſs, that we are very well pleas'd with the Succeſs, and think it very reaſonable and juſt.

The Character of Don John the Baſtard is admirably diſtinguiſh'd, his Manners are well mark'd, and every where convenient, or agreeable; being of a ſour, melancholy, ſaturnine, envious, ſelfiſh, malicious Temper; Manners neceſſary to produce the villanous Events they did: theſe were productive of the Cataſtrophe, for he was not a Perſon brought in to fill up the Number only, becauſe without him the Fable could not have gone on.

To quote all the Comic Excellencies of this Play, would be to tranſcribe three Parts of it. For all that paſſes betwixt Benedict and Beatrice is admirable. His Diſcourſe againſt Love and Marriage, in the latter end of the ſecond Act, is very pleaſant and witty, as is that which Beatrice ſays of Wooing, Wedding, and Repenting. And the Averſion that the Poet gives Benedict and Beatrice to each other in their Diſcourſe, heightens the Jeſt of making them in love with one another. Nay, the Variety and natural Diſtinction of the vulgar Humours of this Play, are remarkable.

The Scenes of this Play are ſomething obſcure, for you can ſcarce tell where the Place is in the two firſt Acts, tho the Scenes in them ſeem pretty entire, and unbroken. But thoſe are things we ought not to look much for in Shakeſpear. But whilſt he is out in the Dramatic Imitation of the Fable, he always draws Men and Women ſo perfectly, that when we read, we can ſcarce perſuade our ſelves, but that the Diſcourſe is real, and no Fiction.

On

On Friendſhip in Love.

Friendſhip is conſtant in all other things,
Save in the Office and Affairs of Love:
Therefore all Hearts in Love uſe their own Tongues.
Let every Eye negotiate for it ſelf,
And truſt no Agent: For Beauty is a Witch,
Againſt whoſe Charms, Faith melteth into Blood.

Patience under Misfortunes eaſier advis'd than maintain'd.

Leonat. I pray thee ceaſe thy Counſel,
Which falls into my Ears, as profitleſs,
As Water in a Sieve. Give not me Counſel,
Nor let no Comfort elſe delight mine Ear,
But ſuch an one, whoſe Wrongs do ſute with mine.
Bring me a Father that ſo lov'd his Child,
Whoſe Joy of her is over-whelm'd like mine,
And bid him ſpeak of Patience;
Meaſure his Woe the Length and Breadth of mine,
And let it anſwer every Strain, for Strain;
As thus, for thus, and ſuch a Grief for ſuch,
In every Lineament, Branch, Shape, and Form:
If ſuch a one will ſmile, and ſtroke his Beard,
And Holla! wag, cry hem! when he ſhou'd groan;
Patch Grief with Proverbs; make Misfortunes drunk
With Candle-Waſters; bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather Patience.
But there is no ſuch Man. For, Brother, Men
Can counſel and ſpeak Comfort to that Grief,
Which they themſelves not feel; but taſting it,
Their Counſel turns to Paſſion, which before
Wou'd give preceptial Medicine to Rage;
Fetter ſtrong Madneſs in a ſilken Thread;
Charm Ache with Air, and Agony with Words.
No, no, 'tis all Mens Office to ſpeak Patience
To thoſe, that wring under the Load of Sorrow:
But no Man's Virtue nor Sufficiency
To be ſo moral, when he ſhall endure
The like himſelf. Therefore give me no Counſel——
My Griefs cry louder than Advertiſement.

I have given more than the bare Topic, becauſe the Speech is pathetic, and extremely Natural. Nor can I omit another Speech, tho it contain neither Topic nor Deſcription.

If they wrong her Honour,
The proudeſt of them all ſhall hear of it.
Time has not yet ſo dry'd this Blood of mine,
Nor Age ſo eat up my Invention,
Nor Fortune made ſuch Havock of my Means,
Nor my bad Life reft me ſo much of Friends;
But they ſhall find, awak'd in ſuch a kind,
Both Strength of Limb, and Policy of Mind,
Ability in Means, and Choice of Friends,
To quit me of them thorowly.

Of this I ſhall ſpeak in my Remarks on his Verſes, where he has more than once made uſe of the ſame Figure. For the Plot of this Play, conſult Arioſto's Orlando Furioſo, Book V. and Spenſer's Fairy Queen, Book II.

The Argument of Love's Labour's loſt.

THE King of Navarre, and ſome of his Nobles, make a Vow of retiring from the World to their Books for three Years, and forſwear the Converſation of all Women. But the King of France's Daughter, and ſome Ladies her Attendants, come in an Embaſſy from her Father to the King of Navarre, which obliges them to a Converſation with the Ladies; and that makes them all in love, and endeavour, after they have found out each others Frailty and Breach of Oath, to win the Ladies to yield to love them. But they admit them to hope, on condition they remain in the ſame mind a Year, and perform certain Penances. This and the News of the French King's Death, ends the Play.

Tho I can't well ſee why the Author gave this Play this Name, yet ſince it has paſt thus long, I ſhall ſay no more to it but this, That ſince it is one of the worſt of Shakeſpear's Plays, nay, I think I may ſay the very worſt, I cannot but think that it is his firſt, notwithſtanding thoſe Arguments, or that Opinion, that has been brought to the contrary. " Perhaps (ſays the Author of his Life) we are not to look for his Be-
" ginnings like thoſe of other Authors, among their leaſt perfect Writings.
" Art had ſo little, and Nature ſo large a Share in what he did, that for
" ought I know, the Performances of his Youth, as they were the moſt

" vigorous, and had the moſt Fire of Imagination in them, were the beſt. " I wou'd not be thought by this to mean, that his Fancy was ſo looſe " and extravagant, as to be independent of the Rule and Government " of Judgment; but that what he thought, was commonly ſo great, ſo " juſtly and rightly concerted in it ſelf, that it wanted little or no Cor- " rection; and was immediately approv'd by an impartial Judgment at " firſt Sight."

But ſince this Gentleman has only given us a Suppoſition of his own, without confirming it with any convincing, or indeed probable Reaſon; I hope I may be permitted to throw in another Perhaps for the Opinion of Mr. Dryden and others, without offending him by the Oppoſition. I agree with him, that we have indeed in our Days ſeen a young Man ſtart up like a Muſhroom in a Night, and ſurprize the Whim of the Town into a momentary Reputation, or at leaſt by a ſurprizing firſt Play (as Plays go at this Time) and in all his after Tryals give us not one Line that might ſupply our Credulity with the leaſt Reaſon to believe he wrote the firſt himſelf. Thus Love's laſt Shift was an excellent firſt Play, and yet that Author, after ſo many Tryals, has not only never come up to his firſt Eſſay, but ſcarce to any thing tolerable, except in one, that like a Chedder Cheeſe was made by the Milk of a Pariſh.

But in Shakeſpear we are not conſidering thoſe Maſters of the Stage, that glare a little in the Night, but diſappear in the Day; but fix'd Stars, that always ſhow their unborrow'd Light. And here the common Experience is directly againſt our Author; for all the Poets, that have without Controverſy been Maſters of a great Genius, have roſe to Excellence by Degrees. The Wild Gallant was the worſt of Dryden's Plays, and the firſt; and The Plain Dealer was the laſt of Mr. Wycherley's: Otway, the brighteſt and moſt Tragic Genius of our Age, gave us three moderate Plays before the Orphan, and Venice Preſerv'd. And why we ſhou'd think that Shakeſpear ſhou'd grow worſe by Practice, I can find no ſhadow of a Reaſon from what is advanc'd. But—the Performances of his Youth, as they were the moſt vigorous, and had the moſt Fire and Strength of Imagination in 'em, were the beſt.—But ſtill this is begging the Queſtion, and taking that for granted, which wants to be prov'd, viz. that the Productions of his Youth had the moſt Fire and Strength of Imagination. The laſt Works of Mr. Dryden, tho paſt Seventy, had much the moſt Fire and Strength of Imagination, his Fables excelling all that he ever wrote before. Nor can we think but that Shakeſpear was far from Dotage when he died at fifty three, and had retir'd ſome Years from the Stage, and left off writing Plays. But ſhou'd we allow what our Author contends for, his Suppoſition wou'd not hold; for the Play before us, and all his moſt imperfect Plays, have the leaſt Fire and Strength of Imagination; and that Fancy which is in them, is almoſt every where independent of that Rule of Judgment, which our Author ſuppoſes him Maſter of. I am ſure

Judgment

Judgment encreaſes with Years and Obſervation; and where Shakeſpear ſhews that he is leaſt extravagant, 'tis plain he depends moſt on that Rule of Judgment. I confeſs the Terms are ſomething obſcure and equivocal; but I pretend not to enter into a Debate with him on this Head; all I have ſaid being to juſtify Mr. Dryden and ſome others, who yet think that we ought to look into Shakeſpear's moſt imperfect Plays for his firſt. And this of Love's Labour's Loſt being perhaps the moſt defective, I can ſee no Reaſon why we ſhou'd not conclude, that it is one of his firſt. For neither the Manners, Sentiments, Diction, Verſification, &c. (except in ſome few places) diſcover the Genius that ſhines in his other Plays.

But tho this Play be ſo bad, yet there is here and there a Stroke, that perſuades us, that Shakeſpear wrote it. The Proclamation, that Women ſhou'd loſe their Tongues if they approach'd within a Mile of the Court, is a pleaſant Penalty. There are but few Words ſpoken by Jaquenetta in the latter end of the firſt Act, and yet the very Soul of a pert Country Laſs is perfectly expreſs'd. The ſeveral Characters of the King's Companions in the Retreat are very pretty; and the Remarks of the Princeſs very juſt and fine. Longavile's good Epigram furniſhes a Proof, that theſe publiſh'd in this Volume are genuine, and for that Reaſon I will tranſcribe it.

Did not the heavenly Rhetoric of thine Eye,
'Gainſt whom the World cannot hold Argument,
Perſuade my Heart to this falſe Perjury?
Vows for thee broke deſerve not Puniſhment.
A Woman I forſwore, but I will prove,
Thou being a Goddeſs, I forſwore not thee.
My Vow was earthly, thou a heavenly Love;
Thy Grace being gain'd, cures all Diſgrace in me.
Vows are but Breath, and Breath a Vapour is.
When thou fair Sun, which on my Earth doſt ſhine,
Exhal'ſt this Vapour-Vow, in thee it is.
If broken then, it is no Fault of mine
If by me broke; What Fool is not ſo wiſe
To loſe an Oath, to win a Paradiſe?

The Diſcovery of the King's, Longavile's and Dumain's Love, is very prettily manag'd; and that of Biron, by Coſtard's miſtake, is a well contriv'd Incident. The whole indeed is a tolerable Proof how much in vain we reſolve againſt Nature; nor is Biron's Caſuiſtry amiſs, when he ſtrives to ſalve their common Breach of Oath.

Of Delights.

Biron. Why all Delights are vain, and that moſt vain,
Which with Pain purchaſed, does inherit Pain, &c.

On Study.

Study is like the Heaven's glorious Sun,
That will not be deep ſearch'd with ſaucy Looks;
Small have continual Plodders ever won,
Save baſe Authority from other Books, &c.

Beauty.

Beauty is bought by Judgment of the Eye,
Not utter'd by baſe Sale of Chapmens Tongues, &c.

A pleaſant Deſcription of Cupid, or Love.

This whimpled, whining, purblind, wayward Boy,
This Signior Junio's Giant-Dwarf, Don Cupid,
Regent of Love-Rhymes, Lord of folded Arms,
The anointed Sovereign of Sighs and Groans;
Liege of all Loyterers, and Malecontents;
Dread Prince of Plackets, King of Codpieces, &c.

Of a Wife.

——I ſeek a Wife;
A Woman that is like a German Clock,
Still a repairing, ever out of Frame, &c.

There is a pretty Account of Love, beginning,

But Love firſt learned in a Lady's Eye, &c.

And on Womens Eyes there are ſome pretty Reflections, beginning thus,

From Womens Eyes this Doctrine I derive,
They ſparkle ſtill the true Promethean Fire, &c.

The

The Argument of Midſummer Night's Dream.

Theſeus having brought Hippolita from the Amazons, deſigns to marry her in a few Days: whilſt he is appointing the Time, Egæus one of his Courtiers, complains of his Daughter Hermia's Love to Lyſander, and Averſion to Demetrius, for whom he deſign'd her; tho Demetrius had been in love with Helena, and was contracted to her. Hermia refuſes to comply with her Father, the Duke allows her four Days to conſider of it, in which time ſhe muſt, by the Athenian Law, either obey, be put to death, or vow perpetual Chaſtity on the Altar of Diana. This makes Lyſander perſuade Hermia that Night to fly with him from Athens, to an Aunt of his out of the Juriſdiction of that City, and there marry him; ſhe conſents, and informs Helena, her intimate Friend, of her Deſign, and wiſhes Demetrius may on her Flight return to his Duty. Helena, out of Dotage on her Lover, informs him of Hermia's Flight, who goes after her, and ſhe after him, and ſo they all meet at a Wood a little from Athens, where they become liable to the Power of the Fairies. For Oberon, and his Queen Titania, being come to dance in the Palace of Theſeus, to give a Bleſſing to his Wedding, quarrel about a Changeling Boy that the Queen had ſtolen, and which ſhe lov'd, to the raiſing the Jealouſy of Oberon, denying to give him to her Husband. In Revenge, Oberon ſending Puck for a Charm, lays it on the Queen when aſleep, to make her fall in love with whatever ſhe ſaw when ſhe wak'd. Puck in the mean while is ſent to put ſome on the Eyes of Demetrius, ſo that he may fall in love with Helena, whom Oberon had ſeen him treat very ungratefully, and making no Return for her Love; but Puck miſtaking the Man, Oberon having bid him do it to one in an Athenian Habit, puts it on Lyſander's Eyes, which makes him in love with Helena, and uſe Hermia very unkindly. But Oberon finding the Miſtake, charms Demetrius ſo, that he likewiſe loves Helena; this produces a Quarrel, but the Rivals are hindred from fighting by Puck's Artifice. Then the Lovers being all aſleep, and reſtor'd to rights, Oberon puts an end to the Charm that held his Queen enamour'd of a Clown, whoſe Head was turn'd into that of an Aſs, ſhe having then given Oberon the Boy he had before beg'd in vain. They being ſo reconcil'd, appoint to dance the next Night in Duke Theſeus's Palace. The Morning being come, Theſeus, Hippolita, Egæus, &c. come into the ſame Wood to hunt, and find the four Lovers aſleep by one another. They being waken'd by the Horns, and avowing their Loves to one another, as they ſhou'd, Demetrius reſigns Hermia to Lyſander, and takes his former Love Helena; ſo being marry'd, all at the ſame time; with Theſeus, Bottom, tom, and his Companions, preſent a ſtrange ſort of a Play of Pyramus, and Thisbe; which ends our Play.

Great part of this Play depending on a ſort of Notion of Fairies and their Power, it falls not under the Conſideration of others, whoſe Actors are all Human. Of the Nature of theſe things I have already ſpoke in my Notes on the Tempeſt. It is plain from the Argument, that the Fable can never bear the Teſt of the Rules. The time is by Theſeus in the firſt Scenes of the Play fixt to at leaſt four Days, in theſe Words:

> Now fair Hippolita, our nuptial Hour
> Draws on apace; four happy Days bring in > Another Moon, &c.

The new Moon being the time for their Marriage. But it does not appear that there is any more time ſpent in the Action than one Day and one Night, and a piece of a Day, and part of one Night.

Tho this cannot be call'd either Tragedy, or Comedy, as wanting the Fable requir'd to either; yet it contains abundance of beautiful Reflections, Deſcriptions, Similies, and Topics. Much of it is in Rhyme, in which the Author is generally very ſmooth, and flowing. The firſt Scene of the Complaint of Ægæus to Theſeus is very pretty; the Obſtinacy of a peeviſh old Father, who will diſpoſe of his Daughter without regard to her Inclinations, is well expreſs'd; and the Manner of his repreſenting how Lyſander had robb'd her of her Affections, is extremely agreeable to that Character.

But I cannot omit Hermia's Oath to meet her Lover that Night, and fly with him from Athens.

> Her. My good Lyſander,
> I ſwear to thee, by Cupid's ſtrongeſt Bow;
> By his beſt Arrow with the golden Head;
> By the Simplicity of Venus' Doves;
> By that which knitteth Souls, and proſpers Love;
> And by that Fire, which burn'd the Carthage Queen,
> When the falſe Trojan under Sail was ſeen;
> By all the Vows, that ever Men have broke,
> (In Number more than ever Woman ſpoke;)
> In that ſame place thou haſt appointed me,
> To morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Tho we cannot perhaps trace the Antients in the Thoughts of Shakeſpear, yet it is plain from theſe Verſes, and ſeveral others about his Plays, that Shakeſpear was acquainted with the Fables of Antiquity very well: That ſome of the Arrows of Cupid are pointed with Lead, and the others with Gold, he found in Ovid: And that which ſpeaks of Dido he has from from Virgil himself; nor do I know of any Translation of those Poets so antient as Shakespear's Time.

Titania's Description of the Disorder of the Season, on account of the difference betwixt her and Oberon, is very fine.

The Similies which Lysander uses to express or rather justify his Falshood, are very fine.

For, as a Surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest Loathing to a Stomach brings;
Or as the Heresies, that Men do leave,
Are hated most of those they did deceive;
So thou, my Surfeit, and my Heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most by me.

Titania's Order to the Fairies to honour her Love, being what Mr. Dryden has often instanc'd as one of the prettiest Flights of Fancy in Shakespear, I must not omit.

Qu. Be kind and courteous to this Gentleman;
Hop in his Walks, and gambol in his Eyes;
Feed him with Apricots, and Dewberries,
With purple Grapes, green Figs and Mullberries:
The Honey-bags steal from the humble Bees,
And for Night-Tapers crop their waxen Thighs,
And light them at the fiery Glow-worm's Eyes;
To have my Love to bed, and to arise:
And pluck the Wings from painted Butter-flies,
To fan the Moon-Beams from his sleeping Eyes:
Nod to him Elves, and do him Curtesies.

Puck's Similies on the Scene of Bottom and his Companions, are very apt. Such is Demetrius's Description of Helena's Beauty, when he wakes, after charm'd by Oberon; and is worthy looking on. The Reflection of Theseus on the Diversion offer'd by the Clowns is just.

——For never any thing
Can be amiss, when Simpleness and Duty tender it.

His Reflections on Duty and Respect are fine: but giving an Instance or two of the Topics, we'll pass to the next Play.

True Love.

The Course of true Love never did run smooth,
But either it was different in Blood——

Or-

Or elſe miſgrafted in reſpect of Years,
Or elſe it ſtood upon the Choice of Merit;
Or if there were a Sympathy in Choice;
War, Death, or Sickneſs did lay Siege to it,
Making it momentary, as a Sound,
Swift as a Shadow, ſhort as any Dream,
Brief as the Lightning in a collied Night,
That in a Spleen unfolds both Heaven and Earth;
And e'er a Man has Power to ſay, Behold!
The Jaws of Darkneſs do devour it up.
So quick bright things come to Confuſion!

The Simile of Lightning is a perfect Hypotypoſis; and the Epiphonema in the laſt Line, concludes the Topic beautifully.

Love.

Things baſe and vile, holding no Quantity,
Love can tranſpoſe to Form and Dignity.
Love looks not with the Eyes, but with the Mind,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind.
Nor has Love's Mind of any Judgment Taſte;
Wings, and no Eyes, Figure unheedy Haſte.
And therefore is Love ſaid to be a Child,
Becauſe in Choice he often is beguil'd.
As waggiſh Boys themſelves in Game forſwear,
So the Boy Love is perjur'd every where.

Whether theſe Reflections are not too juſt for one in Helena's Condition to make, I leave to the Judicious; but as they are here diveſted of all Perſons, they are admirable.

Night.

Dark Night, that from the Eye its Function takes,
The Ear more quick of Apprehenſion makes;
Wherein it does impair the ſeeing Senſe,
It pays the Hearing double Recompence.

And Puck makes a Deſcription of the Night, which the Reader may add to this.

Lovers,

Lovers, Poets, and Madmen, fanciful.

Lovers and Madmen have ſuch ſeething Brains,
Such ſhaping Phantaſies, that apprehend more,
Than cold Reaſon ever comprehends.
The Lunatic, the Lover, and the Poet,
Are of Imagination all compact.
One ſees more Devils than vaſt Hell can hold,
That is the Madman. The Lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's Beauty in a Brow of Ægypt.
The Poet's Eye, in a fine Frenzy rowling,
Doth glance from Heaven to Earth, from Earth to Heaven;
And as Imagination bodies forth the Form of things
Unknown, the Poet's Pen turns them to Shapes,
And gives to airy nothing, a local Habitation,
And a Name.

All his Fairies, Goblins, and the like, are of this kind, which he deſcribes here.

Imagination.

——Such Tricks has ſtrong Imagination,
That if it wou'd but apprehend ſome Joy,
It comprehends ſome bringer of that Joy;
Or in the Night, imagining ſome Fear,
How eaſy is a Buſh ſuppos'd a Bear?

The Fairy Queen was taken from this Play; but whence Shakeſpear took the hint of it I know not, but believe it to be his own Invention.

The Argument of The Merchant of Venice.

ANtonio, a wealthy and a generous Merchant of Venice, having a perfect Friendſhip for Baſſanio a young Gentleman of fine Accompliſhments of the ſame City, is bound for him to one Shylock a Jew for three thouſand Ducats, for three Months, to forfeit on miſſing his Day of Payment, a Pound of Fleſh where the Jew wou'd take it: Baſſanio having the Money, goes to Belmont to obtain Portia, a rich and beautiful Lady, who was to be won by gueſſing at the Casket out of three which held her Picture;

Picture; to which end divers Princes came from ſeveral Parts of the World, taking an Oath not to reveal which Casket they choſe, if they miſs'd, and to go immediately away on their Miſcarriage: one Casket was of Gold, and another of Silver, and a third of Lead. The reſt miſled by Show, choſe all wrong; but Baſſanio chooſing the Lead, won the Lady to both their Satisfaction. But then Salanio with Lorenzo, who had run away with Shylock's Daughter and marry'd her, and made her a Chriſtian, brings the News of Antonio's Misfortune; that his Ships are all caſt away, and his Bond forfeited to the Jew. Baſſanio having inform'd Portia of the Diſtreſs of his Friend, is married to her, and his Attendant Gratiano to her Maid Neriſſa; and he with Salanio ſpeeds away to Venice, to help Antonio. The Husbands are no ſooner gone, but the Wives, leaving the care of the Houſe to Lorenzo and Jeſſica, haſte to Venice after them; where Portia in the Habit of an Advocate, or Doctor of the Civil Law, hears Antonio's Caſe; and having a little held the Jew in Suſpence, and hope of Succeſs to his cruel Revenge, and he having refus'd all Conſiderations in Money, gives the Cauſe to Antonio, and will not only not let the Jew have his Principal, but proves, that he has forfeited his Life and Goods, which he is oblig'd to give his Daughter on his Death, or to turn Chriſtian.

The Ignorance that Shakeſpear had of the Greek Drama threw him on ſuch odd Stories, as the Novels and Romances of his time cou'd afford; and which were ſo far from being natural, that they wanted that Probability, and Veriſimilitude, which is abſolutely neceſſary to all the Repreſentations of the Stage. The Plot of this Play is of that Number. But the Errors of the Fable, and the Conduct, are too viſible to need Diſcovery. This Play has receiv'd conſiderable Advantages from the Pen of the preſent Lord Landſdown.

The Character of the Jew is very well diſtinguiſh'd by Avarice, Malice, implacable Revenge, &c. But the Incidents that neceſſarily ſhew theſe Qualities are ſo very romantic, ſo vaſtly out of Nature, that our Reaſon, our Underſtanding is every where ſhock'd; which abates extremely of the Pleaſure the Pen of Shakeſpear might give us. This is viſible in his Speech to the Doge; for notwithſtanding that Diſtinction of Character, which is beautiful and otherwiſe pleaſes you, the Incredibility of ſuch a Diſcourſe to ſuch a Prince, and before ſuch a Court of Judicature, has ſo little of Nature in it, that it is impoſſible to eſcape the Cenſure of a Man of common Senſe.

The Character of Portia is not every where very well kept, that is, the Manners are not always agreeable or convenient to her Sex and Quality; particularly, where ſhe ſcarce preſerves her Modeſty in the Expreſſion.

The Scene betwixt Shylock and Tubal in the third Act, is artfully managed; and the Temper of the Jew excellently diſcover'd, in its various Turns upon the different News, of which Tubal gives him an Account.

This

This Play, as well as moſt of the reſt, gives Inſtances that Shakeſpear was perfectly well acquainted with the fabulous Stories of the old Poets; which is to me a Confirmation, that he underſtood the antient Latin Authors, whence only he could learn them.

Tho there are a great many Beauties in what our modern Gentlemen call the Writing in this Play, yet it is almoſt every where calm, and touches not the Soul; there are no ſinewy Paſſions, which ought every where to ſhine in a ſerious Dramatic Performance, ſuch as moſt of this is.

You have too much Reſpect upon the World;
They loſe it, that do buy it with much Care.

Of Mediocrity.

Nere. And yet for ought I ſee, they are as ſick, that ſurfeit with too much, as they that ſtarve with nothing; therefore it is no ſmall Happineſs to be ſeated in the Mean: Superfluity comes ſooner by white Hairs, but Competency lives longer.

Eaſier to adviſe than do.

Por. If to do were as eaſy, as to know what were good to do, Chappels had been Churches, and poor Mens Cottages, Princes Palaces. It is a good Divine that follows his own Inſtructions. I can eaſier teach twenty what is good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow my own teaching. The Brain may deviſe Laws for the Blood; but a hot Temper leaps o'er a cold Decree. Such a Hare is Madneſs, the Youth, to skip over the Meſhes of good Counſel, the Cripple.

That we are more eager in the Purſuit of what we have not, than the Preſervation of what we have poſſeſs'd, take his own words: O! ten times faſter Venus' Pidgeons flie, &c. In Portia's Speech, when Baſſanio is going to make his Choice, there are ſeveral beautiful Similies.

Againſt Appearance, for near forty Lines together. He is generally excellent in his Choice of Epithets of a ſtrong, proper, and natural Signification, and ſuch as denote the Quality of the thing wonderfully; as here—

Por. How all the other Paſſions fleet to Air!
As doubtful Thoughts, and raſh-embrac'd Deſpair,
And ſhuddring Fear, and green-ey'd Jealouſy, &c.

Baſſanio's Deſcription of Portia's Picture, when he chooſes the Leaden Casket, is very fine. There are likewiſe in that or the next Page two fine Similies; the firſt begins thus——Like one of two contending in a Prize: And the other thus——As after ſome Oration fairly ſpoke, &c.

An Affectation in Words, beginning thus—Oh! dear Diſcretion, how his Words are ſuited, &c.

Mercy.

Por. The Quality of Mercy is not ſtrain'd;
It droppeth as the gentle Rain from Heaven,
Upon the Place beneath. It is twice bleſs'd;
It bleſſes him that gives, and him that takes.

On the Power of Muſick.

The Reaſon is, your Spirits are attentive,
For do but note a wild and wanton Herd, &c.

The Expreſſion is very fine on the Moonſhine Night——This Night, methinks, is but the Day-light ſick, &c.

The Argument of As you like it.

FRederick, the Duke of ſome part of France, is depos'd, and baniſh'd by his younger Brother, and retir'd to the Foreſt of Arden; many People of Faſhion following him thither, out of love to him, and hatred of the Uſurper: he retains Roſalinda, his Brother's Daughter, to gratify his own Daughter Cælia, who doated on her with a very peculiar Love and Affection; but being afterwards jealous of her Popularity, baniſhes her likewiſe. But his own Daughter flies with her, Roſalinda being in Man's Clothes, under the Name of Ganymede; and Cælia in Woman's, under the Name of Aliena. Hither likewiſe comes Orlando, the youngeſt Son of Sir Rowland Dubois, fled from his elder Brother's Cruelty, and the Uſurper's Hate. He wreſtling before the Duke, kills his Wreſtler Charles, and wounds the Heart of Roſalinda, as ſhe did his. But meeting in the Foreſt, he makes love to her as Roſalinda, tho in appearance a Lad; which Habit betray'd Phæbe a Shepherdeſs, to fall likewiſe in love with her as a Man, whom ſhe uſes ſcurvily to make her pity Silvius the Swain, that is in love with her. Orlando's Brother Oliver, being forc'd to fly from the Rage of the Uſurper, becauſe his Brother had made his Eſcape, is deliver'd from a Lioneſs by the Valour of Orlando, whoſe Life he had before ſo baſely ſought: but being thus reconcil'd, falls in love with Cælia, and ſhe with him. So the Marriage being reſolv'd on, Roſalinda, or rather Ganymede, promiſes Orlando that he ſhall have his true Roſalinda the next

next day, and Phæbe that ſhe will have her, on condition that if ſhe refuſe him, ſhe ſhall marry Silvius. Having perform'd all this, and the baniſh'd Duke having given her to Orlando, Jaques, Orlando's and Oliver's Brother, brings News that the Uſurper coming with Forces againſt them, was on the way converted and gone into a Monaſtery, leaving the Dukedom again to his Brother.

This Story has nothing Dramatic in it, yet Shakeſpear has made as good uſe of it as poſſible.

The Scene betwixt Orlando and his Brother Oliver, in the opening of the Play, is well manag'd; diſcovering ſomething that goes before in the Quarrel between them: and Oliver's Management of the provoking Charles the Wreſtler againſt Orlando, is artful and natural.

Martial has this Diſtick——

Quem recitas meus eſt, Oh! Fidentine! Libellus;
Sed malè dum recitas incipit eſſe tuus.

I will not ſay that Shakeſpear took the following Thought from this, but it is plainly the ſame: Orlando ſays to Jaques——I pray thee marr no more of my Verſes by reading them ill-favour'dly. The old Duke's Speeeh preferring that Solitude to the World, is full of moral Reflections: Now my Co-mates, and Brothers in Exile, &c. The third Scene of the ſecond Act betwixt Orlando and Adam, moving by the Gratitude of the old Servant, is that fine Speech of Jaques, taken notice of by Mr. Rowe in Shakeſpear's Life. His Pleaſantry as to the different Motion of Time, is worthy remarking: And Roſalinda's Character of a Man in love, is very pretty.

On the ſeveral ſorts of Melancholy.

Jaques. I have neither the Scholars Melancholy, which is Emulation; nor the Muſicians, which is fantaſtical; nor the Courtiers, which is proud; nor the Soldiers, which is ambitious; nor the Lawyers, which is political; nor the Ladies, which is nice; nor the Lovers, which is all theſe.

Love.

Roſ. No, that ſame wicked Baſtard of Venus, that was begot of Thought, conceiv'd of Spleen, and born of Madneſs, that blind raſcally Boy, that abuſes every one's Eyes, becauſe his own are out; let him be judge how deep I am in love.

A Courtier.

——He has been a Courtier he ſwears.

Clown. If any Man doubt that, let him put me to the Purgation,——
——I have trod a Meaſure; I have flatter'd a Lady; I have been politic with my Friend, ſmooth with my Enemy; I have undone three Taylors; I have had four Quarrels, and had like to have fought one.

The Argument of The Taming the Shrew.

A Gentleman of Padua has two Daughters, Catherine the Elder, and Biancha the Younger. The Elder is ſo known a Shrew, that no body wou'd make love to her in order to Matrimony; while Biancha had many, that addreſs'd to her for that end. But the Father declar'd he wou'd not diſpoſe of the youngeſt till the eldeſt was marry'd: which made all the Pretenders deſpair, till Petrucio of Verona ventur'd upon the Match, woos her madly, marries her quickly, and treats her intolerably, till he broke her Stubborneſs ſo, that ſhe was the moſt obedient of the three Wives then there, viz. her Siſter, who was married to Lucentio, and a Widow who juſt marry'd Hortenſio, a Suiter of Biancha's, till his Diſguſt at her liſtning to Lucentio, who appear'd only to be a Schoolmaſter.

This Play is indeed Dramatic, for it is all Action, and there is little room left for Reflections and fine Topics. Tho it be far from regular as to Time and Place, yet it is perfectly ſo in the Action; and ſome of the Irregularities of Time might eaſily have been prevented. In a matter of twelve Lines there is plainly ſuppos'd at leaſt twelve, if not twenty four Hours to have paſs'd; there is ſcarce indeed a Line for an Hour. The Diſtich of Ovid, which Lucentio conſtrues in a pleaſant way, is a freſh Proof that Shakeſpear was well acquainted with Ovid; and that he had a peculiar Value for that Poet, is plain from what Tranio ſays in the firſt Scene:

Let's be no Stoicks, nor no Stocks I pray,
Or ſo devote to Ariſtotle's Checks,
As Ovid be an Out-caſt quite abjur'd, &c.

The Reader, by regarding this whole Speech of Tranio, will find that Shakeſpear was far from being that Ignoramus in Literature, as ſome wou'd unaccountably make him.

Grumio's

Grumio's Account of Petrucio's Journey with his Bride, is very entertaining.

The Mind, not the Habit, valuable.

For 'tis the Mind that makes the Body rich.
And as the Sun breaks thro the darkeſt Clouds,
So Honour peereth in the meaneſt Habit.
What, is the Jay more precious than the Lark,
Becauſe his Feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the Adder better than the Eele,
Becauſe the painted Skin contents the Eye? &c.

Catherine's Harangue to her Siſter and the Widow, on the Duty of Wives to their Husbands, if the Ladies wou'd read it with a little Regard, might be of mighty uſe in this Age.

The Story of the Tinker, by which this Comedy is introduc'd, may be found in Goulart's Hiſtoires Admirables, and in Pontus Heuterus Rerum Burdicarum. The Comedy it ſelf is his own Invention, as far as we can diſcover, and ſo good, that tho it has been alter'd by Mr. Lacy, yet I do not think it much improv'd. That Comedian committed an odd Blunder in laying the Scene in England, and adding Sawney the Scot, and yet retaining all the other Names that were purely Italian. The additional Trial of Skill on their Return to her Father, is well contriv'd.

The Argument of All's well that ends well.

HE*lena*, Daughter of Gerard de Narbonne, a famous Phyſician in France, is bred up by the Counteſs Dowager of Rouſillon, as her own: She falls in love with Bertram the young Count, who being ſent to Court, her Paſſion for him is diſcovered by the Dutcheſs, and ſhe encourag'd in her Attempt to cure the King of a Fiſtula, when all the Doctors had given him over. She therefore arrives at Court, and after much Importunity cures the King; and in right of his Promiſe, chooſes Count Bertram for her Husband: but he diſdaining her for a Wife, is compell'd for fear of the King to marry her; but then he orders her immediately to return to his Mother, aſſuring her that he wou'd follow her. But on the contrary, he ſteals away privately with Perolles, a Braggadocio that miſled his Youth, and goes to the Wars in Tuſcany, ſending a Letter to his Wife by a Friend, of this Import, That ſhe ſhou'd never call him Husband, till ſhe cou'd get the Ring from his Finger, and ſhow him a Child begotten by by him on her Body, and that till he had no Wife he cou'd have nothing in France. Upon this Helena goes away privately in a Pilgrim's Habit, and comes to Florence, meets with a Widow, whoſe Daughter Diana Count Bertram endeavours to debauch. Helena diſcovering her ſelf to them, prevails with the Daughter to get the Ring on his Finger, in conſideration of her ſurrendring her Maiden-head to him, and that ſhe ſhou'd ſupply her Place in bed at Night. After this Piece of Cunning, and News that Helena was dead, Count Bertram returns to France; Helena, the Widow and the Daughter follow him: and having prov'd all this before the King, the Count receives his Wife into Favour, and the King forgives all that is paſt.

The Irregularity of the Plot is viſible enough, when we are in one Part of a Scene in France, in another in Italy, &c. The Story it ſelf is out of a Poſſibility almoſt, at leaſt ſo far out of the way of Cuſtom and Experience, that it can't be call'd natural. The Character of Perolles is taken notice of by Mr. Rowe very juſtly for its Excellence, being, I think, preferable to all in that kind, except his own Falſtaff. He has indeed drawn variety of Cowards; Nym, Bardolph, Piſtol, Sir Andrew Ague-Cheeck, &c.

This Play is not deſtitute however of fine Reflections, and inſtructive Sentences: the Speech of the Counteſs to her Son, on his leaving her to go to Court, is very good:

> ——Be thou bleſt, Bertram, and ſucceed thy Father
> In Manners as in Shape; thy Blood and Virtue
> Contend for Empire in thee.

Nor can I omit Mariana's Advice to the Widow's Daughter.

> Well, Diana, take heed of the French Earl:
> The Honour of a Maid is in her Name,
> And no Legacy is ſo rich as Honeſty.

And a little after, thus——Beware of them, Diana, their Promiſes, Enticements, Oaths, &c.

Life is chequer'd.

1 L. The Web of our Life is of mingled Yarn, good and ill together: our Virtues wou'd be proud, if our Faults whipt them not; and our Crimes wou'd deſpair, if they were not cheriſh'd by our Virtues.

A Braggadocio.

——Who knows himſelf a Braggart,
Let him fear this; for it will come to paſs,
That every Braggart ſhall be found an Aſs.

The Plot of this Play is taken from Boccace's Novels. Day. 3. Nov. 9.

The Argument of Twelf Night, or what you will.

ORſino, Duke of Illyria, is in love with Olivia, a Lady of great Beauty, Quality and Fortune, but in vain. Viola and Sebaſtian Twins are caſt away at Sea, but each by the other thought to be drown'd; Viola being clothed in one of her Brother's Suits, under the Name of Cæſario, is admitted to be Page to the Duke, with whom ſhe is ſecretly in love, but by him oblig'd to go between him and his Miſtreſs; by which Olivia, who cou'd not hear of any ſuch Motion from the Duke, falls in love with the Page. Sebaſtian in the mean while coming to the ſame City, and being taken for Cæſario, beats Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Ague-Cheeck, and by the ſame Miſtake is marry'd to Olivia: the Duke and Cæſario coming to Olivia to preſs his Fortune the laſt time, he threatens Cæſario's Life, ſhe owns her Marriage, and calls him Husband; which being reſented by the Duke, is deny'd by the Page, till Sir Andrew Ague-Cheeck comes in to complain of Sebaſtian, who following, proves ſo like that they cou'd not be diſtinguiſh'd; ſo they being diſcover'd to be Brother and Siſter, the Duke marries Viola; and that ends the Play.

There is a ſort of under-Plot of Sir Toby's bubbling Sir Andrew, in hopes of his having Olivia, of their impoſing on Olivia's Steward Malvolio, as if his Lady was in love with him, and the Quarrel promoted betwixt Cæſario and Sir Andrew; which yet are ſo interwove, that there is nothing which is not neceſſary to the main Plot, but that Epiſode of the Steward. This, as well as ſome others of his Comedies, has ſome Confuſion about the chief Perſon; for ſometimes Orſino is Duke or Sovereign of the Country, at other times he is Count Orſino, and Olivia ſpeaks of him as of an Equal, a private Man, not a Prince —— thus ſhe ſays to Cæſario, toward near the end of the Play; Take thy Fortunes up, and that thou know'ſt thou art, and then thou art as great as that thou fear'ſt.

Malvolio, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew, are three Characters truly comical, that is, ridiculous.

Love.

Duke. O! Spirit of Love, how quick and freſh art thou!
That notwithſtanding thy Capacity
Receiveth as the Sea, nought enters there,
Of what Validity and Pitch ſoe'er,
But falls into Abatement, and low Price,
Ev'n in a Minute; ſo full of Shapes is Fancy,
That it alone is high fantaſtical.

What the Duke ſays in the next Page is very fine, and the natural Effect of Love and Deſire. The Thought is extremely pathetic.

Duke. Oh! She that has a Heart of that fine Frame,
To pay a Debt of Love but to a Brother,
How will ſhe love, when the rich golden Shaft
Has kill'd the Flock of all Affections elſe
That live in her? When Liver, Brain and Heart,
Theſe Sovereign Thrones, are all ſupply'd, and fill'd
(Her ſweet Perfections) by one ſelf-ſame King?

The Captain's Deſcription of Sebaſtian's coming aſhoar is fine, and if compar'd with that before of Ferdinand's Eſcape, deſcrib'd in the Tempeſt, wou'd ſhow the Fertility of the Author in his Variety on the ſame Subject: ——I know your Brother, moſt provident in Peril, &c. There are ſeveral fine Lines and Thoughts in the Scene betwixt Olivia and Viola. Nor muſt we omit the Duke's Advice to Viola, that a Man ſhou'd marry one younger than himſelf.

Olivia's Declaration of Love to Viola is very fine and pathetic: Cæſario, by the Roſes of the Spring, &c. There is in the Likeneſs of the Brother and Siſter, a Hint taken from the Menæchimi and Amphitryo of Plautus, as well as The Comedy of Errors.

The Argument of The Winter's Tale.

Polyxenes, King of Bohemia, having made a Viſit to Leontes, King of Sicily; Leontes being jealous that he had corrupted his Wife, employs Camillo to poiſon him; but he honeſtly informs Polyxenes of the matter, and flies away with him and his Train. On which Leontes confines her to Priſon, and cauſes her Daughter, of which ſhe is deliver'd in the the Goal, to be carry'd and expos'd by Antigonus, and ſhe try'd for her Life; but ſhe is clear'd by the Oracle of Apollo: And the King not giving ear to the Oracle, his Son and Heir immediately dies, and his Queen is likewiſe left for dead of Grief; he being ſtruck with this, is extremely penitent. Antigonus is caſt on the Coaſt of Bohemia, and there expoſing the Child with a Fardel full of Proof for her after Diſcovery, he is devour'd by a Bear, the Ship caſt away, and the Child taken up by a Shepherd, and bred up as his own. But at about ſixteen Years old, Florizel, the King's Son, flying his Hawk o'er her Father's Ground, ſees and falls in love with her, vows Marriage; but being by his Father diſcover'd, he flies with his Wife to Sicily, by the Advice of Camillo, and in the Ship the Shepherd and his Son; Polixenes goes after him with Camillo, and comes ſo near him, that he has no Time to marry; but the Shepherd being taken, ſhe is found to be the Daughter of Leontes, expos'd by Antigonus, and is ſo marry'd to Florizel; and her Mother being found to be alive, the Play, or Hiſtory, ends happily.

This Story needs no Critick, its Errors are viſible enough, Shakeſpear himſelf was ſenſible of this Groſſneſs of making the Play above ſixteen Years; and therefore brings in Time as a Chorus to the fourth Act, to excuſe the Abſurdity; to which I refer you. Polixenes on Art and Nature I muſt tranſcribe, becauſe it ſhews Shakeſpear's Notion, contrary to that of our Anti-Artiſts, ſuppos'd Art, and Nature conſiſtent.

Per. For I have heard it ſaid,
There is an Art, which in their Pideneſs ſhares
With great creating Nature.
Polix. Say there be:
Yet Nature is made better by no Mean,
But Nature makes that Mean: ſo over that Art,
(Which you ſay adds to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes. You ſee (ſweet Maid!) we marry
A gentler Cyon to the wildeſt Stock,
And make conceive a Bark of baſer kind
By Bud of nobler Race. This is an Art,
Which does mend Nature, change it rather; but
The Art it ſelf is Nature.

Which laſt Line holds perfectly true of the Art of Poetry.

The Narration of the Diſcovery in the laſt Act, is not only entertaining but moving, and he ſeems accidentally to have hit on ſomething like the Antients, whoſe Cataſtrophes were generally in Narration: And 'tis a Proof that if our Poets had the Genius of Shakeſpear, the ſhocking Repreſentations of the Stage might eaſily, and with Beauty, be thrown into Narration, and ſo leave room for the Poet to ſhew his Eloquence, and his Imagery.

This Tale is taken from an old Story-Book of Doraſtus and Faunia; whence I ſuppoſe the Abſurdities are copyed, and the making Bohemia of an Inland, a maritime Country.

I Come now to the hiſtorical Plays of Shakeſpear; which, with Submiſſion to the Writer of his Life, cannot be placed under Tragedy, becauſe they contain no Tragic Imitation. They are Draughts of the Lives of Princes brought into Dialogue; and in regard of their mixture of ſerious and comical Characters, may be compared to the Greek Pieces, that were wrote before Æſchylus and Sophocles had reformed the Stage of Athens; or the rambling unartful Pieces firſt repreſented in Rome, after the calling in of the Etrurian Players, nay, after the Time of Livius Andronicus. In their Extent they may be compar'd to the Theſeids, the Heracleids, written by ſome Greek Poets, and reflected on by Ariſtotle in his Art of Poetry, for imagining that the Unity of the Hero, made the Unity of the Action.

Theſe Inſtances from this polite Nation will be a very good Plea for this Error of Shakeſpear, who liv'd when the Stage was not regarded by the State as it was in Athens. For had a Reformation then begun, he wou'd doubtleſs have done as Monſieur Corneilla did upon the ſtudying the Art of the Stage; by which, the Plays which he wrote afterwards, excell'd thoſe he wrote without any Knowledge of that Art.

I ſhall only add here, that ſince theſe Plays are Hiſtories, there can be no manner of Fable or Deſign in them. I ſhall not therefore give the Plot, but refer the Reader to thoſe Hiſtorians, where he may find the Stories at large, and by them judge how near Shakeſpear has kept to the Character Hiſtory has given us of them. He begins with King John, whoſe Hiſtory you will find not only in the common Engliſh Chronicles, but alſo in Mr. Daniel, in Mr. Tyrel, and Mr. Echard; eſpecially in Mr. Tyrel in all its Extent and Particularities. But it muſt be remark'd, that he begins not the Hiſtory with the Birth of King John, or the Manner of his obtaining the Crown; but with the Breach betwixt him and France, on the behalf of Arthur the Son of Geoffry Plantagenet, the true Heir.

I had ſome Thoughts of placing an Abſtract of the Reigns of the Kings before each of his hiſtory Plays; but conſidering farther, I found that to make it of any uſe, they wou'd take up much more room than I cou'd by any means allow; and the Princes being all Engliſh, I find it might ſeem a little ſuperfluous; ſince that is what every Gentleman that is capable of reading this Poet, is very well acquainted with.

As

As for the Characters of this Hiſtory, I think there are none of any Figure but the Baſtard and Conſtance; they indeed engage your Attention when ever they enter. There is Boldneſs, Courage, Self-Aſſurance, Haughtineſs, and Fidelity, in whatever he ſays, or does. But here is the Misfortune of all the Characters of Plays of this Nature, that they are directed to no end, and therefore are of little uſe; for the Manners cannot be neceſſary, and by conſequence muſt loſe more than half their Beauty. The Violence, Grief, Rage, and Motherly Love and Deſpair of Conſtance, produce not one Incident, and are of no manner of uſe; whereas if there had been a juſt Deſign, a tragic Imitation of ſome one grave Action of juſt Extent, both theſe Characters being form'd by the Poet, muſt have had their Manners directed to that certain End, and the Production of theſe Incidents, which muſt beget that End.

There are too many good Lines in this Play for me to take notice or point to them all.

On new Titles.

For new made Honour doth forget Mens Names, &c.

The Deſcription which Chaſtillion makes of the Engliſh Army, that comes with King John, is very good, and a handſome Compliment of a Patriot to his Country. You will find it beginning thus ——His Marches are expedient to this Town, &c.——But I muſt not omit King John's firſt Speech to the French King, ſince it was ſo lately and ſo happily apply'd to the preſent Lewis, on the breaking off the Treaty of the Hague.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France in Peace permit
Our juſt and lineal Entrance to our own;
If not, bleed France, and Peace aſcend to Heaven:
Whilſt we, God's wrathful Agent, do correct
Their proud Contempt, that beats his Peace to Heaven.

The Scolding betwixt Elianar and Conſtance, is quite out of Character; and indeed 'tis a difficult matter to repreſent a Quarrel betwixt two Women, without falling into ſomething indecent for their Degree to ſpeak, as moſt of what is ſaid in this Scene is. For whatever the Ladies of Stocks-Market might do, Queens and Princeſſes can never be ſuppos'd to talk to one another at that rate. The Account which the French and Engliſh Heralds give of the Battle to the Town of Angiers, is very well worded; and it had been better we had heard more of the Battles, and ſeen leſs of thoſe ridiculous Repreſentations. The Citizens Propoſal of the Lady Blanch, &c. to the King's, contains many Lines worth reading and remarking, from this Line:

——If luſty Love ſhou'd go in Queſt of Beauty, &c.

There

There is a conſiderable Part of the ſecond Act loſt of this Piece, it containing only two Pages, which are ſo well adorn'd with the well drawn Paſſion of Conſtance, that we are oblig'd to Fortune that it is not loſt with the reſt. Her Paſſion in the firſt Scene of the third Act is likewiſe juſt and maſterly, and well worthy our peruſing with Care.

The Topic of Intereſt or Advantage is well handled in Falconbridge's Speech, beginning thus:

——Rounded in the Ear,
With that ſame Purpoſe-changer, that ſly Devil, &c.

Whatever Pandulph might really have urg'd to make a Breach betwixt the Kings, what Shakeſpear makes him ſpeak is perfectly the natural Reſult of the Notions and biggotted Opinions of thoſe Times. The Paſſion of Conſtance in the third Scene of the third Act, is extremely touching; among the reſt this one Line is admirable.

He talks to me, that never had a Son.

The pleading of Prince Arthur with Hubert, is very natural and moving, allowing for two or three playing on Words, which ſeems not ſo proper for that place. See Scene I. Act IV. Hubert's Deſcription of the Peoples Confuſion on the Prodigies, is very well.

Old Men and Beldames in the Streets do propheſy on it.

And King John's Anger with Hubert in the next Page, is well drawn, as the King's Madneſs is. The hearty Engliſhman appears ſo well in the laſt Speech of the Play, that I muſt point it out for ſome of the Gentlemen of this Age to ſtudy.

Remarks on the Life and Death of Richard II.

Shakeſpear has drawn Richard's Character according to the beſt Accounts of Hiſtory; that is, inſolent, proud, and thoughtleſs in Proſperity, and full of the Notion, that he cou'd not any way forfeit his Crown being the Lord's Anointed; the common Flattery by which Kings are perverted into Tyrants. But then he is poor, low, dejected, deſpairing on the appearance of Danger; in Diſtreſs always diſſembling Compliance in all things, but never ſincere in Performance when the Danger is over. There are, indeed, ſeveral things that look ſomething whimſical and extravagant, travagant, which yet are agreeable to what Hiſtory has ſaid of his Actions and Temper, in which our Poet has ever obſerv'd the Likeneſs.

The Topicks are not many in this Piece, but there are ſeveral Speeches, which are worth remarking, as that part of Bullinbrook's Speech which addreſſes to his Father, and Mowbray's on his Baniſhment.

The Impotence of mortal Power.

Gaunt. But not a Minute (King) that thou can'ſt give:
Shorten my Days thou can'ſt with ſudden Sorrow,
And pluck Nights from me, but not lend a Morrow.
Thou can'ſt help Time to furrow me with Age,
But ſtop no Wrinkle in this Pilgrimage.
Thy Word is current with him for my Death,
But dead, thy Kingdom cannot buy my Breath.

His Speech in the ſame Page is pathetic:

Things ſweet to taſte, &c.——

Richard's Account of Bullinbrook's cajoling the Mob:

——How he did ſeem to dive into their Hearts, &c.

Gaunt's Speeches to York and the King, before he dies, are very moral and good. And from York's Speech, we find that Italy was then, or at leaſt in the Poet's Time, as much in vogue with our Engliſh Gallants as France has been ſince for Faſhions, &c. And indeed Harry Stephens, a French-Man, who liv'd much about Shakeſpear's Time, by this Complaint, That the more a French-Man was Romaniz'd, or Italianiz'd, the ſooner he ſhould be promoted by the Great Men, as having beſtow'd his Time well, and as being a Man fit for Employment. Gaunt's Praiſe of England is noble, and worthy ſo great a Genius and ſo great a Poet. He thought the Name of a Trueborn Engliſhman was ſo far from contempt, like ſome of our modern Scriblers, that he makes Bullinbrook comfort himſelf in his Baniſhment with the Thought of being ſo. York's Speeches to the King on his ſeizing Gaunt's Eſtate, are dramatic enough.

On Hope.

I will deſpair, and be at Enmity
With couzening Hope, he is a Flatterer, &c.

Richard's

Richard's Speeches, Act 3. Scene 2. have in them ſome few Lines very good; and in many of his Speeches you will find ſomething of Paſſion that is not amiſs. What the Gardener ſays is not only very poetical, but ſhows that Shakeſpear was well acquainted with that Art, and perfect in the Terms. But the fineſt thing in this Play is the Deſcription that the Duke of York makes of Bullinbrook's and Richard's Entry into London:

——Then, as I ſaid, The Duke great Bullinbrook,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery Steed, &c.

This is worthy our Poets Study, that they may learn how to make beautiful Deſcriptions of what is fitter to employ their Eloquence in Narrations, than to be expos'd to the Eye. The Scene between Bullinbrook, York, Aumerle, and the Dutcheſs, is well; but it ſeems a little too forc'd in York to be ſo earneſt to have his only Son and Heir hang'd, when the King himſelf ſeems willing to pardon him. The Speech of the Dutcheſs is very well, beginning thus:

——Pleads he in earneſt? look upon his Face, &c.

The want of a regular Deſign brings in abundance of unneceſſary Characters, of no manner of Uſe and Beauty, as the Groom in the fifth Act of this Play.

There are ſome moral Reflections in Richard's Speech in Priſon. The ſame Chronicles and Hiſtories quoted to the former, will furniſh this King's Life.

Remarks on the firſt and ſecond Part of Henry IV.

THO the Humour of Falſtaff be what is moſt valuable in both theſe Parts, yet that is far more excellent in the firſt, for Sir John is not near ſo diverting in the ſecond Part. Hotſpur is the next in Goodneſs, but what wou'd have ſhewed much more had it been in a regular Tragedy, where the Manners had not only been neceſſary, but productive of Incidents noble and charming. Glendour is fine for Comedy. As for the Speeches, Reflections, &c. I ſhall point out the beſt. Hotſpur's Deſcription of the finical Courtier is very good; and moſt of the paſſionate Speeches of Hotſpur, except that ridiculous Rant of leaping up to the Moon, and diving to the bottom of the Sea, &c. which is abſolute Madneſs. Falſtaff's Speeches, when he perſonates the King, are very pleaſant. Worſter to Hotſpur contains ſome very judicious Reflections; and ſo there are

are ſome very politic in the Speech of King Henry to his Sons, and in all the Scene betwixt them. Sir R. Vernon's Speech is very pretty. Falſtaff's Account of his Men is very pleaſant. What I have to add on this firſt Part is only as to the Character of Falſtaff, in which I think my ſelf oblig'd to juſtify him in his Choice. Speaking of this Character, the Author of his Life tells us, That he once call'd him Sir John Oldcaſtle, but was oblig'd to alter that Name, ſome of the Family being then alive—But I don't know (ſays our Author) whether the Author may not have been ſomewhat to blame in his ſecond Choice; ſince it is certain, that Sir John Falſtaff, who was a Knight of the Garter, and a Lieutenant-General, was a Name of diſtinguiſh'd Merit in the Wars of France, in Henry V. and Henry VIth's Times. But to ſhew that Shakeſpear is not in the leaſt to blame in this Particular, we muſt conſider, that tho Hiſtory makes this Sir John Falſtaff a Man of Figure in the Army, and Knight of the Garter; yet that it is ſo far from making him a Man of Merit there, that his Cowardice loſt the Battle, and betray'd the brave Talbot, as Shakeſpear himſelf gives account to the King in Act 5. Scene 1. Part 1. of Henry VI. And ſuch a Cowardice ought to ſtigmatize any Character to all Poſterity, to deter Men from the like. So that in this poetic Juſtice, I think Shakeſpear ſo far from Blame, that he merits Applauſe.

The ſecond Part begins with a Speech of Rumour, deſcribing his own Nature from Experience and Fact. Virgil in the fourth Book of his Æneis, and Ovid in his Metamorphoſis, have deſcrib'd the ſame under the Name of Fame. The Reader therefore may compare the two Latin Bards with our Engliſh. The Rage of Northumberland on the Death of Hotſpur in ſome of the laſt Lines, is very well.

On Glory built on the Multitude.

An Habitation giddy and unſure
Has he, that buildeth on the vulgar Hart.
Oh! thou fond Many.

On the reſtleſs Cares of Kings, and Sleep.

How many thouſands of my pooreſt Subjects
Are at this Hour aſleep? Oh! Sleep! Oh gentle Sleep!
Nature's ſoft Nurſe! how have I frighted thee?

Weſtmorland's Speech to the Arch-biſhop of York, and the Rebels on Rebellion, is very good. Falſtaff's Defence of drinking is pleaſant. King Henry's Advice to Clarence is worth obſerving.

On Fortune.

Will Fortune never come with both Hands full?
But write her fair Words ſtill in fouleſt Letters, &c.

On a Crown.

Oh! poliſh'd Perturbation! golden Care!
Thou keep'ſt the Ports of Slumber open wide, &c.

On Gold.

For this the fooliſh over-careful Fathers
Have broke their Sleeps with Thought.

The Scene betwixt King Henry and his Son the Prince, to the end of fourth Act, is worth reading; as is the Chief Juſtice's Speech, in the ſecond Scene of the fifth Act.

For theſe two Plays conſult the ſame Engliſh Hiſtories, which are already quoted.

The Life of Henry V.

THE Prologue to this Play is as remarkable as any thing in Shakeſpear, and is a Proof that he was extremely ſenſible of the Abſurdity, which then poſſeſs'd the Stage, in bringing in whole Kingdoms, and Lives, and various Actions, in one Piece; for he apologizes for it, and deſires the Audience to perſuade their Imaginations to help him out, and promiſes a Chorus to help their Imagination.

For 'tis your Thoughts (ſays he) that now muſt deck our Kings,
Carry them here and there, jumping o'er Times;
Turning the Accompliſhments of many years
Into an Hour-Glaſs: for the which ſupply
Admit me Chorus to this Hiſtory.

He here, and in the foregoing Lines, expreſſes how prepoſterous it ſeem'd to him and unnatural, to huddle ſo many Actions, ſo many Places, and ſo many Years into one Play, one Stage, and two Hours. So that it is not to be doubted but that he wou'd have given us far more noble Plays, if he had had the good Fortune to have ſeen but any one regular Performance of this Nature. The Beauty of Order wou'd have ſtruck him immediately, mediately, and at once have made him more correct, and more excellent; and I do not at all doubt but that he wou'd have been the Sophocles of England, as he is now but little more than the Theſpis, or at moſt the Æſchylus. Tho Tragedy in Greece was founded on Religion, and came early under the Care of the Magiſtrate; yet by what I can diſcover, the Stage was as rude as ours, till Æſchylus gave it Majeſty. But in England it had no ſuch advantageous Foundation, nor any ſuch nouriſhing Influence; yet Shakeſpear by his own Genius brought it ſo far, as to leave it ſome Beauties, which have never ſince been equall'd.

The Character of Henry V. given by the Biſhop of Canterbury, is very noble. His Diſcourſe of the Salique Law, is a Proof, that Shakeſpear was well acquainted with the Hiſtory of modern Times, and that very Controverſy; which was an Argument of his Application to reading, and will not let me think, that having ſome Foundation of Latin, he ſhou'd totally neglect that.

Obedience and Order.

Therefore doth Heaven divide
The State of Man in divers Functions, &c.

The fine Deſcription of the State of the Bees is worth a careful Obſervation in this ſame Speech. The King's Anſwer to the French Ambaſſadors, on the Dauphine's Preſent, is not only fine, but ſhews that Shakeſpear underſtood Tennis very well, and was perfect in the Terms of the Art. The Chorus is forc'd to come in to fill up the Gap of Time, and help the Imagination of the Audience with a Narration of what is not repreſented. In this Chorus are a few Lines of good Moral to the Engliſh, and therefore I tranſcribe them.

O! England: Model to thy inward Greatneſs,
Like little Body with a mighty Heart:
What mightſt thou do, that Honour wou'd thee do,
Were all thy Children kind and natural?

King Henry Vth's Speech to Scroop, &c. from this Line, is very fine.

Oh! how haſt thou with Jealouſy infected
The Sweetneſs of Affiance——

The latter end of the Conſtable of France's Speech, and part of the French King's, is worth peruſing, as giving a noble Character of two Engliſh Kings; and Exeter's Anſwer to the French in the next Page, ſhews the Spirit of an Engliſh Nobleman. The Chorus is neceſſitated to come in again, to tell all that muſt be ſuppos'd to connect the Repreſentation before to that which follows. King Henry's Encouragement of his Men contains a great many fine Lines. Another Chorus begins the third Act, to help out the Lameneſs of the Repreſentation; and I wonder when Shakeſpear was ſenſible of the Abſurdity of the bringing a Battle on the Stage, he ſhou'd in ſome meaſure do it notwithſtanding.

Where O! (for Pity) we ſhall much diſgrace
With four or five moſt vile and ragged Foils
(Right ill-diſpos'd in Brawl ridiculous)
The Name of Agin-Court, &c.

A King but a Man.

——I think the King is but a Man, as I am. The Violet ſmells to him as it does to me, &c.——Tho the Diſcourſes of the King to Williams, &c. are very good, and full of Reaſon and Morality, yet contain they nothing Dramatic, and are indeed fitter for a Philoſopher, than a King.

On a King and Greatneſs.

Upon the King, &c.
Oh! hard Condition, twin-born with Greatneſs
Subject to the Breath of every Fool.

Of Ceremony.

And what art thou, thou Idol Ceremony? &c.

See Grandpree's Deſcription of the low Condition of the Engliſh Army. What I have already ſaid of Shakeſpear's being ſenſible of the Defect of theſe hiſtorical Repreſentations, is confirm'd plainly in the Chorus of the fifth Act.

I humbly pray them to admit th' excuſe
Of Time, of Numbers, and due Courſe of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper Life
Be here preſented.

He ſhows how ſenſible he is of this in the ſhort Chorus that ends this Play, ſaying,

Thus

Thus far with rough, and all-unable Pen,
Our bending Author hath purſued the Story,
In little Room confining mighty Men ;
Mangling by Starts the full Courſe of their Glory.

And indeed all that can be done in theſe Caſes, is only a Collection of ſo many Themes of different Snbjects: As in Burgundy's Speech, the Deſcription of Peace, and its Advantages.

The Character of Fluellen is extremely comical, and yet ſo very happily touch'd, that at the ſame time when he makes us laugh, he makes us value his Character. The Scene of Love betwixt Henry V. and Catherine, is extravagantly ſilly and unnatural; for why he ſhou'd not allow her to ſpeak in Engliſh, as well as all the other French I cannot imagine, ſince it adds no Beauty, but gives a patch'd and pye-bald Dialogue of no Beauty or Force.

The firſt and ſecond Parts of Henry VI.

THE Scene betwixt Talbot and the Counteſs of Auvergne contains ſomething pretty enough. In the Biſhop of Wincheſter he has perfectly drawn a haughty proud Church-Man, that prefers his own Ambition to all things divine and human; and in the King, a weak tho pious Prince. And indeed all the Parts ſhew the Confuſion of a Government under ſuch a Prince. The Speech of the Pucelle to the Duke of Burgundy, is very fine and artful. Talbot's Perſuaſion of his Son to leave the Field, and ſecure in himſelf the Hopes of the Family, and his Refuſal to leave his Father, is very pathetic. The Scene between Suffolk and Queen Margaret is full of natural Paſſion, and contains many fine Lines. The Praiſe of England, in the Lord Say's Speech to Jack Cade, is good.

On War.

——Oh! War! thou Son of Hell,
Whom angry Heavens do make their Miniſter, &c.

The frequent and calm Debates in Council, in many of theſe hiſtorical Pieces, have nothing dramatic in them, as in the firſt Part of Henry VI.

Remarks

Remarks on the third Part of Henry VI.

ALL the Scene between Henry, York, and the Peers, is ſhocking, and unworthy the Character of Noblemen and Soldiery, to inſult a Prince when in their Power; and tho we allow ſuch a thing might have been done in Fact, yet that is not ſufficient to bring it on the Stage, where Veriſimilitude prevails; whereas Truth, that is, Matter of Fact, is ſometimes ſo far from Probability, that a Man wou'd ſcarce think it poſſible. York's Paſſion is juſt. Richard's Simile, where he compares his Father's fighting to a Lion in a Herd of Neat, is very good. There are ſeveral Lines of Clifford's Speech very good. All theſe Skirmiſhes and Battles are ridiculous on the Stage, as Shakeſpear himſelf has ſaid in his Chorus before quoted; and yet he has ſcarce a Play without a great deal of Drums, and Trumpets, &c. Howe'er I think four or five Battles in this Play too much. In one he has taken occaſion to introduce King Henry VI. bemoaning the Miſery of Civil War, and what he ſays on this head is very well; and the Son bringing in his Father, whom he had kill'd in the Battle, not knowing him, and the Father his Son, gives him greater occaſion of moralizing. The ſame Fault of inſulting the Vanquiſh'd and even the Slain, is repeated.

The Mob.

Look, as I blow this Feather from my Face,
And as the Air blows it to me again.

The long Soliloquy of Richard in the third Act, is highly unnatural; for as the Duke of Buckingham juſtly has obſerv'd, they ought to be few and ſhort. Nor wou'd this, which is ſo frequent in our Poet, be borne from the beſt Hand, that cou'd now ariſe: but there is always by the Many a bigotted deference paid to our Predeceſſors; and Years add Authority to a Name. Our young Poets ſhou'd never imitate our Shakeſpear in this: for tho a Man may be ſuppos'd to ſpeak a few Words to himſelf in the Vehemence of a Paſſion, as it does happen in Nature, of which the Drama is in all its Parts an Imitation; yet to have near fourſcore Lines of calm Reflections, nay Narrations to my ſelf, by which the Hearer ſhou'd diſcover my Thoughts and my Perſon, as here, and before when Henry VI. is diſcover'd and taken, is unpardonable, becauſe againſt Nature, and by conſequence not at all according to Art. There are ſeveral good Lines in this Speech of Richard, but ill brought in. The Inſtances ſtances which Shakeſpear makes him give of Neſtor, Ulyſſes, and Sinon, are a Proof ſtill of his Knowledge at leaſt in Ovid, and ſome other of the Latin Claſſics. The ill Omens given by Henry VI. of Richard's Death, are poetical enough.

Remarks on the Life and Death of Richard III. and Henry VIII.

THE firſt of theſe Plays begins with a long Soliloquy of Richard's, of forty or fifty Lines, to let the Audience know what Contrivances he had made for the Deſtruction of Clarence, and what a Villain he intended to be. But Richard as he is here drawn, is not a fit Character for the Stage, being ſhocking in all he does; and we think (notwithſtanding the huddling ſo much time into two Hours) that Providence is too ſlow and too mild in his Puniſhment. The Antients have indeed introduc'd an Atreus and Thyeſtes, a Medea, &c. but the Cruelties committed by them have been the ſudden Effects of Anger and Revenge: but Richard is a calm Villain, and does his Murders deliberately, wading thro a Sea of his neareſt Relations Blood to the Crown.

The ſecond Scene, betwixt the Lady Anne and Richard, is admirably written: and tho we cannot entirely agree with her in her yielding to the Murderer of her Husband, and Father-in-law; yet we allow that the Poet has made her ſpeak all that the Subject and Occaſion wou'd allow. Clarence's Dream is poetical and natural.

Conſcience.

2 Vil. I will not meddle with it, it makes a Man a Coward, &c. Edward's Speech is pathetic enough. And the Queen's Paſſion on King Edward's Death is juſt and natural.

On the momentary Grace and Favour of Men.

Oh! momentary Grace of mortal Men!
Which we more hunt for, than the Grace of God, &c.

Buckingham's Account of his negotiating with the Citizens is well enough.

On Words in Grief.

Windy Attorneys to their Clients Woes;
Airy Succeeders of inteſtine Joys, &c.

Againſt Conſcience.

For Conſcience is a Word that Cowards uſe,
Devis'd at firſt to keep the Strong in awe.

The Prologue to Henry VIII. ſhows that Shakeſpear thought more juſtly of the Stage than he perform'd; perhaps in mere compliance with what then pleas'd the Audience, never conſidering that his Authority wou'd have refin'd their Taſtes. After having told us, that this Play wou'd move Pity, contain'd Truth, and was not deſtitute of Show; he goes on,

——Only they
That come here to hear a merry, bawdy Play,
A Noiſe of Targets; or to ſee a Fellow
In a long motley Coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd: For, gentle Hearers, know
To rank our choſen Truths with ſuch a ſhow
As Fool and Fight is, beſides forfeiting
Our own Brains, and the Opinion that we bring,
That makes that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an Underſtanding Friend.

And indeed the Managers of our Stage have been all along afraid of reforming the Stage, leſt they ſhould run any hazard of a bad Audience, by giving them ſomething more noble, than they had known. And this has ſupported Barbariſm and Bawdy ſo long, where Art and true Wit ſhould reſide.

On Faſhions.

——New Cuſtoms,
Tho they be never ſo ridiculous,
Nay let them be unmanly, yet are follow'd, &c.

What Lovel ſays will hold good of the Ladies of our Times:

——A French Song, and a Fiddle, has no Fellow.

Now
*

Now indeed Italian has got the ſtart of the Monſieur, but much of the ſame Excellence. Shakeſpear in all probability wrote this Play to compliment Queen Elizabeth; at leaſt 'tis plain that he has taken every Opportunity of the Story to inſert her Praiſes: as the Lord Chamberlain having brought Ann Bullen news of her being made Marchioneſs of Pembroke, ſays,

——I have perus'd her well,
Beauty and Honour in her are ſo mingled,
That they have caught the King: And who knows yet,
But from this Lady may proceed a Gem,
To lighten all this Iſle!

The ſame is again hinted, which is compleated by the Prophecy of Archbiſhop Cranmer, which concludes the Play. To which he there adds a praiſe of James the firſt, as the Effect and Reward of her Merits.

Queen Catherine's Speeches are good, for they are the natural reſult of the Manners and Sentiments; as all that ſhe ſays to Campeius and Wolſey in the third Act is very pathetic, and agreeable to a Lady of her Spirit in her Condition. Norfolk's Deſcription of the Cardinal's diſcompoſure is good. The Scene betwixt Norfolk, Surrey, and Wolſey, is dramatic, and that which follows betwixt Cromwel and Wolſey very moving.

The State of Man.

This is the State of Man: to day he puts forth
The tender Leaves of Hopes; to morrow bloſſoms,
And wears his bluſhing Honours thick upon him.
The third day comes a Froſt, a killing Froſt;
And when he thinks, good eaſy Man, full ſurely
His Greatneſs is a ripening, nips his Root,
And then he falls as I do, &c.

Ambition.

Cromwel, I charge thee, fling away Ambition,
By that Sin fell the Angels: how can Man then,
The Image of his Maker, hope to win by't?

The two different Characters of Wolſey, by Queen Catherine, and Griffith, are worth peruſing.

This concludes the Engliſh hiſtorical Plays: tho the reſt are indeed little better, yet they generally are within a narrower Compaſs of Time, and take in fewer Actions. Tho when they exceed the Unities, I ſee no Reaſon

why they may not as well, and with as good Reaſon, ſtretch the Time to five thouſand Years, and the Actions to all the Nations and People of the Univerſe: and as there has been a Puppet-Show of the Creation of the World, ſo there may be a Play call'd the Hiſtory of the World.

Remarks on the Tragedies of SHAKESPEAR.

The Argument of Troilus and Creſſida.

TROY having been long beſieg'd, Achilles is by Polyxena kept from the Field, for he was in love with her. Antenor is taken Priſoner, and in exchange for him, Creſſida Daughter to Chalchas, is given to Diomede by the Trojans. Troilus, who is in love with her, and firſt poſſeſs'd of her by the Care of Pandarus her Uncle, parts with her not without the utmoſt Reluctance, they having vow'd Conſtancy to each other. Hector being to fight Ajax during the Truce, Troilus goes with him; and after the Fight gets Ulyſſes to go privately with him to the Tent of Chalchas, where he diſcovers her Falſhood to him, and Love to Diomede. The Truce ending, the Battle is renew'd; and Patroclus being kill'd, Achilles comes out and kills Hector: and Troilus and Diomede both fighting after in vain, the Play ends with the Death of Hector by Achilles, and his Myrmidons.

This Play is alter'd by Mr. Dryden, and tho clear'd of ſome Errors, is far from a Play, even according to the Rules laid down by Mr. Dryden before this very Play, as he indeed confeſſes; but to alter a Play and leave the fundamental Errors of Plot and Manners, is a very whimſical Undertaking. Shakeſpear is to be excus'd in his falſifying the Character of Achilles, making him and Ajax perfect Idiots, tho ſometimes Achilles talks like a nice Reaſoner, as with Ulyſſes; ſo making the Manners unequal as well as unlike: I ſay, Shakeſpear is excuſable in this, becauſe he follow'd Lollius, or rather Chaucer's Tranſlation of him. But Mr. Dryden, who had Homer to guide him right in this particular, is unpardonable. Thus Achilles is made to abſent himſelf from the Field for the ſake of Polyxena: Whereas the receiv'd Story is, that it was upon the Quarrel betwixt Agamemnon and him for taking away Briſeis. But I know not on what account both the Poets ſeem fonder of the Barbarians than the Greeks, of arbitrary Power than Liberty, Ignorance than Learning. I know not but the Reaſon which gave Virgil the Trojan for his Hero, is that which has made our Bards ſo indulgent to the ſame ſide, viz. a Notion that the Trojans were the Source of our two Nations, tho with much leſs Reaſon and Probability on our ſide, than on that of the Romans.

I wonder Mr. Dryden continued the Error of Shakeſpear in making Creſſida a Harlot. Her Character is too ſcandalous to draw our Pity, and therefore he ſhou'd have made her virtuous, and not of blaſted Honour: Yet it muſt be acknowledg'd, that Mr. Dryden has corrected the Diction, and added a conſiderable Beauty in that Scene, betwixt Hector and Troilus, upon the Surrender of Creſſida, with whom he ſeems to part in the original with too ſmall Reluctance. Mr. Dryden himſelf tells us, that he took the Hint of that Scene from that in Euripides between Agamemnon and Menelaus, which I ſhall give the Reader in my Remarks on Julius Cæſar, that he may compare it with that of Shakeſpear, and this of Mr. Dryden, from whom I muſt a little diſſent in the Occaſion; for the Ground of the Quarrel in the Greek, is ſtronger than either Mr. Dryden's, or Shakeſpear's. For the Glory and Honour of Greece depends on that of Euripides, but I can't find the Liberty of Rome much intereſted in that of Brutus and Caſſius. But more of this when I come to that Play.

I am ſomething of Mr. Dryden's mind, that this was one of his earlieſt Plays, both for the Manners and Diction, which are both more faulty than uſually in any of his later Tragedies. There are, notwithſtanding what I have ſaid, a great many fine Lines in this Piece worth the remarking, as the very firſt Lines.

Call here, my Varlet, I'll unarm again.
Why ſhould I war without the Walls of Troy,
That find ſuch cruel Battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is Maſter of his Heart,
Let him to Field; Troilus alas has none!

The ſeveral Pauſes, &c. in the following Lines.

Troi. The Greeks are ſtrong, and ſkilful to their Strength,
Fierce to their Skill, and to their Fierceneſs valiant;
But I am weaker than a Woman's Tear,
Tamer than Sleep, fonder than Ignorance,
Leſs valiant than a Virgin in the Night,
And ſkilleſs as unpractis'd Infancy.

That Women are beſt when they are courted and not won.— The Fate of Grumblers, or Contemners of the ſupreme Rule or Governour.— Two ſhort but paſſionate Speeches of Troilus: the firſt begins, O! Pandarus, I ſtalk about her Door, &c. The ſecond,—Even ſuch a Paſſion doth embrace my Boſom, &c.

Pride cures Pride.

—Pride has no other Glaſs
To ſhow it ſelf but Pride. For ſupple Knees
Feed Arrogance, and are the proud Man's Fees.

Fallen Greatneſs.

'Tis certain, Greatneſs once fall'n out with Fortune,
Muſt fall out with Men too.

Great Actions forgot unleſs continued.

Time has, my Lord, a Wallet at his Back,
Wherein he puts Alms for Oblivion.

The Diſcovery of her Departure to her by Troilus is as finely expreſs'd,

I love thee with ſo ſtrange a Purity, &c.

The Cautions he gives her againſt the Grecian Youth, are not amiſs.

The Grecian Youths are full of ſubtle Qualities. —Ulyſſes gives a very good Deſcription of a laſcivious Woman.

There's Language in her Eye, her Cheek, her Lip.

And his Character of Troilus is not leſs lively and beautiful.

——Not yet mature, yet matchleſs.

The Argument of Coriolanus.

CAIUS Martius going to the Wars againſt the Volſcians, takes Corioli, and beats Tullus Auffidius, and has the Glory of the War attributed to him by the Conſul. On this he is to ſue for the Conſulſhip, which he diſdains a great while; but at laſt ſubmitting, he does it aukwardly, and almoſt burſting with Diſdain and Pride. This makes him loſe the Conſulſhip; and on the Tribunes of the People having Words with him, he rails ſo at the Commons and the Tribunes, that he is accus'd as a Traitor, and at laſt baniſh'd. He goes over to the Volſcians, and heads their Forces againſt Rome not yet prepar'd to receive him: Cominius firſt, and Menenius next, go to intreat him, but he proves inexorable, till his Mother, Wife, Son, Valeria, &c. prevail, and he makes Peace betwixt the Romans and Volſcians. Auffidius on his return to Antium accuſes him of Treaſon, and with the Conſpirators ſtabs, and kills him.

The Character of Martius is truly dramatic, for his Manners are not only equal, but neceſſary to his Misfortunes. His Pride and Raſhneſs are what what Hiſtory gives him; but his Modeſty and Averſion to Praiſe I cannot find in Plutarch, who makes him very well ſatisfy'd with the Praiſe given by Cominius. And indeed it ſeems ſomething oppoſite to his Pride, which both in the Play and Hiſtory was ſo ſignal in him. Our Poet ſeems fond to lay the Blame on the People, and every where is repreſenting the Inconſtancy of the People: but this is contrary to Truth; for the People have never diſcover'd that Changeableneſs, which Princes have done. And Plutarch, in the Life of Pyrrhus, ſeems ſenſible of this, when he ſays—— Thus Kings have no Reaſon to condemn the People for changing for their Intereſt, who in that do but imitate them, as the great Teachers of Unfaithfulneſs and Treachery, holding him the braveſt, who makes the leaſt Account of being an honeſt Man. And any one that will look over the Roman Hiſtory, will find ſuch Inconſtancy, and ſuch a perpetual Changeableneſs in the Emperors, as cannot be parallel'd in the People of any Time, or Country. What the Greeks or Romans have ever done againſt any of their fortunate or great Generals, is eaſily vindicated from a guilty Inconſtancy, and Ingratitude. For the Fault has always been in the great Men, who ſwelling in the Pride of their Succeſs, have thought in deference to that, that they might and ought to do whatever they pleas'd; and ſo often attempted the Ruin of that Liberty themſelves, for the Preſervation of which their warlike Actions were only valuable. And ſo it was their changing their Manners, and not the People, that produc'd their Misfortunes; they lov'd them for defending their Country and Liberties, but by the ſame Principle muſt hate them when they ſought by their Ambition and Pride to ſubvert them, and this by a Conſtancy, not Variableneſs of Principle, or Temper.

This is plain in the very Story of this Play; for their Anger was juſt againſt Coriolanus, who thought ſo well of his own Actions, as to believe that even the Rights, Cuſtoms, and Privileges of his Country were his due for his Valour and Succeſs. His turning a Traytor to his Country on his Diſgrace, is a proof of his Principle. Camillus on the contrary, baniſh'd on far leſs Occaſion or Ground, brought his Country in Diſtreſs, Relief againſt the Gauls; ſo far was he from joining them.

This Contempt of the People often proceeds from an over-value of our ſelves, and that not for our ſuperior Knowledge, Virtue, Wiſdom, &c. but for the good Fortune of our Birth, which is a Trifle no farther valuable in truth, than as it is join'd to Courage, Wiſdom or Honour; yet that, when blindly valu'd by the Poſſeſſor, ſets aſide all Thoughts and Endeavours to obtain thoſe nobler Advantages.

Our Engliſh Poets indeed, to flatter arbitrary Power, have too often imitated Shakeſpear in this particular, and prepoſterouſly brought the Mob on the Stage, contrary to the Majeſty of Tragedy, and the Truth of the Fact. Shakeſpear has here repreſented, as in Julius Cæſar, the Commons of Rome, as if they were the Rabble of an Iriſh Village, as ſenſeleſs, leſs, ignorant, ſilly and cowardly; not remembring that the Citizens of Rome were the Soldiers of the Commonwealth, by whom they conquer'd the World; and who, in Julius Cæſar's Time, were at leaſt as polite as our Citizens of London: and yet if he had but conſulted them, he wou'd have found it a difficult matter to have pick'd out ſuch ignorant unlick'd Cubs, to have fill'd up his Rout.

It is no hard matter to prove that the People were never in the wrong but once, and then they were biaſs'd by the Prieſts to chuſe Barabbas, and cry out Crucify.

I have not room here to examine this Point with that Clearneſs that I might, nor is it ſo much to our preſent Purpoſe; and yet I preſume the Digreſſion is not ſo foreign to the Matter, as to deſerve a judicious Cenſure.

The Character of Martius is generally preſerv'd, and that Love of their Country, which is almoſt peculiar to Rome and Greece, ſhown in the principal Perſons. The Scene of the Mother, Wife, and Valeria, is moving and noble. There are a great many fine Lines in this Play, tho the Expreſſion or Diction is ſometimes obſcure, and puffy. That of the Citizens is very juſt on all proud Men.

——And cou'd be content to give him good Report for't,
But that he pays himſelf with being proud.

The Fable that Menenius tells the People, tho in Hiſtory, is very well brought in here, and expreſs'd.

Honour ill founded upon the People.

He that depends upon your Favours, ſwims with Fins of Lead. You may look in the beginning of this Speech in the foregoing Page. The noble Spirit of Volumnia is well expreſs'd in her Speech, and in all that Scene, where the Character is admirably diſtinguiſh'd from Virgilia and Valeria. The Speech of Coriolanus to the Soldiers is good; beginning,

——If any ſuch be here
(As it were Sin to doubt) that love this Painting, &c.

The Diſcourſe betwixt the two Officers in the Capitol is worth reading, on the head of Popularity.

Againſt Cuſtom.

Cuſtom calls me to it.

In

In the Scene betwixt the Tribunes and Martius, the haughty Pride, and insolent and virulent Temper of Coriolanus, is justly painted.

Menenius is drawn an old humorous Senator, and indeed he talks like one in defence of the Pride and Outrage of his Friend; and the next page, when he asks what he has done against Rome, &c. when it is plain he was against the Rights of the Commons, as essential to the Government as the Nobles, perhaps more if that State be thorowly consider'd. Volumnia's Speech to her Son is not amiss. And that of Coriolanus is well expres'd.

——Away my Disposition, and possess me,
Some Hurlot's Spirit, &c.

The Thoughts are not only pretty, but very natural to his Pride on this Occasion.

On the Turns of rhe World.

Oh World! thy slippery Turns! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double Bosoms seem to wear one Heart, &c.

For the Life and Character of this Man, you may read Plutarch's Lives, Dion. Halicarn.

The Argument of Titus Andronicus.

ON the Death of some Emperor, his Sons Saturninus and Bassianus stand Candidates for the Empire. But Titus Andronicus returning from the Wars against the Goths in Triumph, brings Tamora Queen of the Goths, Chiron, Demetrius, and Alarbus her Sons, &c. He gives the Empire to Saturninus the eldest, and Lavinia for his Wife, as well as all his Prisoners for a Gift; Bassianus seizes Lavinia as his Spouse, and bears her off. Titus kills his Son Mutius for stopping him in the pursuit of her. The Emperor falling in love with Tamora, marries her, and Bassianus Lavinia. But Chiron and Demetrius being both in love with her, quarrel who shall have her; till Aaron a Negro Favourite of the Empress reconciles them, advises them to murder her Husband in the Chase, and ravish her by turns, cutting off her Hands and Tongue; to which the Mother agrees, resolv'd to ruin the whole Family, in revenge of her Son Alarbus's Death by the Andronici, at their Brother's Tomb. They execute their Design, and having thrown the Body of Bassianus into a Pit, Aaron trains two of Titus's Sons to the Place, where they falling in, the Emperor is brought to find them; and ſo the Murder, by a Letter, &c. being put on them, they are order'd to be try'd, are condemn'd, and put to death for the Murder. Lavinia in the mean while is found in that Condition by her Uncle Marcus, carry'd home, and by the help of Ovid's Metamorphoſis, and an Arrow writing in the Sand, diſcovers her Husband's Murderers, and her Raviſhers. Aaron before the Death of the Brothers comes to Titus, and gets his Hand to redeem his Sons Life, and has their Heads brought to him ſoon after. Lucius, the only ſurviving Son, is baniſh'd for endeavouring to reſcue his Brothers; he goes to the Goths, and brings them againſt Rome to revenge the Wrongs of his Houſe, having taken the Moor in his march with the black Baſtard he had by the Empreſs, to ſave whoſe Life he diſcovers all the Villanies done by them. On the News of the Approach of the Goths with Lucius at their head, Tamora undertakes to wheedle old Titus to pacify his Son, &c. ſo diſguiſing her ſelf like Revenge, and her two Sons like Murder and Rape, ſhe goes to him; he knows them, and complies ſo far, that he will ſend for Lucius, provided ſhe and the Emperor meet him at his Houſe; and he ſtops Chiron and Demetrius, kills them and bakes them in a Pye, of which the Mother eats: then Titus kills his Daughter Lavinia, upon the Emperor's ſaying, that Virginius did well in doing ſo; then he ſtabs the Empreſs, and the Emperor him, and Lucius the Emperor: and having declar'd all the Matter to the People, he is choſen Emperor, the Moor condemn'd to be bury'd alive, and ſo the bloody butchering Play concludes.

As this Play is not founded in any one particular on the Roman Hiſtory, tho palm'd upon Rome, ſo the whole is ſo very ſhocking, that if there be any Beauties in the Diction, I cou'd not find them, or at leaſt they are very faint and very few. I can eaſily believe what has been ſaid, that this is none of Shakeſpear's Play, that he only introduc'd it and gave it ſome few Touches. Such Devils incarnate are not fit for the Drama: the Moor deſcribes himſelf a degree more abandon'd than the Devil himſelf; and Tamora, when Lavinia is ſeiz'd, and Baſſianus kill'd, ſhows her ſelf not much better. This is ſo contrary to Nature and Art, that all the Crimes are monſtrouſly beyond the very Name of ſcandalous. Well might Rapin throw the Infamy of Barbarity upon us, as a People divided from the reſt of the World, and wanting that Politeneſs and Civility, becauſe we lov'd Blood in our Recreations. But I think this only the Fault of the Poets, who have been too ignorant or too cowardly to venture on a Reformation of an Abuſe, which prevail'd thro the Miſtake of the firſt Attempts this way, ſuppoſing that Tragedy muſt be ſomething very barbarous and cruel; and this falſe Notion has ever ſince fill'd the Scene with inhuman Villanies that ought to be ſeen no where but at Tyburn, nay worſe than ever ſuffer'd in this Climate, which brings forth Men too brave to be guilty of ſuch Inhumanities, and cannot therefore be pleas'd with them in the Repreſentation; at leaſt wou'd be much better pleas'd with the contrary Practice, according to the Antients.

in

The Argument of Romeo and Juliet.

THE Montagues and Capulets, two eminent Families of Verona, being at mortal Odds, Romeo, the Son and Heir of Montague, falls in love with Juliet the Heireſs of the Capulets at a Mask, and ſhe with him. They agree, and are marry'd privately at Fryer Laurence's Cell. After which, Tibalt, a hot fiery Capulet, meets Romeo in the Street, and wou'd needs quarrel with him; but Romeo, in regard of his having juſt marry'd his Couſin, took all ſo patiently, that Mercutio the Prince of Verona's Relation cou'd not bear Tybalt's Inſolence, ſo fighting him is kill'd; and Romeo on this, Tybalt returning, fights and kills him, and makes his eſcape to the Fryer's Cell. The Prince hearing the Caſe from Benvolio, condemns Romeo to Baniſhment on pain of Death; when having paſt the Night with his Wife, by the help of a Ladder of Cords, he goes to Mantua, the Fryer having agreed to ſend him News perpetually of his Wife. But Count Paris having been in love with Juliet, preſſes her Father to marry her out of hand, and obtains his Suit. She to prevent it takes a Potion, that ſhou'd make her ſeem dead, and ſhe was bury'd in the Monument of the Family. Romeo hearing of her Death, buys Poiſon, and comes by Night to Verona, and going to her Monument to take it and die there with her, finds Count Paris, who forces him to fight, and is kill'd by him: but then Romeo enters the Monument, takes his Poiſon, and dies; the Fryer comes, and Juliet awakes, finds Romeo dead, and ſo ſtabs her ſelf and dies. The Prince and both the Fathers being come, the Fryer and Romeo's Man, and Paris's Page, make a full Diſcovery of the whole; ſo the two Fathers are reconcil'd, and reſolve to ſet up Statues to them both.

Tho this Play has no leſs than five or ſix Murders, yet they are nothing a-kin to thoſe of the foregoing Piece; theſe for the moſt part are the effect of Heat and Paſſion, and by way of Duels, which Cuſtom has given a ſort of Reputation to, as being upon the Square. If therefore they are faulty, they yet are of that Nature that we pity, becauſe every Gentleman is liable to fall into that by the Neceſſity of Cuſtom. Tho this Fable is far from Dramatic Perfection, yet it undeniably raiſes Compaſſion in the later Scenes.

There are in it many Beauties of the Manners, Sentiments, and Diction. The Character of Mercutio is pleaſant and uniform; that of Tybalt always equal, as indeed they all are: the Nurſe is a true Comic Character, tho ſome of our Chit-chat Poets wou'd look on it as Farce, or low Comedy. In Benvolio's Account of Romeo to his Father and Mother, are many fine, muſical, and ſounding Lines.

Love.

Love, is a Smoak made of the Fume of Sighs;
Being purg'd, a Fire ſparkling in Lovers Eyes;
Being vext, a Sea nouriſh'd with loving Tears;
What is it elſe? A Madneſs moſt diſcreet,
A choaking Gall, and a preſerving Sweet.

To point to particular Lines wou'd be endleſs; for there often comes a fine ſounding Verſe well expreſs'd, in the midſt of others of little or no Beauty. Mercutio's Harangue on Dreams is extremely pleaſant and whimſical, and the latter end very good Satire.

Of Dreams.

——True, I talk of Dreams,
Which are the Children of an idle Brain,
Begot of nothing, but vain Phantaſy,
Which is as thin a Subſtance, as the Air,
And more inconſtant than the Wind, who wooes
Even now the frozen Boſom of the North.

What Romeo ſays on his firſt ſeeing Juliet is very pretty.

Her Beauty hangs upon the Cheek of Night;
Like a rich Jewel in an Æthiop's Ear.

Whether Paſſion be ſo pregnant of Similies as Romeo and Juliet every where give us, I dare not determine; ſince to ſay that all they ſpeak is not natural, wou'd be to provoke too many who admire it as the Soul of Love.

Mercutio's conjuring for Romeo is pleaſant, tho it ends a little too ſmutty for an Audience. It begins, Romeo, Humour, Paſſion, Madman, Lover, &c. The Scene betwixt Romeo and Juliet, when he is in the Garden, and ſhe at her Window, tho it contains many things that will not join with Probability, and tho perhaps Shakeſpear like Cowley was a little corrupted by reading Petrarch, that modern Debaucher of Poetry into Conceits and Conundrums; yet the Fancy is every where ſo fine, and Nature ſo agreeably painted, that we are pleas'd with the very Fucus, and perſuade our ſelves that it is pure, unſophiſticated Nature. And on the Earth

Earth and its Products the Fryer ſpeaks well. And what he ſays to Romeo on early Riſing is pretty enough. The Soliloquy of Juliet contains ſeveral good Lines; as

——Love's Heralds ſhou'd be Thoughts,
Which ten times faſter glide than the Sun's Beams.

Againſt violent Delights.

Theſe violent Delights have violent Ends,
And in their Triumph die like Fire and Powder,
Which, as they kiſs, conſume.

There are likewiſe a great many fine Lines in Juliet's Soliloquy; but her Thought of cutting him out into little Stars is ridiculous. The Parting of Romeo and Juliet is very pretty. The Fryer's Comfort to the Father and Lover in their clamorous Sorrow for the ſuppos'd Death of Juliet, is not amiſs.

Romeo's Deſcription of the poor Apothecary, and his Shop, is excellent, and copy'd by Otway. This Story is taken out of Bandello's Novels.

The Argument of Timon of Athens.

Timon, a Nobleman of Athens of a vaſt Eſtate and Riches, by his Bounty brings himſelf to want, tries his Friends, who forſake him in his Diſtreſs, and deny him the Money he deſires to borrow of them. This makes him ſo wild, that he leaves Athens, and retires to a Wood, where he turns Man-hater; but digging accidentally for Roots, finds a hidden Treaſure, of which he gives Alcibiades, and his Whores great Store: This brings ſeveral to him to make their Court, in hopes of his ſhining again; but he deſpiſing all, gives only Money to his faithful Steward, who came to do him ſervice in his Diſtreſs. The Senators come to make him Offers and Places to appeaſe Alcibiades, but he refuſes all, with Curſes on Mankind: And dying, leaves his Epitaph in theſe Words——

Here lies a wretched Coarſe, of wretched Life bereft,
Seek not my Name; a Plague conſume you, Caitiffs left.
Here lie I Timon, who all living Men did hate;
Paſs by, and curſe thy fill, but ſtay not here thy Gate.

This Play is plainly taken from Lucian's Timon, and I wonder that Shakespear rather chose to give Roman Names to his Persons, as Lucius, Lucullus, &c. than Gnathonides, Philiades, Demeas a flattering Orator, from whence our Author seems to have taken his Poet; Thrasycles, a Philosopher, but not of Apemantus's kind, but a Lover of Money, or rather a Hypocrite; Blapsius, Laches, Gniphon. Apemantus is indeed Shakespear's own, and much better for the end he introduces him than Thrasycles cou'd have been, tho the latter is better in Lucian. Shakespear has thrown the Infamy on the Poet, which Lucian threw on the Orator; not considering, that Poets made another sort of Figure in Athens, where the Scene lies, than they do in England; the State thinking them so useful to the Public, that on the Death of Eupolis in a Sea-Fight, all Poets were for the future forbid to go to the War. Yet a Poet methinks shou'd have more regard to his Art and himself, than to bring in a Character of one mean or ridiculous. But Mr. Shadwell, who has pretended to alter this Play, has made him a very Scoundrel; and the Players always take care in Dress and Action to make him more so.

But this is not the only thing in which Mr. Shadwell has made this Poem worse in the Copy or Amendments, than it is in the Original. He has created two Ladies of his own, with a very odd Design. Melissa he makes a Woman of Quality and Honour, but has given her Qualities more abandon'd than a Prostitute; and Evandra is a Whore profess'd, but to her he has given Gratitude, Love, and Fidelity, even to the forsaking of the World to bear the Hardships of Timon's Miseries, to persuade the Town that a Whore is a more eligible and excellent Creature than a Woman of Honour. Such Doctrines as these have rais'd so many Enemies to the Stage with too much Reason and Justice. For in them indeed the Stage has lost all its Beauty and Greatness; nay, and all its Art and Genius, it being so easy a matter to please at the Expence of Religion and Morality, but so hard to do it on the solid Grounds of Art, which are subservient to Virtue, and I may say an Assistant of Religion, in purging and reforming the Manners.

It is plain that the Plot is not regular as to Time or Place, but the Action may be look'd on as pretty uniform, unless we wou'd make the Banishment and Return of Alcibiades an under-Plot, which yet seems to be born of the main Design.

The Play is full of moral Reflections and useful Satire. The Characters are well mark'd and observ'd, and the Diction generally speaking expressive.

On Ceremony or Complement.

——Ceremony was but devis'd at first
To set a Gloss on faint Deeds, hollow Welcomes, &c.

The

The Glory of this Life.

Like Madneſs is the Glory of this Life, &c.

The Trying and Refuſal of the Friends is very touching, and too natural and obvious to need a Comment; a Hint of this is in the latter end of Lucian's Dialogue of Timon.

Againſt Duelling.

Your Words have took ſuch Pains, as if they labour'd
To bring Manſlaughter into Form, and ſet Quarrelling
Upon the Head of Valour.

Nor is Alcibiades's Anſwer much amiſs.

The falſe Supper Timon invites his falſe Friends to, is all Shakeſpear's Contrivance. Timon's Curſes on Athens in the beginning of the fourth Act, are worthy his Rage and Paſſion.

Let me look back on thee, O thou Wall,
That girdles in thoſe Wolves——

The parting of the Servants is ſomething touching. Timon's Speech, tho diſguis'd too much in affected Words, contains good ſatirical Reflections.

On Gold.

——Thus much of this will make
Black, White; Foul, Fair; Wrong, Right;
Baſe, Noble; Old, Young; Cowards, Valiant, &c.

The Scene betwixt him, Alcibiades, Timandra, &c. is full of wholeſome Satire againſt Whoring. And the Speech of Timon, after they are gone out, is very moral. The Scene betwixt Timon and Apamantus contains many fine Reflections and Lines, the whole being very Dramatic.

Gold.

What a God's Gold, that he is worſhipp'd
In a baſer Temple, than where Swine feed?
'Tis thou, that rigg'ſt the Bark, and plow'ſt the Foam,
Settleſt admired Reverence in a Slave, &c.

In ſhort, the Scenes betwixt him and his Steward, and the Senators and him, are worth reading. The Epitaph ſeems to be taken from this,

Hic jaceo, vitâ miſerâque inopique ſolutus;
Nomen ne quæras, ſed male, tute, peri.

The Argument of Julius Cæſar.

Caius Julius Cæſar having now vanquiſh'd all his Enemies, and fix'd himſelf in the perpetual Dictatorſhip, the Party of Liberty conſpir'd to diſpatch him; Caius Caſſius, Metellus Cimber, Caſca, and Brutus, agree to ſtab him in the Senate-Houſe. He is deterr'd by Dreams, Prodigies, and his Wife Calpurnia's Prayers, from going to the Senate that Day, being the Ides of March; but Decimus Brutus, and the other Conſpirators coming to him, perſuade him from his Superſtition: ſo he goes, and by the way receives a Paper with a Liſt of the Conſpirators, but will not look at it. In the Senate-Houſe Metellus Cimber kneels to beg the Repeal of his Brother's Baniſhment, which when Cæſar denies, they all come in the ſame manner, till Caſca gives the firſt Stab; and when Brutus wounds him, he falls with et tu Brute? Anthony being drawn aſide by Trebonius, flies away on the Noiſe of Cæſar's Death; but coming to them by Permiſſion, agrees with the Murderers, and obtains leave to bury and praiſe Cæſar in the Market-Place, or Forum, according to Cuſtom. Brutus having firſt given the People an Account of what the Conſpirators had done, and juſtify'd it with Reaſons, Anthony makes ſuch an Oration that he ſets the People in a Mutiny, who burn the Conſpirators Houſes, &c. Brutus and Caſſius, and the reſt of them, fly out of Rome. At the Camp at Sardis, Caſſius meets Brutus, and there happens a Quarrel betwixt them about Brutus's not pardoning Lucius Pella, and on Caſſius's not ſending Money to pay the Army. This being over, and they Friends, and ſeparated, the Ghoſt of Cæſar appears to Brutus, and ſays he'll meet him again at Philippi. Whither when the Armies are gone, Octavius, and Mark Anthony follow, fight, and beat them: Caſſius kills himſelf on a Miſtake, and Brutus on his being cloſe purſu'd.

This Play, or Hiſtory, is call'd Julius Cæſar, tho it ought rather to be call'd Marcus Brutus; Cæſar is the ſhorteſt and moſt inconſiderable Part in it, and he is kill'd in the beginning of the third Act. But Brutus is plainly the ſhining, and darling Character of the Poet; and is to the end of the Play the moſt conſiderable Perſon. If it had been properly call'd Julius Cæſar, it ought to have ended at his Death; and then it had been much much more regular, natural, and beautiful. But then the Moral muſt naturally have been the Puniſhment or ill Succeſs of Tyranny.

I know that a Nobleman of great Judgment in the Drama, is, and has been for ſome time, altering this Play. In which I believe Shakeſpear will have a better Fate, than in moſt of thoſe which have been alter'd: For generally they who have undertaken this Province, have been careful to leave all the Faults, and to rob him of many of the Beauties; but this has been becauſe few, who have attempted it, knew more of the Art of the Stage than our Author, and wanted his Genius to reliſh thoſe things, which were really good. But the principal Character, Cæſar, that is left ſo little touch'd by Shakeſpear will merit his Regard; and the Regulation of the Deſign without doubt will be the Object of his Care and Study: and then there cannot be ſo much of this remaining, as to rob the Alterer of the Honour of the whole; for the two beſt things in the Play are after the Death of Cæſar, where the Action ends, viz. the Orations of Brutus, and Anthony, and the Quarrel betwixt Brutus and Caſſius. Theſe Orations are indeed the beginning of a new Action, the Deaths of Brutus, and Caſſius, and have nothing (in a Dramatic Senſe) to do with the Death of Cæſar, which is the firſt Action. But this is a Part of the Drama, which our Shakeſpear is not to be accountable for. We ſhall therefore proceed to thoſe Beauties of which he is undoubtedly Maſter. The Manners firſt; and here I think he is generally wonderful, for there is the Likeneſs in all, and a perfect Convenience, and Equality.

What Mark Anthony ſays to the imaginary People of Shakeſpear's Rome, is ſo artful, ſo finely taken from the very Nature of the thing, that I queſtion whether what the real Mark Anthony ſpoke cou'd be more moving, or better calculated to that Effect. Plutarch ſays nothing of it; but we find that Appian has given us ſome Fragments of Anthony's Oration on this Occaſion, which, in Honour of our Shakeſpear, I'll tranſcribe: for tho he ſeems to follow this Author chiefly in his Play, yet he has not borrow'd the Oration either of Brutus or Anthony, tho one he found there entire, and the other ſo ſupply'd that he might eaſily gather the Connection.

Anthony's Oration in Appian.

It is not juſt, Gentlemen, that I alone ſhould undertake the Funeral Praiſes of this great Man; it were fitter his Country did declare them. I will therefore with the Voice of the Republick, and not my own, only make Recital of thoſe Honours, which, whilſt he was living, the People of Rome conferr'd upon him for his Virtues.

" Having ſaid this, he began with a ſad and ſorrowful Countenance the " Recital of Cæſar's glorious Titles, pronouncing every thing diſtinctly, " and ſtopping more particularly at thoſe by which they had made him

" more

" more than Man; as Sacred, Inviolable, Father of his Country, Bene-
" factor, Prince, and many others which till then had never been given
" to any Man. At every Word turning towards the Body, and animating
" his Speech by his Geſture; and when he pronounc'd any one of thoſe
" Titles, he added ſome intermingled Terms of Grief and Indignation; as
" when he recited the Decree of the Senate, calling him Father of his
" Country"—— See there, ſaid he, the Teſtimony of your Acknowledge- ments——And in pronouncing theſe Words—Holy, Sacred, Inviolable, and the Refuge of the miſerable, he added——never any one, that fled to him for Refuge, periſh'd; yet he himſelf is murder'd, tho made Holy and Sacred by our Decrees, without having exacted theſe Titles from us, or ever deſir'd them. And ſurely we are in a ſhameful Slavery indeed, if we give thoſe Titles to unworthy Perſons, who never ask them of us. But Oh! faithful Citizens, you purge your ſelves well from this Reproach by the Honours you now pay his Memory. After this reciting the Act of the Oath, by which they were all oblig'd to guard the Perſon of Cæſar, and to employ all their Forces ſo, that if any attempted his Perſon, whoever expos'd not his Life in his Defence ſhou'd be execrable, he rais'd his Voice, and extending his Hands towards the Capitol, cry'd out ——Oh Jupiter! Protector of my Country, behold me ready to revenge, as I have ſworn; and ſince it is a thing reſolv'd by the Judgment of all good Men, I beſeech thee with all the other Gods to be favourable to me. A Tumult hereupon ariſing among the Senators, who believ'd theſe Words to be manifeſtly addreſs'd to them; Authony to appeaſe them turn'd the Diſcourſe, and ſaid,—But Gentlemen, this Accident muſt rather be attributed to ſome God, than to Men; and we ought rather to provide againſt the preſent Neceſſities, than ſpeak of things paſt, ſince we are threatned with extreme Miſeries for the future, and are upon the Point of falling again into our antient Seditions, and the ſeeing all the Nobility of the City periſh. Let us then conduct this ſacred Perſon among the Gods, ſolemnly in mournful Elegies ſinging his Praiſes.—After having ſaid theſe Words, he tuck'd up his Robe, as if he had been poſſeſs'd with ſome Spirit; and girding it about him, that he might have his Hands more at liberty, he went and plac'd himſelf near the Bed where the Corps lay, upon an eminent Place; and opening the Curtain, and looking in, he began to ſing his Praiſes, as of a Celeſtial Divinity. And the better to make him be believ'd to be of that Race, he lifted his Hands up to Heaven; reciting even to the Loſs of Breath, his Wars, his Combats, his Victories, the Nations he had ſubdu'd, the Spoils he had brought away, ſpeaking of every thing as a Miracle; and crying out many times——Thou alone art he, who haſt return'd victorious from ſo many Fights; thou alone art he, who haſt reveng'd thy Country of the Injuries done her for three hundred Years together, and conſtrain'd People till then unconquerable, viz. the Gauls, who alone took and burnt the City, to ask Pardon on their Knees.

Having

Having ſaid theſe things and many more, as of a divine Perſon, he lower'd his Voice, and in a mournful Tone with Tears in his Eyes, lamented the unworthy Death of his Friend, wiſhing that he cou'd redeem his Life with his own; and at length abandoning himſelf to Grief, he was ſo far tranſported as to diſcover the Body of Cæſar, and to ſhow at the Top of his Pike his Robe pierc'd with the Stabs he had receiv'd, and all ſtain'd with his Blood, &c.

I have given all this from Appian, that the Reader may ſee, as it were, the whole Procedure of Anthony on this occaſion; and from this make a Judgment on his Oration, and what Shakeſpear has made him ſpeak: Which, if not ſo adapted to the Roman People, certainly was very agreeable to them, as repreſented by him in his Play.

The other thing in this Play, is the famous Quarrel betwixt Brutus and Caſſius, in the ſecond Scene of the fourth Act. This has always receiv'd a juſt Applauſe, and has by Mr. Dryden, in his Preface to Troilus and Creſſida, been preferr'd to a no leſs famous Scene of a Quarrel betwixt Agamemnon and Menelaus, in the Iphigenia in Aulis of Euripides. His Words are theſe——The Occaſion which Shakeſpear, Euripides, and Fletcher, have all taken, is the ſame, grounded upon Friendſhip; and the Quarrel of two virtuous Men rais'd by natural Degrees to the Extremity of Paſſion, is conducted in all three to the Declination of the ſame Paſſion, and concludes with the warm renewing of their Friendſhips. But the particular Ground-work which Shakeſpear has taken, is incomparably the beſt; becauſe he has not only choſen two of the greateſt Heroes of their Age, but has likewiſe intereſted the Liberty of Rome and their own Honours, who were the Redeemers of it, in the Debate.

I hope it will be no Injury to our Countryman, to do Juſtice to an old Greek Poet of the firſt Magnitude. To that end I muſt needs ſay, that the Advantage Mr. Dryden gives to the Briton, is equally due to Euripides; for certainly Agamemnon and Menelaus, in the poetic World at leaſt, and in the Syſtem of Heroes in the Time Euripides wrote, were as great as Brutus and Caſſius, one of whom perhaps cannot carry away the Prize of the greateſt Hero of his Age without ſome Diſpute. Next, in the Quarrel of Euripides, not the Diſappointment of ſome Pay of Legions, or the Denial of quitting a Man guilty of Bribery, which both were paſt, but the Fate, the Glory, and the Honour, if not the Safety of all Greece, depended on the Ground of their Difference.

But whether this of Shakeſpear be either ſo well prepar'd, have thoſe fine Turns in it, or come as naturally to its Declination as this of Euripides, I leave to the Judgment of the Reader. But I muſt deſire that ſome Grains of Allowance may be made for the Badneſs of a Tranſlation; which, however good, muſt fall much ſhort of the Beauties of the Original.

To ſhew the Preparation of this Quarrel, I ſhall give the Argument of the firſt Act; for Mr. Barnes, in his Edition of Euripides, has divided his Plays into Acts.

Agamemnon now repenting that he had agreed to the ſacrificing of his Daughter, in the night-time conſults with an old faithful Servant of his, how to prevent her Arrival in the Camp, where ſhe was hourly expected with her Mother Clytemneſtra. To this Servant therefore he entruſts a Letter to be deliver'd to his Wife, in which he deſires her not to bring Iphigenia to Aulis. In this Act Agamemnon declares the firſt Seeds of the Trojan Expedition, and gives an Inſight into the preſent Fable.

The ſecond Act begins with Menelaus intercepting the Meſſenger, and ſtriving to get the Letter from him.

Old Man. Oh! Menelaus! ſpare your ſelf a Guilt,
Unworthy of your ſelf, and of your Fame.
Mene. No more, no more, thou'rt to thy Lord too faithful.
Old M. T' upbraid me with a Virtue, not a Crime.
Mene. If thou perſiſt, thou ſhalt full ſoon repent thee.
Old M. They are the King's Diſpatches you wou'd ſeize;
And thoſe you ought not, Sir, to violate.
Mene. Thou ought'ſt not, Wretch, by guilty Faith miſled,
To bear Perdition to the Grecian Glory.
Old M. Of that am I no Judge——forgoe my Packet.
Men. I will not.
Old M. Nor will I quit it.
Mene. Or let it go, or from my Hand receive Immediate Death.
Old M. I count it Glory for my Lord to die.
Mene. Villain, let go thy Packet——dares a groveling Slave
Contend in ſaucy Words with mighty Kings!
Old M. My Lord! my Lord! O! Agamemnon, hear me!
With violent Hands he robs me of thy Letters.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. What Noiſe, what Tumult's this within my Hearing?
Old M. Hear me, great Sir, I will the Truth unfold.
Agam. Why, Menelaus, haſt thou thus abus'd
My faithful Servant?
Mene. Ha! Agamemnon! Gods! immortal Gods!
Turn, turn thy guilty Eye, and look on me!
If ſtill thou canſt behold my injur'd Face.

Agam.

Agam. Yes, did the deadly Baſilisk it ſelf
Ride on thy fiery Balls, I thus durſt view thee——
The Son of Atreus will by none be brow-beat.
Mene. See'ſt thou theſe Letters full of baſe Contents?
Agam. Yes, I do ſee them, and in them thy Crime,
Which I——but give 'em to me ſtrait.——
Mene. Not till the Grecian Chiefs have heard them read.
Agam. And have you then——but ſure you durſt not do't,
Thou durſt not break thy Sovereign's Letters open.
Mene. Yes, yes, I know 'twill vex thy haughty Soul,
To have thy ſecret Treaſons thus expos'd.
Agam. O! all ye Gods! what Inſolence is this!
Mene. From Argos you expect your Daughter here?
Agam. And what have you to do, with ſaucy Eye
To over-look my Actions?
Men. My Will, Sir, is my Right——I'm not thy Slave.
Agam. 'Tis well, Sir, wondrous well, that I, Supreme
Of Lords and Kings, muſt be depriv'd the Right
To govern my own Family as I pleaſe!
Mene. You are not fit t' enjoy that common Right,
Your Mind's unſettled, veering as the Wind.
For, with thy ſelf at War, it now determines
One thing, the following Moment whirls about,
And then deſigns another; nor fix'd in that,
Succeeding Minutes vary your Reſolves.
Agam. Oh! Spite, ſpite, ſpite! a ſpiteful Tongue is odious!
Mene. But an inconſtant and a various Mind
Is ſtill unjuſt, and ſtill to Friends unknown.
Your ſelf I will lay open to your ſelf;
But let not Pride and Anger make you deaf,
Averſe to Truth——I ſhall not praiſe you much.
Look back, look back, recall, recall the Time,
When your Ambition zealouſly purſu'd
Supreme Command o'er all the Grecian Chiefs,
To lead our vengeful Arms to treacherous Troy.
An humble Seeming you indeed put on,
As if you'd ſhun what moſt your Heart deſir'd.
How lowly then! how fawning then on All!
With flattering Hand you courted every one;
Your Gates ſet wide to the inglorious Vulgar;
Familiar with the meaneſt; hearing All,
And ſeeking thoſe, who ſought not Agamemnon.
Yes, with obſequious Bows you brib'd the Mob,
To give that Empire, you ſo ill can bear.

No ſooner had you gain'd your Wiſh, Command,
But all your ſupple Manners were thrown by.
You to your Friends no more confeſs'd the Friend,
Hard of Acceſs, and rarely ſeen abroad;
All mean and low! A Man of Honour ſhou'd
Then be moſt fixt, and zealous for his Friends,
When by his Fortune he can moſt aſſiſt them.
As ſoon as I perceiv'd this ſhameful Error,
I like a Friend and Brother told you of it.
Again in Aulis here ——
Since the great Gods deny'd to ſwell our Sails
With proſperous Gales, your haughty Spirit fell;
You were diſmay'd, dejected, and forlorn:
The Grecians cry aloud to be diſmiſs'd,
And not to languiſh in this Port in vain.
How wretched hadſt thou been, and how inglorious,
How full of Anguiſh, Agonies of Death;
Had you then ceas'd to lead theſe ſtrong Battalions,
To fill the Trojan Fields with warlike Greeks?
In this Diſtreſs you then cou'd think of me,
Ask my Advice, how to avoid this Shame.
But then, when Calchas from the Victims found,
Your Daughter offer'd at Diana's Altar,
Wou'd give the Greeks a ſafe and ſpeedy Voyage;
Thy well pleas'd Eyes confeſs'd the ſudden Joy,
That ſpread it ſelf thro all thy inward Pow'rs;
Thy ready Tongue declar'd thy willing Mind,
That ſhe ſhou'd know the Goddeſs' ſacred Knife,
Free, unconſtrain'd, and not by any Force.
Pretend not, that your high Commands you ſent,
That ſhe to Aulis ſhou'd with ſpeed repair;
Deceiv'd by thee, with the falſe promis'd Joy
Of being the long-wiſh'd Bride of great Achilles:
But here by a ſtrange Whirle and Change of Will,
You other Letters ſend to countermand her.
You will not be the Murderer of your Daughter!
How many thus with an unſteady Hand
Do ſteer the dangerous Helm of Government?
Fond to engage in ſome great bold Deſign,
Yet ſwift to quit it when they are engag'd:
Aw'd by the People ſome, and ſome more juſtly
Compell'd to guard from Foes their own Dominions.
But I the unhappy Fate of Greece deplore,
All arm'd, and ready to aſſault the Foe,

And

And with full Glory quash the proud Barbarian,
Are left their Sport, and Scorn——
For the Repose of the great Agamemnon!
Oh! ne'er advance a Man for Wealth, or Power:
Wisdom alone deserves supreme Command,
And a wise Man is naturally a King.

Chor. All Brothers Quarrels are unhappy Things.

Agam. With Truth I shall reproach you in few Words,
For Insolence like this deserves not many;
A Brother's Name shall teach my injur'd Tongue
A Modesty, it seems, to you unknown.
Tho Modesty does seldom touch the base;
For when bright Honour has the Breast forsook,
Seldom confederate Modesty prevails.
Then, tell me, Sir, the Cause of all this Rage,
Whence all this Anger? whence this Indignation?
Who is't that injures or affronts you here?
What is't you want? pray what is your Desire?
Your virtuous Wife? your happy nuptial State?
At my Expence must I restore your Wishes,
Which when possest, your own ill Conduct lost you?
What! to regain your beauteous, faithless Wife,
Wou'd you thus tread on Honesty, and Reason?
The Pleasures of ill Men are evil all!
Oh! vain! oh! doating Madness! oh! blind Folly!
The Gods, indulgent to thy Happiness,
Have rid thee of a false, injurious Wife;
And thou, fond Fool, now burn'st with strange Desire,
To force the distant Plague home to thy Bosom!
The Suitors to this Helena with you
Each, by fallacious Hope of her betray'd,
To Tynd'rus swore, that with united Arms
They wou'd defend the happy Man she chose.
Apply to these, with these pursue the War;
But conscious of the Weakness of that Oath,
Compell'd by Fraud or Folly you despair:
If I forsake your foul detested Cause,
Will not be strong enough to lead them on.
But Menelaus, this assure thy self,
My guiltless Child for you I shall not murder.
Shou'd I comply, wild Horror and Remorse
Wou'd haunt my daily Thoughts, and nightly Slumbers.
What I have said, is, Sir, so plain and easy,
You need no Comment to explain my Meaning.

But

But if you ſtill to Juſtice will be blind,
I ſhall however, Sir, protect my own.
Chor. This differs from the former, yet it teaches,
That of our Children we ſhou'd take juſt Care.
Mene. O! Gods! how very wretched am I grown!
I have no Friends!
Agam. Yes, yes, you ſhall have Friends,
If you will not deſtroy 'em.
Mene. Oh! in what,
In what do you confeſs the Friend and Brother,
Of the ſame Father born?
Agam. I ſhall be wiſe,
Not mad with you.
Mene. Friends Griefs are common.
Agam. Then call me Friend, when you deſign no Harm.
Mene. This Obſtinacy's vain, for ſure thou know'ſt
In this thou muſt contend with Greece, not me.
Agam. Greece too, like thee, by ſome ill Fury's haunted.
Mene. Oh! proud, and vain of Empire! thou betray'ſt
To that, thy Brother. But I ſhall apply
To other Arts, and other Friends for Juſtice. [Going.

Enter Meſſenger.

Meſſ. O! Agamemnon, King of all the Greeks,
I bring you pleaſing News: Now in the Camp
Your Daughter Iphigenia is arriv'd,
And Clytemneſtra your beloved Queen,
With young Oreſtes.—This Royal Troop,
After ſo long an Abſence, muſt be welcome.
With Speed I came before to bring the News.
The Army throngs to ſee the glorious Sight.
Some talk of Nuptials for the Royal Virgin;
Some, that ſhe comes to be in ſacred Rites
Of great Diana here initiated.
But you, O! Agamemnon! crown your Brows,
And, Menelaus, ſhare the Nuptial Joys.
Let Muſick, and the Dancers celebrate
This happy Day.
Agam. Thy Zeal and Joy I do commend, be gone,
I of the reſt will take peculiar Care.
Ah me! Oh!—Oh! wretched Agamemnon!
What ſhall I ſay? Oh! where ſhall I begin?
Into what Nooſe of Fate am I now fall'n!

'Tis

'Tis the malicious Cunning of my Fortune
Thus to prevent my juſt Paternal Care!
Oh! happy State of mean and low Degree!
There Grief at liberty may vent her Moans,
And give their mournful Thoughts a plaintive Tongue.
But Greatneſs is confin'd to hateful Form!
The People us, not we the People govern.
Proud Majeſty denies my Woes Relief,
Shame ſtops the flowing Torrent of my Grief;
But not to weep is yet a greater Shame!
Thus a chain'd Slave I prove to a great Name.
I muſt curb Nature, and deny its Courſe;
And tho I'm fall'n into the greateſt Woe,
That any mortal Wretch can ever know;
Yet in my Breaſt the Anguiſh muſt contain,
And only I my ſelf muſt know my Pain.
But Oh! my Wife! what ſhall I ſay to her?
How ſhall I meet her? with what Looks behold her?
Her coming has redoubled all my Woe!
She comes unſent for, no invited Gueſt.
Yet who can blame the tender Mother's Care,
To do the deareſt Office to her Child?
But now the foul perfidious Cauſe ſhe'll find
Of her moſt inauſpicious Journey.
For how ſhall I reſtrain the burſting Tears,
When I receive the tender hapleſs Virgin!
Ha! now methinks I ſee her ſuppliant kneel
With lifted Hands, and upcaſt ſtreaming Eyes,
And trembling Lips thus pitifully pleading;
Oh! Father, will you kill me? will your Hand,
A Father's Hand give me to ſuch Nuptials?
And then the little Infant, young Oreſtes,
In broken Sounds, and yet intelligible,
Accuſe me of his deareſt Siſter's Murder!
Alas! Alas! how have the curſed Nuptials
Of the Barbarian, Paris, thus deſtroy'd me!
For he has brought theſe curſed Evils on me.

Mene. Give me your Hand, give me your dear Hand.

Agam. Here take it, for it is your Victory.

Mene. By Pelops our Grandſire, and our Father Atreus,
I ſwear, my Brother, what I'm going to ſay,
Are the ſincereſt Dictates of my Mind.
I cou'd not ſee the Tears fall from thy Eyes,
Thy awful Eyes, but Pity ſplit my Soul,

And

And the big Drops run tumbling down my Face.
My Rage ebb'd out apace, and now I ſee,
I ought not to be happy by thy Miſery.
Now, by the Gods, you ſhall not touch your Daughter,
Thy Iphigenia is, for me, immortal.
Why ſhou'd thine die, and mine remain alive?
Helen is not ſo dear to this fond Breaſt,
To make me trample Nature under foot,
And purchaſe her Embraces by thy Blood.
The heat of Youth, and my untam'd Deſire,
Made me ſpeak madly when I urg'd the Deed.
Oh! 'tis a dreadful thing to ſlay one's Child,
To dip our Hands in our own Off-ſpring's Blood!
'Tis monſtrous! 'tis unnatural.——
No, let the Army be diſmiſs'd with Speed,
And march away from Aulis to their Homes;
But, ceaſe thy Tears, by Heav'n I cannot bear them;
I never will urge more the fatal Theme.
By all the Gods, ſhe ſhall not die for me;
For what has ſhe to do with Helena?
By Jove, I love my Royal Brother ſo,
I wou'd not be the Cauſe of his Unreſt,
To be the happy Monarch of the World:
And my Heart akes, that e'er I ſhock'd thee ſo.
We may repent, with Honour, our Miſdeeds.

Chorus. Generouſly haſt thou ſaid, O Menelaus!
And worthy Tantalus the Son of Jove.

Agam. O! Menelaus! I do feel thy Kindneſs,
That thou haſt thus deceiv'd my Expectation,
In Words that truly do confeſs the Brother.

Mene. Paſſion may ſometimes warp a generous Mind,
But ſuch a cruel Kindred I abhor.

Agam. But Oh! my Brother, ſuch hard Fate ſurrounds me,
I cannot 'ſcape this bloody Sacrifice;
For Iphigenia muſt a Victim fall.

Mene. Who can compel you to deſtroy your Daughter?

Agam. The whole Grecian Army.

Mene. Send her back to Argos.

Agam. That cannot be; I cannot ſo deceive them.

Mene. You ought not by the Vulgar thus be aw'd.

Agam. Calchas, alas! the Oracle will reveal.

Mene. Suppoſe him dead. The Dead can tell no Tales.

Agam. Oh! but that Son of Syſiphus knows all.

Mene. In what can Ulyſſes injure Agamemnon?

Agam.

Agam. His artful Tongue commands the Soldiers Hearts.
Mene. He's fond indeed of popular Applauſe.
Agam. Oh! think him therefore, by the Troops ſurrounded,
The ſecret Oracle by Calchas told,
Divulging to the liſtening Warriours Ears;
My Piety ſtiling impious Sacrilege,
Refuſing to the Grecian Glory
The Victim that Diana has requir'd.
The Army won by theſe his ſmooth Pretences,
Both you and I ſhall fall by their dire Rage;
Yet by our Death not ſave my Daughter's Life.
Suppoſe we fled to Argos from the Camp:
My Flight with Sword, and Fire, they wou'd purſue,
And lay my Country waſte. It wonnot be!
I muſt be wretched and my Child muſt die!
Thus Woe and Miſery ſurround me!
Into theſe Streights the Gods reduce me!
But Oh! my Brother! this alone canſt thou!
Let not my Wife the fatal Buſineſs know,
Before my Child I've offered up to Pluto;
That with the feweſt Tears I may be unhappy.

Tho I have taken ſome Latitude in the Tranſlation, and made bold to leave out ſometimes a Word or two, and ſometimes a Line or two, which related more to Cuſtom than the Paſſion; yet I have been far from making Euripides amends for what he loſes in the Tranſlation. As it is, I leave it to be by the Reader compared with that of Mr. Dryden in Troilus and Creſſida, and that of Shakeſpear in this Play.

This indeed is a juſter way of the Trial of our Poets excelling the Antients, than what Mr. Hales of Eaton, my Lord Falkland, &c. took in the Compariſon of Topics; for if he here prevail, he will indeed get a Victory in a real Province of Poetry. I am ſurpriz'd that ſo judicious a Poet as Racine, ſhou'd omit this admirable Scene in his Iphigenia in Aulis, at the ſame time that he made a quarrelling Scene betwixt Agamemnon and Achilles. I have ſaid ſo much on the two moſt beautiful Parts of this Play, that I ſhall leave the reſt to the Reader; this being a Play ſo often acted, that they are obvious to every body.

Of Lowlineſs or Humility.

——But 'tis a common Proof,
That Lowlineſs is young Ambition's Ladder,
Whereto the Climber upward turns his Face.

On Conſpiracy.

——O! Conſpiracy!
Sham'ſt thou to ſhew thy dangerous Brow by Night?
When Evils are moſt free.

There is one thing in this Play, which I remark for thoſe judicious Gentlemen, who by a ſwelling gouty Style have ſet up for fine Language in the Drama. The Style of this Play is, generally ſpeaking, plain, eaſy, and natural.

The Argument of Mackbeth.

Duncan, King of Scotland, has two Sons, Malcolm, and Donalbain. His General againſt the Rebels and Norwegians (who then invaded that Country) is Mackbeth, a Kinſman of the Crown; and with him is join'd in Commiſſion Banquo; who returning victorious, on an open Heath meet with three Witches, who ſalute Mackbeth three times, the laſt Salutation being King that ſhall be. Their other Salutations proving true, he and his Wife reſolve to make the third ſo. In the Night therefore they murder Duncan, and lay it on his Chamberlains. Malcolm and Donalbain fly away; on which they are accus'd of having employ'd them to kill their Father; ſo the Election falls on Mackbeth, who being now King, has Banquo murder'd for fear of his Race; for the wayward Siſters told him, that he ſhould get a Race of Kings: but his Son Fleance makes his eſcape. Murders and Tyrannies growing every day, Mackduff flies to the Engliſh Court, and with much adoe convinces Malcolm of his Fidelity, and with him comes into Scotland with Engliſh Forces, having firſt heard, that the Tyrant had ſurpriz'd his Caſtle, and kill'd his Wife and Children. Mackbeth having conſulted the Witches, is told, that he ſhall not be kill'd by any Man born of Woman; nor till Birnam Wood came to his Caſtle of Dunſinane. But his Wife, haunted with Remorſe for the Murders ſhe had been Partner in, dies; and he finding the Deceit of the Witches Aſſurance of Birnam Wood, by the Engliſh Army's taking every Man a Branch of a Tree in his Hand, ventures out to fight, and is at laſt kill'd by Mackduff, who was ript out of his Mother's Womb.

To ſay much in praiſe of this Play I cannot; for the Plot is a ſort of Hiſtory, and the Character of Mackbeth and his Lady are too monſtrous for the Stage. But it has obtained, and is in too much eſteem with the Million, for any Man yet to ſay much againſt it.

The

The Topics and Lines of this Play are leſs in Number and Beauty than moſt of his. A celebrated Speech is that of Mackbeth, after he has committed the Murder.

Methought I heard a Voice cry, ſleep no more!
Mackbeth doth murder Sleep.

I need not ſay any thing here about the Witches, ſince what I have ſaid of them and Spirits in the Tempeſt, is ſufficient: He has drawn thoſe Chimera's wonderfully, and made them Forms and Ceremonies according to their black Myſteries.

Life.

Life's but a walking Shadow, a poor Player,
That ſtruts and frets his Hour on the Stage,
And then is heard no more: It is a Tale
Told by an Idiot, full of Sound and Fury,
Signifying nothing.

The Argument of Hamlet Prince of Denmark.

Hamlet, Son of the former King of Denmark, is put aſide the Election by his Uncle Claudius, who marry'd his Mother ſoon after his Father's Death; which was ſucceeded by the walking of the Ghoſt of the deceas'd King. Hamlet being inform'd of it, goes to the Watch, ſees and ſpeaks to the Ghoſt, who tells him, that his Uncle, who now poſſeſſes his Throne and Wife, murder'd him as he lay aſleep in his Garden, by pouring Poiſon into his Ear. So deſiring Revenge, the Ghoſt vaniſhes; Hamlet obliges all who had ſeen it to keep the Secret, and by no means diſcover that they had beheld any ſuch Sight. Hamlet aſſumes a ſort of Madneſs, and the Queen loving him very well, is ſollicitous to know the Cauſe, which Polonius the Lord Chamberlain perſuades to be the Love of his Daughter, on her rejecting his Letters and Addreſs according to her Brother's and Father's Orders. Hamlet, willing to diſcover whether the Ghoſt had told him true, orders ſome Players, who came then to Elſinor, to act ſuch a Part, as the Ghoſt had inform'd him the King had been guilty of, deſiring Horatio his Friend to obſerve him all the Action; but when the poiſoning of his Brother in the Garden came ro be acted, the King, unable to ſee more, riſes up, and breaks off the Play. This confirms Hamlet in his Reſolution of revenging his Father's Death. But the King, highly affected with this, retires, while his Mother is order'd to check him for his Conduct; but Polonius adviſes the King to let him hide himſelf, to over-hear what paſſes betwixt them, for fear the Mother's Indulgence ſhou'd not diſcover all. As Hamlet is going to his Mother, he finds the King at Prayers, and therefore will not kill him, becauſe he took his Father in his Sins. He is ſo rough with his Mother, that ſhe crys out for help, and Polonius alarm'd does the ſame; but Hamlet taking him for the King, kills him behind the Arras, then charges the Queen home with her fault of marrying her Husband's Brother, &c. owns that he is not mad: The Ghoſt of his Father comes into the Room, which heightens her Agony: They part, the Queen promiſing not to reveal ought to the King. The King is reſolv'd to ſend Hamlet to England, with Roſencroſs and Guildenſtern, with private Orders for him to be put to death there; but Hamlet aboard getting their Commiſſions from them, found the fatal Order and keeps it, ſupplying the Place with a freſh Order to put the Ambaſſadors to death: So he comes back, and in the Church finds a Grave digging for Ophelia, who running mad on her Father's Death, was drown'd; and Laertes coming back from France, was but juſt hinder'd from revenging his Father's Death on the King, but is aſſur'd, that he would help in his Revenge by engaging Hamlet to try his Skill with him at Foils, whilſt Hamlet ſhou'd have a Blunt, and Laertes a Sharp, which he poiſon'd. But in the Scuffle the Queen drinks to Hamlet, but drinks the Poiſon prepar'd by the King for Hamlet, who being now wounded, got the Sharp from Laertes and wounds him; the Queen crys out that ſhe is poiſon'd, and ſo Hamlet kills the King; Laertes confeſſes the Contrivance and dies, as Hamlet does immediately after.

Tho I look upon this as the Maſter-piece of Shakeſpear according to our way of writing, yet there are abundance of Errors in the Conduct and Deſign, which will not ſuffer us in Juſtice to prefer it to the Electra of Sophocles with the Author of his Life; who ſeems to miſtake the Matter wide, when he puts this on the ſame Foot with the Electra. Hamlet's Mother has no hand in the Death of her Husband, as far as we can diſcover in this Poem; but her fault was in yielding to the inceſtuous Amour with her Husband's Brother; that at leaſt is all that the Ghoſt charges her with. Beſides, Shakeſpear was Maſter of this Story, but Sophocles was not. Oreſtes farther, was commanded by the Oracle to kill his Mother, and therefore all moral Duties yielding to the immediate Command of the Gods, his Action, according to that Syſtem of Religion under which Sophocles wrote, had nothing in it of Barbarity, but was entirely pious; as Agamemnon's ſacrificing his own Daughter Iphigenia, by Diana's Order.

This Play indeed is capable of being made more perfect than the Electra; but then a great deal of it muſt be thrown away, and ſome of the darling Trifles of the Million, as all the comical Part entirely, and many other things things which relate not to the main Action, which ſeems here to be pretty entire, tho not ſo artfully conducted as it might be. But I wander from my point; I propos'd not to ſhow the Errors, eſpecially when this Play contains ſo many Beauties. Hamlet every where almoſt gives us Speeches that are full of the Nature of his Paſſion. The Advice of Laertes to his Siſter is very moral and juſt, and full of prudential Caution; and that of Polonius to his Son, and that of the ſame to his Daughter. Ay Springes to catch Woodcocks, &c. If the young Ladies wou'd ſtudy theſe Pages, they wou'd guard their Virtues and Honours better than many of them do. All the Scene betwixt Hamlet and the Ghoſt, is admirable, as the Ghoſt's Deſcription of his Reſidence in the other World.

Virtue and Luſt.

——But Virtue, as it never will be mov'd,
Tho Lewdneſs court it in the Shape of Heav'n;
So Luſt, tho to a radiant Angel link'd,
Will ſate it ſelf in a Cœleſtial Bed, and prey on Garbage.

Ophelia's Deſcription of Hamlet's mad Addreſs to her.

My Lord, as I was ſowing in my Chamber,
He took me by the Wriſt, &c.

Ambition.

Which Dreams indeed are Ambition: for the very Subſtance of the Ambitious, is merely the Shadow of a Dream.

On Man.

What a piece of Worth is Man? how noble in Reaſon? how infinite in Faculty, in Form, and Moving; how expreſs and admirable? In Action how like an Angel? In Apprehenſion how like a God! The Beauty of the World!

In Hamlet's Speech to the Players, Shakeſpear gives us his whole Knowledge of the Drama; and for that Reaſon, this favourable Judgment of a Play, that did not pleaſe the Million, is what ſhou'd teach ſome of our ſucceſsful Poets not to value themſelves merely on Succeſs, ſince the Million often fail; tho as Horace ſays, they ſometimes hit right.

Interdum Populus rectum videt, eſt ubi peccat.

Hamlet. I heard thee ſpeak me a Speech once, but it was never acted; or if it was, not above once: for the Play, I remember, pleas'd not the Million; it was Caviare to the General: But it was (as I received it, and others, whoſe Judgment in ſuch Matters, cry'd to the Top of mine) an excellent Play——well digeſted in the Scenes, ſet down with as much Modeſty as Cunning.

On Players and Plays.

Ham. Let them be well us'd, for they are the Abſtracts and brief Chronicles of the Time.

I have heard that guilty Creatures, ſitting at a Play,
Have by the very cunning of the Scene
Been ſtruck ſo to the Soul, that preſently
They have proclaimed their Malefactions.

The Power and Force of Tragedy, in this and other Particulars, has been confirmed by undoubted Hiſtory. Alexander, Tyrant of Phærea, a City of Theſſaly, ſeeing the Hecuba of Euripides acted, found himſelf ſo affected, that he went out before the End of the firſt Act, ſaying, That he was aſham'd to be ſeen to weep at that Misfortune of Hecuba and Polyxena, when he daily embrued his Hands in the Blood of his own Citizens. He was afraid (ſays the admirable Dacier) that his Heart ſhou'd be truly mollified; that the Spirit of Tyranny wou'd now leave the Poſſeſſion of his Breaſt, and that he ſhould come a private Perſon out of that Theatre, into which he enter'd Maſter. The Actor, who ſo ſenſibly touch'd him, with difficulty eſcap'd with his Life, but was ſecur'd by ſome Remains of that Pity, which was the Cauſe of his Crime.

I cannot here omit what Benefit the City of Athens it ſelf receiv'd from ſome Verſes of the Electra of Euripides, in its great Diſtreſs; for when it was debated, that the City of Athens ſhou'd be deſtroy'd, and the Country laid waſte, a milder Courſe was taken by the Commanders, from one of them repeating theſe Verſes out of the Electra of Euripides:

Electra, Oh! unhappy Queen,
Whither wou'd you fly? Return:
Your Abſence the forſaken Groves
And deſart Palace ſeem to mourn.

This ſhook them (ſays Plutarch in the Life of Lyſander) and gave an Occaſion to reflect how barbarous it wou'd appear to lay that City in Ruin, which had been renown'd for the Birth and Education of ſo many famous Men.

Hamlet's

Hamlet's Soliloquy.

Death, or to die.

——To be or not to be; that is the Queſtion:
Whether 'tis nobler in the Mind to ſuffer
The Slings and Arrows of outragious Fortune,
Or to take Arms againſt a Sea of Troubles,
And by oppoſing, end them.

Calumny.

Be thou as chaſte as Ice, as pure as Snow,
Thou ſhalt not eſcape Calumny.

Hamlet's Advice and Directions to Players is very good, containing very good Precepts of a juſt Pronunciation, which being as uſeful for thoſe who judge, as thoſe who act, I ſhall take more notice of them.

Ham. Speak the Speech I pray you, as I pronounc'd it to you trippingly on the Tongue. But if you mouth it, as many of our Players doe, I had as lieve the Town-Cryer had ſpoke my Lines. Nor do not ſaw the Air too much with your Hand thus, but uſe all gently; for in the very Torrent, Tempeſt, and (as I may ſay) the Whirl-wind of Paſſion, you muſt acquire and beget a Temperance, that may give it Smoothneſs. Oh! it offends me to the Soul, to ſee a robouſtous Periwig-pated Fellow tear a Paſſion to Tatters, to very Ragges, to ſplit the Ears of the Groundlings; who, for the moſt part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb Shows, and Noiſe, &c. And a little further:

—Be not too tame neither: but let your own Diſcretion be your Tutor. Suite the Action to the Word, the Word to the Action; with this ſpecial Obſervance, That you o'ertop not the Modeſty of Nature; for any thing ſo overdone, is from the Purpoſe of Playing; whoſe end both at the firſt and now, was, and is, to hold as 'twere a Mirror up to Nature; to ſhow Virtue her own Feature, Scorn her own Image, and the very Age and Body of the Time, his Form and Preſſure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, tho it make the Unskilful laugh, cannot but make the Judicious grieve; the Cenſure of the which one muſt, in your Allowance, o'erſway a whole Theatre of others. Oh! there be Players, that I have ſeen play, and heard others praiſe, and that highly (not to ſpeak it profanely) that neither having the Accent of Chriſtians, nor the Gate of Chriſtian, Pagan, or Norman, have ſo ſtrutted and bellow'd, that I have thought ſome of Nature's Journey-Men had made Men, and not made them well, they imitated Humanity ſo abominably.—And let

thoſe

thoſe that play the Clowns, ſpeak no more than is ſet down for them; for there be of them, that will of themſelves laugh, to ſet on ſome Quantity of barren Spectators to laugh too, tho in the mean time ſome neceſſary Queſtion of the Play be then to be conſider'd. That's villainous, and ſhows a moſt pitiful Ambition in the Fool that uſes it.

Theſe Precepts of Shakeſpear are as valuable as any thing in him; for indeed, thorowly ſtudy'd and underſtood, they teach the whole Art of the Stage, which relates to the Repreſentation, or the Actors; who ſtill are too commonly guilty of theſe very Follies, which Shakeſpear obſerv'd in the Players of his Time.

I ſhall ſay no more in Explanation of this here, deſigning a particular Diſcourſe on the Art of Pronunciation and Acting; for it is not ſufficient for a Player to ſpeak well, he muſt give what he ſays its true Action, he muſt look his Part, he muſt be the Man he repreſents, according to the very Lineaments of the Paſſion, or Humour, which he repreſents, or elſe he is no Actor. They are call'd Actors, not Speakers; and a Miſtake in the accenting a Word, or even in a vicious Tone of Utterance, may be forgiven; but an ill Action is an Error in the Fundamentals. There is a Lady on the Stage, who may perhaps be ſometimes out in her Speaking, but always ſo charms in her Action, that ſhe will not ſuffer a Lover of the Art not to ſink the ſmaller Error in the greater Beauty. Our Actors are very liable to neglect the Decorum of the Repreſentation, and when they have form'd themſelves to the Figure of a paſſionate Man as long as they ſpeak, while the oppoſite ſpeaks, are as calm as if unconcern'd in the Matter; whereas in Nature, no Man in Anger, Love, or Grief, but minds what the other ſays, and is as much concern'd in it as if he ſpoke himſelf. In this Particular, no body can excel Mrs. Barry, whom I have frequently obſerv'd change her Colour, and diſcover a Concern that equall'd Nature; this is no Flattery to her, but barely Juſtice.

But not to dwell on this Subject, or anticipate what I have to ſay in a longer Diſcuſſion of this Point, let us return to the fine things of this Play of Hamlet. His Speech to Horatio has many good Lines. The Queen's Proteſt in the Play that's introduc'd, and the King's Diſcourſe with her, is worth reading for the Lines and the Reflections. The Scene betwixt his Mother and Hamlet, is generally very well; tho perhaps it is capable of Improvement. That part of the Scene where the Ghoſt comes in, is very ſtrong; as indeed Shakeſpear is in the former Scene, which, as I have been aſſur'd, he wrote in a Charnel-Houſe in the midſt of the Night.

On Man.

What is Man—
If his chief Good and Market of his Time, &c.

The

The Diſcourſe betwixt Hamlet and the Grave-Maker is full of moral Reflections, and worthy minding, tho that Diſcourſe it ſelf has nothing to do where it is, nor is of any uſe to the Deſign, and may be as well left out; and what ever can be left out has no Buſineſs in a Play; but this being low Comedy has ſtill leſs to do here. The Character Hamlet gives of Oſrick is very ſatirical, and wou'd be good any where elſe.

The Argument of King Lear.

LEAR, King of Britain, has three Daughters, Gonerill, Regan, and Cordelia. Gonerill is marry'd to the Duke of Albany, Regan to the Duke of Cornwal, and the King of France and Duke of Burgundy are Pretenders to Cordelia. The King being old, divides his Kingdom betwixt his three Daughters, reſerving only an hundred Knights for himſelf, and the Name of King. But the two Elder, by their mighty Profeſſions of Love and Duty beyond meaſure win the Father's Heart, now alienated from Cordelia, becauſe ſhe daub'd not her Affections over with empty Profeſſions; ſo that old Lear in a Paſſion gives away her Share to her other Siſters, and with his Curſe leaves her to France, who takes her for his Wife, tho rejected by Burgundy. The two Daughters, Regan and Gonerill, ſoon fall from their Duty, and grow weary of the King, are uncivil to his Followers, wou'd abridge them, nay take them quite away; when in a ſtormy Night he is turn'd out of the Earl of Glouceſter's Houſe, with Orders to him not to relieve him. The Earl of Glouceſter ſhook with Horror of theſe unnatural Proceedings, acquaints his Baſtard Son of his Intentions to aſſiſt the King, and that the French were come over to his Aid; but he betrays him, and ſo his Eyes are put out, and he turn'd out of Doors, being inform'd that his Baſtard Son had done it all, by whom deceiv'd he had believ'd his own Son Edgar had contriv'd his Death; and who, for fear of the Proclamation againſt him, wander'd like Tom a Bedlam. He meets with the King, and with his Father afterwards, on whoſe Head there being a Price ſet, Gonerill's Steward meeting him, offers to kill him, but is prevented by Edgar's killing of him, about whom he finds Gonerill's Letters to the Baſtard, being Love with him, and alſo a Deſign againſt the Duke of Albany her Husband; to whom he carries it, before the Battle betwixt the Britains, and the French under Cordelia's Command, whom ſhe brought to the King's Aſſiſtance againſt her unnatural Siſters; but being beaten, and the King and ſhe taken Priſoners, the Baſtard orders them to be kill'd in Priſon. And Edgar having fought and kill'd the Baſtard, Regan being poiſon'd by her Siſter Gonerill, and ſhe being upbraided by her Husband with the Guilt, but more affected with the loſs of Edmund, kills herſelf: he owns his Warrant out againſt the King and Cordelia; they ſend to ſave them but come too late, Cordelia being hang'd, but the King kill'd the Rogue that hang'd her, but breaks his Heart and dies: ſo the Play ends.

The King and Cordelia ought by no means to have dy'd, and therefore Mr. Tate has very juſtly alter'd that Particular; which muſt diſguſt the Reader and Audience, to have Virtue and Piety meet ſo unjuſt a Reward. So that this Plot, tho of ſo celebrated a Play, has none of the Ends of Tragedy, moving neither Fear nor Pity. We rejoice at the Death of the Baſtard and the two Siſters, as of Monſters in Nature, under whom the very Earth muſt groan. And we ſee, with Horror and Indignation, the Death of the King, Cordelia, and Kent; tho of the three, the King only cou'd move pity, if that were not loſt in the Indignation and Horror the Death of the other two produces: for he is a truly Tragic Character, not ſupremely virtuous nor ſcandalouſly vicious; he is made up of Choler and Obſtinacy, Frailties pardonable enough in old Men, and yet what drew on him all the Misfortunes of his Life.

The Baſtard's Speech of the weakneſs of laying our Fate and Follies on the Stars, is worth reading—— This is the excellent Foppery of the World, that when we are ſick in Fortune, &c.

Lear's Paſſion on the Ingratitude of his Daughter Gonerill, is very well; and his Curſes on her very well, and naturally choſe. Lear's Speech to Regan is very well:

No, Regan, thou ſhalt ne'er have my Curſe.

And his Paſſion in this whole Scene, agreeable to the Manners.

The Needs of Life few.

O reaſon not the Need! our baſeſt Beggars
Are in the pooreſt things ſuperfluous.
Allow not Nature more than Nature needs;
Man's Life is cheap as Beaſts, &c.

Kent's Deſcription of the tempeſtuous Night, is very good.

——Things that love Night,
Love not ſuch Nights as theſe. The wrathful Skies
Gallow the very Wanderers of the Dark, &c.

There is nothing more beautiful than Lear's firſt Starts of Madneſs, when Edgar comes out in the Habit of a Madman——Didſt thou give all to thy Daughters; and art thou come to this? And again,—Have his his Daughters brought him to this paſs? Cou'dſt thou ſave nothing? Wou'dſt thou give 'em all?

——Now all the Plagues, that in the pendulous Air
Hang fated o'er Mens Faults, light on thy Daughters.
Kent. He has no Daughter, Sir.
Lear. Death, Traitor, nothing cou'd have ſubdued Nature
To ſuch a Lowneſs, but his unkind Daughters, &c.

Edgar's Account of a Serving-man, is very pretty; as all that he ſays in the Play, is according to the Character, which his Affairs oblige him to aſſume.

On Man.

Man is no more than this, conſider him well!
Thou ow'ſt the Worm no Silk, the Beaſt no Hide,
The Sheep no Wool, the Cat no Perfume. How!
Here's three on's are ſophiſticated. Thou art the thing it ſelf.
Unaccommodated Man is no more,
But ſuch a bare, poor, forked Animal
As thou art——

Edgar's Deſcription of the Precipice of Dover-Cliff, is very good.

——How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to caſt ones Eyes ſo low, &c.

Againſt the groſs and idolatrous Flattery of Princes, ſee Lear's Madneſs: "They flatter'd me like a Dog, and told me that I had white Hairs "in my Beard, e'er the black ones were there, to ſay Ay and No to "every thing I ſaid——Ay and No too was no good Divinity. When the Rain came to wet me once, and the Wind to make me chatter, when the Thunder wou'd not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I ſmelt them out——Go to, they are not Men of their Words; they told me I was every thing; 'tis a Lye, I am not Ague-proof.

For this Story read Milton's and Tyrrel's Hiſtory of England, and Leland, with Geoffry of Monmouth, &c.

The Argument of the Moor of Venice.

Othello, a noble Moor or Negro, who had by long faithful Services, and brave Deeds, eſtabliſh'd himſelf in the Opinion of the Senate of Venice, wins the Affections of Deſdemona, Daughter to Brabantio, one of the Senators, marries her unknown to her Father, and with the Senator's Leave, carries her with him to Cyprus, his Province. He makes Caſſio his Lieutenant, tho Iago had ſollicited the Poſt by his Friends for himſelf; which Refuſal, join'd with a Jealouſy that Othello had been too familiar with his Wife, makes him contrive the Deſtruction of Caſſio and the Moor, to gratify his Revenge, and his Ambition. But having no way to take a Vengeance on the Moor, proportion'd to his imaginary and double Injury but this, he draws him with a great deal of Cunning into a Jealouſy of his Wife, and that by a Chain of Circumſtances contriv'd to that purpoſe, and urg'd with all the taking Inſinuations imaginable. Othello, by theſe means won to a Belief of his own Infamy, reſolves the Murder of his Wife and Caſſio, whom he concluded guilty. Iago undertakes the diſpatching Caſſio, whoſe Commiſſion he had already got; which deſigning to do by Roderigo, who had been his Dupe, in hopes by his means to enjoy Deſdemona, and who now grew impatient of any longer Delay; he miſſing his Aim is wounded, and kill'd outright by Iago, to ſtop him from telling any tales of him. But the Moor effectually puts his Revenge in execution on his Wife; which is no ſooner done, but he is convinc'd of his Error, and in Remorſe kills himſelf; whilſt Iago, the Cauſe of all this Villany, having mortally wounded his Wife for diſcovering of it, is born away to a more ignominious Puniſhment; and Caſſio is made Governour of Cyprus.

I have drawn the Fable with as much favour to the Author as I poſſibly cou'd; yet I muſt own that the Faults found in it by Mr. Rymer, are but too viſible for the moſt part. That of making a Negro the Hero or chief Character of the Play, wou'd ſhock any one; for it is not the Rationale of the thing, and the Deductions, that may thence be brought to diminiſh the Oppoſition betwixt the different Colours of Mankind, that wou'd be ſufficient to take away that which is ſhocking in this Story; ſince this entirely depends on Cuſtom, which makes it ſo: and when a common Woman admits a Negro to a Commerce with her, every one almoſt ſtarts at the Choice; much more in a Woman of Virtue. And indeed Iago, Brabantio, &c. have ſhewn ſuch Reaſons as make it monſtrous. I wonder Shakeſpear ſaw this in the Perſons of his Play, and not in his own Judgment. If Othello had been made deformed, and not over-young, but no Black,

Black, it had removed moſt of the Abſurdities; but now it pleaſes only by Preſcription. 'Tis poſſible, that an innocent tender young Woman, who knew little of the World, might be won by the brave Actions of a gallant Man, not to regard his Age or Deformities; but Nature, or what is all one in this Caſe, Cuſtom, having put ſuch a Bar, as ſo oppoſite a Colour, takes away our Pity from her, and only raiſes our Indignation againſt him. I ſhall paſs over the other Obſervations founded on this Error, ſince they have been ſufficiently taken notice of already. It muſt be own'd that Shakeſpear drew Men better than Women, to whom indeed he has ſeldom given any conſiderable Place in his Plays: Here, and in Romeo and Juliet, he has done moſt in this matter; but here he has not given any graceful Touches to Deſdemona, in many places of her Part.

Whether the Motives of Othello's Jealouſy be ſtrong enough to free him from the Imputation of Levity and Folly, I will not determine; ſince Jealouſy is born often of very ſlight Occaſions, eſpecially in the Breaſts of Men of thoſe warmer Climates. Yet this muſt be ſaid, Shakeſpear has manag'd the Scene ſo well, that it is that alone which ſupports his Play, and impoſes on the Audience ſo very ſucceſsfully, that till a Reformation of the Stage comes, I believe it will always be kindly receiv'd.

Iago is a Character that can hardly be admitted into the Tragic Scene, tho it is qualify'd by his being puſh'd on by Revenge, Ambition and Jealouſy; becauſe he ſeems to declare himſelf a ſettled Villain. But leaving theſe things to every Man's Humour, which is in our Age all the Rule of Judging, let us take a View of what we can find beautiful in the Reflections and Sentiments.

Preferment.

> ——'Tis the Curſe of Service;
> Preferment goes by Letter and Affection,
> And not by old Gradation, where each Second
> Stood Heir to the Firſt, &c.

So that, notwithſtanding our Murmurers in the Army and other Places, we find Merit and Right have been poſt-pon'd to Favour long before our Days. Iago's Harangue againſt Honeſty is ſevere enough; and 'tis pity the Satire is too true. Brabantio urges what I before remark'd of the Improbability of his Daughter's being won by the Moor, but by Charms and Witch-craft.

I do not think Othello's Account to the Senate, of the Progreſs of his Love with Deſdemona, ſo ridiculous as Mr. Rymer makes it; for, as for the Canibals, and Men whoſe Heads grow beneath their Shoulders, &c. being Objects of vulgar Credulity, they are as probable and as moving as the Cyclops and Harpies of Virgil; and then, abating for the Colour of the the Moor, and the Improbability of his having that Poſt, the Tale has a great deal of the Pathos. Iago, to inſinuate into Roderigo, that he may have hopes of Deſdemona ſays,——Mark me, with what violence ſhe lov'd the Moor, but for bragging and telling her fantaſtical Lyes.

There are in this Play, as well as in moſt of this Poet, a great abundance of Soliloquies, in which the Dramatic Perſon diſcourſes with the Audience, his Deſigns, his Temper, &c. which are highly unnatural, and not to be imitated by any one.

The Moor has not bedded his Lady till he came to Cyprus; and yet it is before and after urg'd, that ſhe was or might be ſated with him. But thoſe little Forgetfulneſſes are not worth minding.

Againſt Reputation.

Reputation is an idle, and moſt falſe Impoſition, oft got without Merit, and loſt without deſerving, &c.

Content is Wealth.

Poor, and Content, is Rich, and Rich enough;
But Riches fineleſs, is as poor as Winter.

Othello's Soliloquy, before he kills Deſdemona, has been much admir'd.

The Argument of Anthony and Cleopatra.

THIS Play is the Hiſtory of Anthony and Cleopatra, from the Death of Fulvia to the taking of Alexandria, and the Death of Cleopatra. The Scene is ſometimes at Rome, ſometimes in Ægypt, ſometimes at Sea, and ſometimes at Land; and ſeldom a Line allow'd for a Paſſage to ſo great a Diſtance; and the Play is full of Scenes ſtrangely broken, many of which exceed not ten Lines. It is needleſs to write the Story, ſince it is ſo known to every body, that Anthony fell in love with Cleopatra, that after Fulvia's Death he marry'd Octavia the Siſter of Auguſtus, to piece up the Flaws that Fulvia and mutual Jealouſies had made; that however he ſoon relaps'd to Cleopatra, and that War enſuing Anthony's ill Conduct loſt the Day at Actium firſt, and afterwards at Alexandria; where he kill'd himſelf with his Sword, and Cleopatra with the Sting of an Aſpic, to avoid being carry'd in Triumph by Auguſtus. In this Play indeed Sextus Pompeius is brought in, and the Treat he gave Anthony, Lepidus, and Auguſtus, on board his Veſſel.

Auguſtus

Auguſtus gives Anthony his true Character:

——When thou once
Were beaten from Mutina, &c.

And the Concern and Care of Cleopatra in the next Page is not unnatural——Oh! Charmion! where think'ſt thou he is now? Pompey's Wiſh againſt Anthony is very apt and pretty.

But all the Charms of Love,
Salt Cleopatra, ſoften thy wand Lips.

I muſt not omit the Deſcription Enobarbus gives of Cleopatra's ſailing down the Cydnos, becauſe Mr. Dryden has given us one of the ſame in his All for Love, which I ſhall here compare together, and leave the Deciſion of the Victory to the impartial Reader.

The Barge ſhe ſate in, like a burniſhed Throne,
Burnt on the Water: the Poope was beaten Gold,
Purple the Sails, and ſo perfumed that
The Winds were Loveſick.
With them the Oars were Silver,
Which to the Tune of Flutes kept Stroke, and made
The Water which they beat, to follow faſter,
As amorous of their Strokes. For her own Perſon,
It beggar'd all Deſcription. She did lie
In her Pavilion; Cloth of Gold, of Tiſſue,
O'erpicturing that Venus, where we ſee
The Fancy out-work Nature. On each ſide her
Stood pretty dimpled Boys, like ſmiling Cupids,
With divers coloured Fanns, whoſe Wind did ſeem
To glowe the delicate Cheeks, which they did cool,
And what they did, undid.
Her Gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many Mermaids tended her i'th' Eyes,
And made their Bends Adornings. At the Helm
A ſeeming Mermaid ſteers; the ſilken Tackles
Swell with the Touches of thoſe Flower-ſoft Hands,
That yarely frame the Office. From the Barge
A ſtrange inviſible Perfume hits the Senſe
Of the adjacent Wharfs. The City caſt her
People out upon her, and Anthony,
Enthron'd in the Market-place, did ſit alone,
Whiſtling to the Air, which but for Vacancy

Had

Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a Gap in Nature.

Mr. Dryden in his All for Love, Act third, where Anthony gives it to Dolabella, has theſe Words.

Her Gally down the Silver Cydnos row'd,
The Tackling Silk, the Streamers wav'd with Gold,
The gentle Winds were lodg'd in Purple Sails.
Her Nymphs, like Nereids, round her Couch were plac'd,
Where ſhe, another Sea-born Venus, lay.
She lay, and leant her Cheek upon her Hand,
And caſt a Look ſo languiſhingly ſweet,
As if ſecure of all Beholders Hearts,
Neglecting ſhe cou'd take 'em: Boys, like Cupids,
Stood fanning with their painted Wings, the Winds
That play'd about her Face; but if ſhe ſmil'd,
A darting Glory ſeem'd to blaze abroad,
That Mens deſiring Eyes were never wearied,
But hung upon the Object. To ſoft Flutes
The ſilver Oars kept time; and while they played,
The Hearing gave new Pleaſure to the Sight,
And both to Thought. 'Twas Heaven (or ſomewhat more)
For ſhe ſo charm'd all Hearts, that gazing Crowds
Stood panting on the Shore, and wanted Breath
To give their welcome Voice——

Both Poets are a little beholden to the Hiſtorian for at leaſt the Ground-work of this Deſcription.

Fortune forms our Judgment.

——I ſee Mens Judgments are
A Parcel of their Fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward Quality after them
To ſuffer all alike, &c.

Loyalty.

Mine Honeſty and I begin to ſquare,
The Loyalty well-held to Fools does make
Our Faith mere Folly, &c.

The

The Incident of Eros killing himself instead of Anthony when his back is turn'd, Mr. Dryden has borrow'd in his All for Love; for Ventidius's and Cleopatra's sending him word that she had kill'd her self, is made use of in near the same manner by our late Laureat, in the forequoted Play of his.

For the Plot or Story of this Piece, read Plutarch's Life of Anthony; Suetonius in Aug. Dion Cassius, lib 48. Orosius, l 6. c. 7. Cluny. l. 4. c. 11. Appian. l. 5.

The Argument of Cymbeline.

Cymbeline, King of Britain in the Time of Augustus, having lost his Sons, Guiderius and Aviragus, had only one Daughter remaining, call'd Imogen, who privately married Posthumus, contrary to her Father's Will; who design'd her for Clotten the Queen's Son by a former Husband, who was a silly affected proud Fellow. Posthumus is therefore banish'd Britain, and goes to Rome, where he wagers with one Jacimo an Italian, that he cannot corrupt his Lady. He gives him Letters to her, and he takes a Journey into Britain on purpose, tries her by Words in vain, so gets Leave to put a Chest of Treasure into her Chamber for one Night; in which being convey'd, he lets himself out when she is asleep, observes the Room, takes away the Bracelet from her Arm, views a Mark under her Breast, and retires into his Chest again, and is the next Day carried away by his Men; then returns to Rome, and by these Tokens persuades Posthumus that he had lain with his Wife, so has the Chain and the Ring, whilst Posthumus sends an Order to Pisanio his Man to get his Mistress down to Milford Haven, and there to murder her, for having betray'd his Honour in the Embraces of another. Imogen with Joy goes with him, hoping to meet her Husband there, as her Letter promis'd; but when Pisanio shew'd her his Order to kill her for Adultery, she is highly concern'd and begs her Death, but he persuades her to stay there in Boy's Clothes to get into the Service of Lucius the Roman General; and so she might come near Posthumus and observe him, to whom Pisanio sent word, that he had kill'd her according to his Order. Imogen, in the mean while, losing her way among the Mountains, wanders till she is almost starved, when finding a Cave and Victuals, she enters and falls to eating, where Bellarius, Guiderius, and Aviragus, the Masters of that Cave, return and find her; and taking her for a Boy, are very fond of her, calling her Brother, &c. But she being sick, takes something out of a Vial given her by Pisanio, which he had from the Queen as a Cordial, tho meant for a Poison: The Brothers and the Father going again out to hunt, meet with Clotten, who was come thither in the Clothes of Poſthumus, on his underſtanding that Imogen was fled thither; but bearing himſelf inſolently to Guiderius and Aviragus, one of them fights and kills him, and cuts off his Head; and having triumph'd over him, threw his Head into the Sea. But returning home, they find Fidele dead (for by that Name Imogen call'd herſelf in that Habit) they ſing her Dirge, and leave her with the dead and headleſs Body of Clotten; ſhe comes to herſelf again, and finding a Body without a Head, and in the Clothes of Poſthumus, imagines it to be him ſlain; and is found weeping o'er the Body, by Lucius the Roman General, who was come now with his Army to invade Britain, Cymbeline having refus'd to pay the Tribute ſettled with Julius Cæſar. He takes her for his Page: Poſthumus being come over with the Romans, before the day of Battle, changes his Habit for a poor Country Fellow's; and Bellarius, not able to reſtrain Guiderius and Aviragus from the Fight, goes with them, and there reſcue the King now almoſt taken Priſoner; and the Battle being chang'd by the Valour of theſe four, the Romans are beat; ſo Poſthumus puts on his Roman Habit again, that he might be taken and put to death, being weary of Life for the Death of Imogen. He therefore, and Lucius and Jacimo, are put in Priſon, and reſerv'd for Execution. Fidele is taken by the King for his Page, and of her he is ſo fond, as to grant her whatever Life ſhe demanded among the Roman Priſoners. She ſeeing the Ring of Poſthumus on Jacimo's Finger, demands that he be oblig'd to diſcover how he came by it. Jacimo then owns all the Roguery, and Poſthumus then diſcovers himſelf, and ſays that he had murder'd Imogen, who coming to embrace him, he ſtrikes her from him, ſuppoſing her only a Page; but ſhe being come to her ſelf, owns that ſhe is Imogen. And ſhe accuſing Piſanio of having given her Poiſon, the Phyſician and the Queen's Maids juſtify him by letting the King know that the Queen, on her Death-bed, own'd that ſhe had given Piſanio a Draught for a Cordial, that wou'd poiſon him, at the ſame time confeſſing her guilty Deſign againſt the King himſelf. Guiderius owning that he had kill'd Clotten, the King orders him to be put to death, when Bellarius diſcovers that he and Aviragus are the King's Sons. And Poſthumus owning himſelf to be the Country Fellow that behav'd himſelf ſo well, all are forgiven, and Peace made, Cymbeline agreeing to pay the Tribute, tho a Conqueror.

Tho the uſual Abſurdities of irregular Plots abound in this, yet there is ſomething in the Diſcovery that is very touching. The Character of the King, Queen, and Clotten, do not ſeem extremely agreeable to their Quality. This Play has been alter'd by Mr. Durfey, but whether to its Advantage or not I will not determine, becauſe I have not the Alteration by me; but I am afraid the Gentleman who alter'd it, was not ſo well acquainted with the Rules of Art, as to be able to improve the Cymbeline of Shakeſpear. He himſelf makes this Objection againſt a main Incident of the Play —— 2 Gal. That a King's Children ſhould be ſo conveyed, ſo ſlackly

ſlackly guarded, and the Search ſo ſlow, that cou'd not trace them—— 1 Gent. Howſoe'er 'tis ſtrange, or that the Negligence may well be laugh'd at, yet it is true, &c. But he has here, as in other things, ſlighted the Abſurdity, and kept to the Error knowingly; but the Anſwer he puts in the firſt Gentleman's Mouth is of no Validity, were it ſo, viz. Yet it is true; for here Probability is more to be ſought than Truth, which is ſometimes ſo merely poſſible, that it can ſcarce find Belief. And indeed moſt of the Incidents of this Play ſmell rankly of Romance. Jacimo's falſe Accuſation of Poſthumus to his Wife is well enough, and has many good Lines in it.

On Gold.

——'Tis Gold,
Which buys Admittance; oft it do's, yea, and makes Diana's Rangers falſe themſelves, and yield up
Their Does to the Stand o' th' Stealer, &c.

Againſt Women.

Is there no way for Men to be, but Women
Muſt be half Workers? &c.

The Speech of Bellarius to Aviragus and Guiderius, contains many fine Reflections——

The Handmaids of all Women, or more truly
Woman its pretty ſelf into a waggiſh Courage,
Ready in Gybes, quick-anſwer'd, ſaucy, and
As quarrelous as a Weezel, &c.

Imogen on Lyes and Falſhood, pretty enough: Two Beggars told me I could not miſs my Way; will poor Folks lye? &c.

Melancholy.

——Oh! Melancholy,
Who ever yet cou'd ſound thy Bottom?

The Plot of this Play is taken from Boccace's Novels, Day 2. Nov. 9.

There are beſides theſe, on which I have made no Remarks, Pericles Prince of Tyre, The London Prodigal, Thomas Lord Cromwel,

Sir John Old-caſtle, The Puritan, or The Widow of Watling-ſtreet, The Yorkſhire Tragedy, and Locrine; which, as I am very well aſſur'd, are none of Shakeſpear's, nor have any thing in them to give the leaſt Ground to think them his; not ſo much as a Line; the Style, the manner of Diction, the Humours, the Dialogue, as diſtinct as any thing can poſſibly be. In the worſt of his which are genuine, there are always ſome Lines, various Expreſſions, and the turn of Thought which diſcover it to have been the Product of Shakeſpear: But in theſe Seven I can find none of theſe Signs.

I Have thus at laſt paſt thro all Shakeſpear's Plays, in which if any good Judge ſhall think me too partial to my Author, they muſt give me the Allowance of an Editor, who can ſeldom ſee a Fault in the Author, that he publiſhes; nay, if he publiſh two of the ſame kind, that which is then under Conſideration, has the Advantage, and excells all others. Beſides, if I have ſhewn you all that was any way beautiful in him, I have alſo been ſo juſt to the Art, as often to point out his Errors in that particular. And having gone over this celebrated Author with ſo much Care, an Author aſſerted by the Number of his Admirers (whom to oppoſe is counted little leſs than Hereſy in Poetry) to be the greateſt Genius of the modern Times, eſpecially of this Nation, I find myſelf confirm'd in the Opinion I have long had of the Antients in the Drama, I mean in Tragedy: for having been ſo long converſant with the Confuſions of want of Art in this Poet, tho ſupported with all the Advantages of a great Genius; the Beauty of Order, Uniformity, and Harmony of Deſign appears infinitely more Charming; and that is only to be found in the Greek Poets: tho Otway, and a very few Plays wrote by ſome yet living, are not without their juſt Praiſe; but thoſe are not ſuch as have been the longeſt lived on the Stage, tho very well receiv'd; it being a difficult Matter to bring ſuch a Town to judge of the Man by the Performance, and not of the Performance by the Man. Shakeſpear is indeed ſtor'd with a great many Beauties, but they are in a heap of Rubbiſh; and as in the Ruins of a magnificent Pile, we are pleas'd with the Capitals of Pillars, the Baſſo-relievos, and the like, as we meet with them, yet how infinitely more beautiful and charming muſt it be to behold them in their proper Places in the ſtanding Building, where every thing anſwers the other, and one Harmony of all the Parts heightens the Excellence even of thoſe Parts: And thus if thoſe partial Beauties of Shakeſpear cou'd be, or had been view'd in a true Poſition with their Correſpondence to ſome perfect Whole, they wou'd receive a Praiſe, that they cannot, as they are, come up to.

This

This wou'd make me ſurpriz'd to find ſo many Advocates for Confuſion; in the Preference they give the modern Tragic Poets above Order in Sophocles, and Euripides; did I not remember, that this is done by Perſons, who are totally ignorant of the Art, and are only pleas'd by Vogue, and Whimſey; and the Authors themſelves, who wanting Genius, and Skill, have rail'd at the Excellence they could not arrive at, being humbly content with the precarious Applauſe of Fools; which as it was at firſt given without Reaſon, ſo is loſt with as little: for whilſt there is no Standard of Excellence, there can be no ſuch thing as Excellence, which is ſuch a levelling Principle in Poetry, as all Men who wou'd pretend to the leaſt Merit, ſhou'd, for their own ſakes, explode, as the genuine Child of Ignorance and Barbariſm.

But I am more ſurpriz'd to find Mr. Dryden in the Number of the Flatterers of the Poets of the Age, who having had the Education of a Scholar, heighten'd it with the Beauties of a great Genius. But his Arguments for the Moderns againſt the Ancients, are worthy the Cauſe he defends, which is highly ridiculous. For his firſt Argument is, That the Greek Tragedies were not divided into Acts. But firſt he ſhou'd have conſider'd, that this Defect (if it be one) might be the Effect of the Ignorance, or Neglect of the Tranſcribers, greater Misfortunes than that having befal'n Authors of that Antiquity in the dark Times of Gothic Ignorance: But I am afraid, that I cannot eaſily yield that this Diviſion into Acts is any Perfection, ſince it plainly breaks off the Continuity of the Action, which is by the Chorus kept on, without any Pauſe. But Ariſtotle has given us all the Quantitative Parts of a Play, as the Prologue or Protaſis, the Epiſode, Exode, and Chorus, which perfectly diſtinguiſh'd all the Buſineſs and Order of the whole Plot of the Play; for which the Moderns have given us no Rules in regard of what is proper to each ACT. 'Tis true, that in the Time of Horace the Diſtinction of Acts was receiv'd, and their Number ſettled as inviolable.

Neu brevior quinto, neu ſit productior, Actu.

But as this was no Improvement in the Art of the Drama, ſo had it been ſo, 'tis plain, that the Moderns cou'd not make any Pretence to the Invention, and by Conſequence can give us no manner of Advantage over the Greek Poets in that particular.

His next Argument is—That the Tragedies of the Greeks were taken from ſome Tale drawn from Thebes or Troy, or at leaſt ſomething, that happen'd in thoſe Ages, which were ſo known to the Audience, that they cou'd not afford any Delight. But let us hear his own Words — And the People as ſoon as ever they heard the Name of Oedipus, knew as well as the Poet, that he had kill'd his Father by Miſtake, and committed Inceſt with his Mother, before the Play; that they were now to hear of a great great Plague, an Oracle, and the Ghoſt of Laius; ſo that they ſet with a yawning Expectation till he was to come with his Eyes out, and ſpeak an hundred or two of Verſes in a tragic Tone, in Complaint of his Misfortunes. But one Oedipus, Hercules, or Medea, had been tolerable; good People, they ſcap'd not ſo cheap, they had ſtill the Chapon bouille ſet before them, till their Appetities were cloy'd with the ſame Diſh, and the Novelty being gone, the Pleaſure vaniſh'd—— So that one main End of Dramatic Poetry in its Definition, which was to cauſe Delight, was deſtroy'd.

I have tranſcrib'd ſo many of his own Words meerly to ſhew the vain and wretched Triumph of a Man, who was ſo far from gaining any Advantage over the Ancients, that he is out in every Particular. That moſt of the Fables were taken from thoſe celebrated Stories of the fabulous Age of Greece, is true; but that all are ſo, is far from Truth; for the Perſians of Æſchylus was not ſo, and ſome of Agatho's, and other of the Greek Poets now loſt, were pure Fictions of their own, as is plain from Ariſtotle's Art of Poetry, and from Horace's Rule.

Si quid inexpertum Scenæ committis, & audes
Perſonam formare novam, ſervetur ad imum
Qualis ab incepto proceſſerit, & ſibi conſtet, &c.

Nay this was ſo common a Practice, that Ariſtotle himſelf draws one of his Rules from it, and from which Horace took that juſt quoted. Next Mr. Dryden was either ignorant, or forgot, that tho the ſame Action was wrote upon by ſeveral of the Greek Poets, yet the Conduct and Management of it was always different, and the Ingenuity of that Variation was extremely entertaining to ſo polite a People. Thus Euripides took the Story of Iphigenia in Tauris, and Polyides, and Agatho, and others did the ſame, yet the Diſcovery is made in much a different Manner. Euripides makes Iphigenia, before ſhe goes to ſacrifice Oreſtes, write a Letter to her Brother Oreſtes, and give it to Pylades to deliver to him, and leſt he ſhould loſe the Letter, tells him the Contents of it, by which the Diſcovery is made, that ſhe is Iphigenia, which with the Proof of Oreſtes, ſaves his Life, and they both make their Eſcape. Polyides made a Play on the ſame Subject, in which Oreſtes was brought to the Altar to be ſacrific'd, who when he was going to receive the fatal Blow from the Hands of his Siſter Iphigenia, cries out, As my Siſter was ſacrific'd to Diana, ſo muſt I be ſacrific'd to the ſame. This made Iphigenia know her Brother, and ſave him. For indeed the various and different Traditions of thoſe Stories left the Poet at liberty to take which he pleas'd, and that gave a Variety even to the ſame Story; as in the Revenge of Alcmæon for his Father's Death; ſome make him kill his Mother knowingly, as

So-

Sophocles has made Oreſtes in his Electra; ſome, not knowing her till after he had done the Deed, and others prevent the Deed by a Diſcovery of her being his Mother. And theſe Diſcoveries were extreamly entertaining to People of that fine Taſte, which the Athenians had, as is plain from what Plutarch ſays, when he tells us, that when Merope went to kill her Son, there was a murmuring among the Spectators, which ſhew'd not only their Attention, but the Intereſt they gave themſelves in the Misfortune of a Mother, who was going to kill her Son, and of a Son, who was to die by the Hands of his Mother.

But methinks that if this had been a real Objection, he wou'd never have choſe to write upon the Story of Anthony after Shakeſpear, and ſome others. The various Conduct of the ſame Story takes away that Dullneſs which he apprehends from hearing the ſame ſo often. This is confirm'd by the beginning of Mr. Dryden's own Preface to All for Love —— The Death of Anthony and Cleopatra, ſays he, is a Subject which has been treated by the greateſt Wits of our Nation after Shakeſpear; and by all ſo variouſly, that their Example has given me the Confidence to try my ſelf in the Bow of Ulyſſes among the Crowd of Suiters, and with all to take my own Meaſures in aiming at the Mark.

But this indeed was wrote ſome time after the Eſſay on Poetry, and may therefore differ from it, as moſt of Mr. Dryden's critical Prefaces do. He has given another Inſtance in his Oedipus, wrote upon not only by the Greeks, Seneca, and Corneille, but by ſome of our old Engliſh Poets; yet he has told us, that they are different Plays, tho on the ſame Subject. His indeed differs extremely from that of Sophocles; and tho he condemns Seneca abſolutely, and Corneille almoſt as much, yet he has taken the Deſcription of the Plague, the Ghoſt of Laius from Seneca, and an Under-plot from Corneille; not that his Under-plot is the ſame, but as an Under-plot it is the ſame Error copy'd from a Man he condemn'd. And here I can't but take notice, that of all he has ſaid againſt Oedipus in the foregoing Quotation, there is not one particular to be found in Sophocles. He has no Ghoſt of Laius, he has no ſtir in a Deſcription of a Plague, nor any but an extreme pathetic Complaint of his Misfortunes.

But after all, this Talk of the Pleaſure's being vaniſh'd after the Novelty is gone, is highly ridiculous; for this wou'd hold good againſt all Plays that had been ſeen, above once, and be more ſo in thoſe of Corneille, and his Engliſh Imitations, which depend on Admiration, or the Intricacy of an Intrigue, which after it has been ſeen, like a Jugler's Tricks when known, has nothing entertaining; for we then knew it all, as well as the Athenians cou'd know Oedipus, Thyeſtes, or any other of the Greek Stories; as for Example, the Diſcovery in the Spaniſh Fryar, Don Sebaſtian, the Accidents of the Five Hours Adventures, &c. yet Mr. Dryden wou'd never have yielded, that the Argument againſt the Fables of the Antients wou'd hold good againſt the acting, or ſeeing any of his Plays but once.

But

But the Paſſions or Manners of the Antients are ſo admirably perform'd, the Harmony of the Parts ſo charming and perfect, that they will bear viewing like an admirable Piece of Painting for ever, and afford a ſtrong and lively Pleaſure. It is not a little Knot, or Difficulty in a vain Intrigue, that ſupports a Play or gives that Pleaſure, which is deriv'd from Tragedy; but it is the good and judicious Contrivance and Conduct of the whole in Incidents, productive of Terror and Compaſſion; and by the artful Working up of the Paſſions, and Expreſſion of the Manners, Sentiments and the like; which muſt delight the ſenſible Soul, when ever they are ſeen.

Beſides, his Deſcription of the Oſcitation, and languid beholding of the Athenian Plays without Pleaſure, is directly contrary to the very matter of Fact, as is plain from the Inſtance of Merope I gave out of Plutarch, and from the Athenians Practice, who ſate whole Days to ſee theſe Performances.

In the next Place, he brings Tragi-Comedies as a Proof of the Preference of the Moderns to the Antients, tho as weakly and to as little Purpoſe to his Cauſe, as any thing before urg'd. But let us ſee his own Words—I muſt therefore have ſtronger Arguments e'er I am convinc'd, that Compaſſion and Mirth in the ſame Subject deſtroy each other, and in the mean time cannot but conclude to the Honour of our Nation, that we have invented, increas'd, and perfected, a more pleaſant way of Writing, than ever was known to the Antients, or Moderns of any Nation, which is Tragi-Comedy.

There is ſcarce a Word of this Quotation which is true either in Fact or Criticiſm. For firſt, we did not invent Tragi-Comedy, as is plain from the Prologue of Plautus to his Amphitryo.

> Faciam ut commiſſa ſit Tragicomœdia;
> Nam me perpetuo facere ut ſit Comœdia,
> Reges quo veniant, & Dii, non par arbitror.
> Quid igitur? quoniam hic ſervus Partes quoq; habet,
> Faciam proindè, ut dixi, Tragicomœdiam.

Nay, this unnatural Mixture was even before Tragedy was in Perfection; that is, in the Infancy of the Stage, in both Athens and Rome; till rejected, and the Stage reformed from it by the greateſt Wits and Poets of theſe Cities, as a Mixture wholly monſtrous and unnatural. Nam Dicacitatem & Facetias per ſe Tragœdia non habet, quippe cui ſit Riſus inimicus (ut ait Demetrius Phalerius) & in qua nil niſi miſerabile & terrificum oſtendatur. For Wit and Railery belong not properly to Tragedy, to which Laughter is an Enemy (as Demetrius Phalerius obſerves) in which nothing is ſhown, but what is Pitiful, and Terrible.

Thus

Thus what the Romans and Greeks rejected from the firſt ignorant Performances in their firſt Eſſays of the Stage, Mr. Dryden has made the higheſt Perfection we have over them; and ſo it is indeed, for we differ from them in nothing but in retaining thoſe Faults which the Ignorance of our firſt Writers brought in; which they threw aſide from their ruder Sketches, that they might indeed arrive at a real Perfection.

But Mr. Dryden goes on — He tells us that we cannot ſo ſpeedily recollect our ſelves after a Scene of great Paſſion and Concernment, as to paſs to another of Mirth and Humour, and enjoy it with any Reliſh. But why ſhould he imagine the Soul of Man more heavy than his Senſes? Does not the Eye paſs from an unpleaſant Object to a pleaſant one, in much ſhorter Time than is requir'd to this? And does not the Unpleaſantneſs of the firſt commend the Beauty of the latter? The old Rule of Logic might have convinc'd him, that Contraries plac'd near, ſet off each other, &c.

I wonder he would lay the Objection ſo ſtrong, and yet anſwer it ſo weakly; for the Soul can no more paſs in a Moment from the Tumult of a ſtrong Paſſion in which it is throughly engag'd, than the Sea can paſs from the moſt turbulent and furious Storm into a perfect Calm in a Moment. There muſt be Time for the terrible Emotion to ſubſide by degrees into a Calm; and there muſt be a gradual Paſſage from the Extreme of Grief, Pity, or the like, to its oppoſite Mirth, Humour, or Laughter. The Simile, therefore, which he lays down as a Proof, is ſo far from an Argument of what he contends for, that it is in no manner a Parallel; nor even will it hold in it ſelf as here urg'd. There is no Agreement betwixt the Paſſage of the Eye from one Object to another of different, nay, contrary Kinds, and a Soul work'd up to the Height of Grief, Pity, Indignation, Love, &c. ſtarting from theſe in a Moment to calm Enjoyment of Mirth, and Laughter: nor is this any Argument of the Heavineſs of the Soul; for 'tis impoſſible to quit that in a Moment, in which it was engag'd by Steps., or Degrees. Here we have nothing to do with Heavineſs or Lightneſs but in a metaphorical Senſe, meaning Dullneſs or Vivacity: but ſuch a ſwift Paſſage of the Soul from oppoſite to oppoſite, is a Proof of a Dullneſs of Spirit, which could not be engaged throughly in any Paſſion. But the Inſtance of the Eye it ſelf is not rightly ſuppos'd; for if the Eye be fixt with Pleaſure on a grave and ſerious Object, ſuppoſe the taking our Saviour from the Croſs, by Jordan of Antwerp, the Eye thus attach'd will neither ſoon, nor eaſily remove it ſelf to look on a Droll-piece of Hemskirk, &c. But granting that it remove with Eaſe and Swiftneſs from an Object that is unpleaſant, to one that is delightful; will it return with the ſame Facility from the pleaſant to the unpleaſant? as in Tragi-comedy, where the Soul is to ſtart from Tears to Laughter, and from Laughter to Tears, five times in one Play: Such a Soul muſt be like ſome Childrens and Womens, who can weep and laugh in a Breath. But as Mr. Dryden, in this Inſtance, did not conſider the Nature of the Soul, ſo did he not that of the Eye; for Objects are pleaſing or diſpleaſing to that, only as they pleaſe or diſpleaſe the Mind: ſo that he leaves the Controverſy undecided, or rarher he perfectly yields the Point by bringing nothing againſt it of the leaſt Force and Validity. If by this Inſtance he means only the mere mechanic Motion of the Eye, without any Concern in the Object, it has as little to do with the Soul engag'd; for then the Simile ſhou'd be the Soul diſengag'd in any Particular, and the mere Swiftneſs of the Tranſition of the Mind from one Thought to another. Thus, take him which way you will, his Inſtance has nothing to do with the Matter in hand, but has left the Abſurdity where he found it, in Tragi-Comedy. I confeſs, moſt of our Tragi-Comedies are ſuch as engage the Paſſions ſo very little, that the Tranſition from the ſerious to the comical Part may be quick and eaſy; but then the Argument has nothing to do here, for that which was to be prov'd, was the ſwift Tranſition from Grief to Mirth, or the like.

But (ſays Mr. Dryden) a Scene of Mirth, mix'd with Tragedy, has the ſame Effect upon us, which our Muſic has between the Acts; and that we find a Relief to us from the beſt Plot and Language of the Stage, if the Diſcourſes have been long.

By this he wou'd make the Comic Part of no more relation to the Play than the Muſic which is betwixt the Acts, that has none at all. But the Parallel here is as defective as in the former; for the Muſic employing only Sounds, may by them contribute gradually to the calming the Soul, reſtoring that Tranquillity which the ruffling of a great Paſſion had rais'd: here is nothing to require the Attention of the Mind or Reaſon; here is no ſtart from one Extremity to the other, which confounds, and not relieves, the agitated Soul. But according to this Notion of his, they might compendiouſly act a Tragedy and a Comedy together, firſt a Scene of Tragedy, and then a Scene of Comedy: but ſure Mr. Dryden, nor any of his Opinion, wou'd ever think this a Perfection; and ſuch a Perfection found out and improv'd by us, as the Antients, nor any other Nation of the Moderns, ever knew. And yet moſt, if not all, of our modern Tragi-Comedies, are even as if a Tragedy and Comedy were acted together; the Comic Part of them having no more to do with, or relation to the Tragic, than if it were another Play: as in the Spaniſh Fryer, the Comedy of which has with Succeſs been acted by it ſelf, without any Gap in the Repreſentation; which is a Proof that it is no Part of the Tragedy, ſince it is not maim'd by the Separation. And yet Mr. Dryden pleaſantly enough tells his Patron, in the Beginning of his Dedication—Accordingly I us'd the beſt of my Endeavour, in the management of two Plots ſo very different from each other, that it was not perhaps the Talent lent of every Writer to have made them of a Piece—Since he himſelf has not done it in any one Particular, unleſs it be by making two or three of the under Parts of the ſerious Part, the chief Perſons in the Comic, which yet does not connect them ſo, but they may be acted ſeparately, and make a different Comedy, and Tragedy; which needs no great Talent to perform, ſince no Poet cou'd do leſs in his worſt Performance. Had he indeed united them ſo, that the Fryer, Lorenzo, Gomez, Elvira, &c. had contributed to the carrying on the Plot, or Deſign, of the Queen, Torriſmond, &c. or the Diſcovery of the Birth of Torriſmond, or the Life of old Sancho; there had been ſome ground to ſay they were of a Piece: but whilſt they carry on two ſeveral, nay different Deſigns, they are two diſtinct Plays, tho lamely tack'd together, acted together, and printed together, as One Play.

The Author's Suppoſition of ſo quick a Tranſition from Grief, Anger, &c. to Mirth or Laughter, would go a great way to convince a ſenſible Man, that he ſeldom or never had himſelf experimentally felt thoſe Emotions of Soul, which a true Paſſion excites; and therefore knew not how it is fixt to a Paſſion which it is engag'd in, by a well-written Scene. But in this he was always equal to himſelf. He was once talking of tranſlating Homer, and I recommended Euripides to his Pen; but he reply'd, that he did not like that Poet: which was a Proof that he had but little Taſte of Nature, or that he was afraid to do do that Poet juſtice in the Engliſh Language, leſt his charming Draughts of Nature ſhou'd refine our Taſte, and make us contemn the tinſel Trifles of our modern Writers of Tragedy. But I am rather apt to think it was his want of a true Reliſh of Nature, having been early miſled by a great Converſation with the French Romances, which are direct Oppoſites to Nature; becauſe he told a Gentleman, being by one day at a Coffee-houſe, who had met with Succeſs in ſome of his Plays, that he wou'd make much ſuch another Poet as Otway: the Gentleman juſtly reply'd, that he deſir'd to be no greater.

I ſhou'd not have taken ſo much Pains with this Eſſay of Mr. Dryden, had it not been printed in his Works, without any mark of the Alteration of his Opinion; becauſe the ignorant Reader, who depends on his Judgment in Print, will be miſled by his Authority, and the Speciouſneſs of his Reaſons. And this I hope will be my Excuſe for oppoſing a Man, who muſt by all be acknowledg'd to have much improv'd our Verſification, and to have diſcover'd a Genius in his other Writings, which juſtly claims our Admiration. But that very thing is what muſt juſtify my Undertaking, ſince the very Authority which his Merits give him, will be the more prejudicial in eſtabliſhing his Errors.

Before I quit this point, I muſt take notice, that the Author of Shakeſpear's Life is of opinion, that Tragi-Comedy will take more than Tragedies; but he having given no Inſtances to prove this Opinion, I muſt only take it for a Suppoſition, which has more probability of Falſhood than Truth. For we have not for ſome Years paſt had any of that kind on the Stage, which have pleas'd: The Fatal Marriage, and Oroonoko, are the laſt that I can remember; and I am apt to believe, that more were pleas'd with the Tragic Part of both thoſe Plays, than with the Comic. Thus the Scene of the Hiſtorical Dialogues of Shakeſpear pleaſe by a ſort of Preſcription; yet, let any Man in our Days bring any ſuch thing upon the Stage, he wou'd ſoon be convinc'd of his Error by a juſt Condemnation.

I hope by this time I have made it plain, that the Moderns have not got any Advantage above the Antients in the Drama, by what Mr. Dryden has urg'd in their behalf in the Particulars above-mention'd; but there ſtill remains another Objection, tho much more modeſtly urg'd, in his Preface to All for Love: In which Play, he at laſt confeſſes that the Antients ought to be our Maſters, and allows what Horace ſays to be juſt.

——————Vos Exemplaria Græca
Nocturna verſate Manu, verſate Diurna.

But then—Yet tho their Models are regular, they are too little for Engliſh Tragedy, which requires to be built on a larger Compaſs. Tho I could anſwer him from himſelf in his Preface to Oedipus, after he has ſaid more on this Point, or rather explain'd what he ſays here; yet I ſhall examine the Weight of what he urges. But firſt let us hear him in the Preface before quoted to Oedipus. "Sophocles is indeed admirable "every where, and therefore we have follow'd him as cloſe as ever we "cou'd. But the Athenian Theatre (whether more perfect than ours, "is not now diſputed) had a Perfection differing from ours. You ſee there "in every Act a ſingle Scene (or two at the moſt) which manages the "Buſineſs of the Play; and after that ſucceeds the Chorus, which com-"monly takes up more Time in ſinging, than there has been employ'd in "ſpeaking. The principal Perſon appears almoſt conſtantly thro the Play; "but the inferior Parts ſeldom above once in the whole Tragedy. The "Conduct of our Stage is much more difficult, where we are oblig'd "never to loſe any conſiderable Character, which we have once pre-"ſented."

And a little after—"Perhaps after all, if we cou'd think ſo, the "antient Method, as it is eaſieſt, is alſo the moſt natural, and the beſt: "for Variety, as 'tis manag'd, is too often ſubject to breed Diſtraction; "and while we wou'd pleaſe too many ways, for want of Art in the "Conduct, we pleaſe in none."

I confeſs I was not a little puzzled at the firſt Quotation till I met with the ſecond, which was as a Comment on the former. Nay, I am yet to

ſeek

ſeek what he means by a Model; he ſhou'd have defin'd his Term, ſince 'tis plain that he means ſomething different from what we underſtand by the Formation of the Deſign, or the Conſtitution of the Subject. The Reader will find, that in thoſe Rules, which I have from Ariſtotle laid down for the writing and judging of a Tragedy, there is no one Rule about the ſeldom, or often bringing in of the Characters; but that naturally follows the Conſtitution of the Subject: for it is certain in Reaſon and Nature, that none ought to be brought in, but ſuch as are neceſſary to the Deſign, and only as they are neceſſary; to do otherwiſe, is contrary to good Conduct, and to Perfection; and if in many of thoſe Plays of the Ancients which remain, what Mr. Dryden has obſerv'd be true, it is no Rule to him, if he forms his Story according to Art, and yet have his under Characters more frequently on the Stage. That each Act of the Ancients conſiſts of about one or two Scenes, is a certain Perfection, but in the Laiſon of Scenes, as the French call it, and in their Shortneſs, which I believe Mr. Dryden meant by their Model being too little for our Stage; for thoſe numerous Scenes brought in by our Poets, do not only ſtretch the Play to an unreaſonable Length, but generally breed a Confuſion, and have no Connection to one another. So that this ſhews Mr. Dryden's Error in making a Diſtinction betwixt the Perfection of the Athenian Stage, and that of London, in the ſame numerical ſort of Poem, in which there can be but one Perfection, and either Athens, or London, muſt be in the wrong: But I have already prov'd Athens in the right; ſo that what Mr. Dryden urges for a different Perfection on our Stage, only proves a Defect, and ought therefore to be rejected; as he indeed in the End ſeems to confeſs, but lays his adhering to the Error on the Tyranny of Cuſtom, which Men of his Authority may and ought to break and reform.

Beſides that Shortneſs which he objects to the Ancients, is what we often wiſh for in our Modern Authors, when they tire us with their tedious Scenes for four Hours together, without ever engaging our Souls at all: And the Chorus was a more natural Relief than Comic Interludes, or the Muſic betwixt the Acts. That our Stage does not require a larger Compaſs to build on, is plain from the Orphan of Otway, which ſtill pleaſes, and ever will; and yet for the moſt part it is conducted according to the Model of the Ancients, and without any under Plot; the Epiſodes of it being entirely Parts of the Deſign, and not to be left out without maiming the whole. Whence it is plain, that it is not the Fault of the Audience, but the Impotence or Ignorance of the Poet, who is not able (tho he calls this Way the moſt eaſy) to travel in ſo ſmooth and pleaſant a Way.

But this Controverſy betwixt the Ancients and the Moderns is too copious and large to be throughly diſcuſs'd in this Point, it has engag'd Boileau and Mr. Perault in France, and Mr. Wotton, and Sir William Temple,

Temple, in our own Country; but I think a middle Courſe ought to be ſteer'd: there are things in which they have evidently excell'd us, and to imitate which, is counted now the higheſt Perfection; as in Statuary: and the beſt Painters have made it their Study to imitate the Antique. The ſame muſt be ſaid in Oratory and Poetry, eſpecially in the Tragic Poem, in which we have by no means yet been able to rival them. We have had ſome Poets who have happily deſcrib'd ſome things finely, and given us many pretty and fine Reflections and Topics; but there is no Order, no Decorum, no Harmony of Deſign, nay no Relation of the Parts to each other; but as Horace ſays,

Inceptis gravibus plerumq; & magna profeſſis,
Purpureus late qui ſplendeat, unus & alter
Aſſuitur Pannus. Cum Lucus, & Ara Dianæ,
Et properantis Aquæ per amænos Ambitus agros,
Aut Flumen Rhenum, aut pluvius deſcribitur Arcus.

They can patch a lame Plot with ſome fine Lines, ſome pretty Similes; can make a fine Deſcription of a Battle, of a Grove, or the like; but all theſe thruſt into their wrong Places, where they have not the leaſt to do. And theſe are the Men who exclaim againſt the Rules, and by a ſenſeleſs Noiſe ſet up for Patrons of Confuſion, and Enemies to Harmony and Order; as if any one ſhould prefer the rambling Prelude of a Performer (who, by the way, ſeldom knows any thing of the Compoſition) to the fine Sonata's of Corelli, or the admirable Compoſition and Harmony of Parts in a Piece of Henry Purcel. One is only a Proof of the Volubility of the Performer's Fingers; the other the Power of Muſic, that moves the Soul which way it pleaſes.

But there may be ſome tolerable Reaſon given, why theſe Poets, that have even thoſe Scantlings of Poetry, ſhould ſurpriſe the Town into an Admiration of their Performances, as our Shakeſpear, and Mr. Dryden in his Plays; but the Succeſs of ſome ſince them, is wholly unaccountable, who are full as faulty in their Plots or Deſigns, and yet have ſcarce one Line in a Play that diſcovers any Reflection.

Among theſe are our Lady Poets, who like Juno in the Production of Vulcan, are always delivered of Cripples. I beg the Ladies Pardon; I do not exclude them from all manner of Poetry; they have in all Ages ſucceeded in the leſſer Poeſy, but no Woman of any other Nation, that I know of, except England, ever pretended to meddle with the Drama. Magaloſtrate the Miſtreſs of Alcmæon, the Lyric Poet; Sappho one of whoſe Poems is ſtill extant, and whoſe Writings were admired by Longinus himſelf; ſhe wrote Elegies, Epigrams, Monodes and Iambics; and her Friend Erinna, and her cotemporary Demophila; Theano, the Wife of

of Pythagoras; Cleobalina who wrote Ænigma's; Corinna who was Miſtreſs of ſo much Excellence, and ſo good a Lyric Poet, that ſhe was call'd the Lyric Muſe, and had five times the Victory over the famous Pindar of Thebes: Teleſilla, Praxilla, Aſpaſia, a ſecond Erinna, Myro, Eudoſia, the Wife of Theodoſius the younger; Damocharis, Heſtica of Alexandria, Moeio, Noſſis a Lyric Poeteſs, ſome of whoſe Poems are yet extant; and Philænis. All theſe we have had from Greece, and not one of them attempted the Drama. Now for the Latins, who are but very few. Corinficia, whoſe Epigrams are ſtill extant; Sempronia, Theophila, the Wife of Canius the Poet; Proba, Roſweid a Nun, who writing in Latin Verſe, is put among the Latin Poets. But in England we have had almoſt as many Ladies in the Sock and Buskin as Men. But to theſe I wou'd addreſs what Plato has made Sophocles and Euripides ſay to a young Poet, who thus ſpeaks to them. I can make Verſes tolerably well, and I know how in my Deſcriptions to extend a mean Subject, and contract a great one; I know how to excite Terror and Compaſſion, and to make pitiful Things appear dreadful, and menacing. I will therefore go and write Tragedies. Sophocles and Euripides anſwer him thus: Do not go ſo faſt, Tragedy is not what you take it to be; 'tis a Body compos'd of many different and well-ſuited Parts; of which you will make a Monſter, unleſs you know how to adjuſt them. You may know what is to be learn'd before the Study of the Art of Tragedy, but you don't yet know that Art.

But this ought to be addreſs'd to the Male Writers as well as the Female; for it has been the ill Writing of the former, which gave them the Aſſurance to attempt a Thing, in which they cou'd ſee no Difficulty, while they ſaw nothing but the wild Compoſitions of the Times.

But this is a Subject which I have a Deſign to touch more cloſely when I ſhall examine all the taking Plays of the latter Years, and deliver a Critic upon them in ſuch a Manner, that the Ladies themſelves may judge of the Ridiculouſneſs of thoſe things, which we now call Tragedies. For the Fate of that Point of the Drama depending much on the Boxes, the Labour will not be diſagreeable to give them ſuch Demonſtrations as may without Difficulty inform their Underſtandings, and Judgments.

Tho this gradual way of reforming the Stage may be ſomething tedious, yet ſince there is no other Way to obtain that Happineſs, but the Government's having an immediate Inſpection of it, or by deputing as many Judges of the Drama as were in Athens, where each of the Ten Tribes choſe a Judge, who acted upon Oath; but that can never be done while private Intereſt has the Direction of a publick Diverſion; for that has no Regard to any thing, but it ſelf.

I ſhall here take my Leave of the Plays of Shakeſpear; and ſhall proceed to the Conſideration of his Poems, which are publiſh'd in this Edition, and are more perfect in their kind, than his Plays; as will appear by making a Judgment of them by thoſe Rules which I ſhall lay down as the Guides to Perfection in them.

The End of the Remarks on the Plays of Shakeſpear.

REMARKS

REMARKS

ON THE

POEMS

OF

SHAKESPEAR.

I Come now to Shakeſpear's Poems, the Publication of which in one Volume, and of a-piece with the reſt of the Works, gave occaſion to my Peruſal of his other Writings, with ſo much Attention, that I cou'd not eaſily be impos'd on by any ſpurious Copy of that Poet. 'Tis true, there may perhaps be a Michael Angelo found, who may copy the Antique ſo admirably, as to puzzle the greateſt Maſters; but then the very Copy muſt have the Beauty and Merit of an Original. Thus I am confident, that tho the Poems this Volume contains are extremely diſtinguiſh'd in their Excellence and Va-

luc, yet there is not one of them that does not carry its Author's Mark and Stamp upon it; not only the ſame manner of Thinking, the ſame turn of Thought, but even the ſame Mode of Dreſs and Expreſſion, the Decompounds, his peculiar ſort of Epithets, which diſtinguiſh his from the Verſes of all his Cotemporaries or Succeſſors, as in the Poems—

From off a Hill, whoſe concave Womb reworded
A plaintful Story from a Siſtring Vale, &c.

And in his Plays this very Epithet we find particularly, That even her Art ſiſters the natural Roſes. But to compare all the Poems in this manner would be an endleſs Work, and make almoſt as many Volumes as his Plays; and it wou'd be perfectly unneceſſary, ſince whoever knows any thing of Shakeſpear, will find his Genius in every Epigram of theſe Poems, in every particular I have mention'd, and the frequent Catachreſes; his Starts aſide in Allegories, and in ſhort his Verſification, which is very unequal; ſometimes flowing ſmoothly but gravely like the Thames, at other times down-right Proſe. He never touches on an Image in any of them, but he proves the Poem genuine.

But ſome, perhaps, who are for undervaluing what they have no ſhare in, may ſay, that granting them to be Shakeſpear's, yet they are not valuable enough to be reprinted; as was plain by the firſt Editors of his Works, who wou'd otherwiſe have join'd them all together.

To this I anſwer——That the Aſſertion is falſe; or were it not, it is more than the Objector knows by his own Judgment and Underſtanding: But to prove it falſe we need only conſider, that they are much leſs imperfect in their Kind, than even the beſt of his Plays, as will appear from the Rules I ſhall lay down immediately: In the next Place, the firſt Editors were Players, who had nothing to do with any thing but the Dramatic Part, which yet they publiſh'd full of groſs Miſtakes, many of which remain to this Day; nor were they by any means Judges of the Goodneſs or Badneſs of the Beauties or Defects of either Plays or Poems.

There is next an Objection, That if theſe Poems had been Genuine, they had been publiſh'd in the Life time of the Author, and by himſelf; but coming out almoſt thirty Years after his Death, there is great Reaſon to ſuſpect that they are not Genuine.

To this I anſwer, That if nothing was to be thought his but what was publiſh'd in his Life time, much the greater Number of his Plays wou'd be as liable to this Objection as his Poems. Next, here is indeed no Weight in the Objection; Is there any thing more common than the Publication of Works of great Men after their Deaths? It is more than thirty Years ſince the Death of the ingenious Butler; yet it is certain that Mr. L——l of the Temple has a Manuſcript of his in his Hands, perhaps more valuable than his Hudibraſs, and in the ſame kind of Verſe, becauſe the Sub-

Subject wou'd afford greater Matter for ſo fine a Genius to work on; and if this Gentleman ſhou'd be prevail'd upon to do the dead Author the Juſtice to publiſh this to the World, cou'd this Objection rob his Memory of the Work, and make it ſpurious? No, no, there is a likeneſs in one Man's Children generally, which extends not beyond the Family; and in the Children of the Brain it is always ſo, when they are begot by a Genius indeed. Beſides, theſe Poems being moſt to his Miſtreſs, it is not at all unlikely, that ſhe kept them by her till they fell into her Executor's Hands, or ſome Friend who wou'd not let them be any longer conceal'd. But after all, there were more in proportion of theſe Poems in this Volume, printed in his Life-time, than of his Plays, as is plain from his Venus and Adonis, his Tarquin and Lucrece, and ſeveral Epigrams and Sonnets.

There is a Poem in this Book called the Paſſionate Shepherd, which gives us a ſtrong Proof of its being Shakeſpear's; for Sir Hugh the Welch Levite, in the Merry Wives of Windſor, to appeaſe his Choler or his Fears, as he is waiting to fight Dr. Caius, repeats often ſome of the Lines: as

By ſhallow Rivers, to whoſe Falls
Melodious Birds ſing Madrigals,
There will I make our Peds of Roſes,
And a thouſand fragrant Poſies.

This at leaſt proves it a known and celebrated Song when Shakeſpear wrote that Play, which was Years before his Death.

There is yet another Proof of the Poems being genuine, for there is in them the Song which begins the fourth Act of Meaſure for Meaſure, at length; whereas there is but one Stanza of it in the Play, which is,

Take, oh! take thoſe Lips away,
That ſo ſweetly were forſworn,
And thoſe Eyes the break of Day
Lights which do miſlead the Morn.
But my Kiſſes bring again,
Seals of Love, tho ſeal'd in vain.

The Stanza, omitted in the Play, is,

Hide, O! hide thoſe Hills of Snow,
Which thy frozen Boſom bears,
On whoſe Tops the Pinks that grow
Are of thoſe that April wears;

But my poor Heart firſt ſet free,
Bound in thoſe Icy Charms by thee.

This leads me to a Book lately publiſh'd, containing only ſome few of his Poems confuſedly put together; for what is there call'd The Paſſionate Pilgrim, is no more than a Medly of Shakeſpear's, thrown into a Heap without any Diſtinction, tho they are on ſeveral and different Subjects: As for Example, The firſt Stanza in theſe Poems is call'd, The Falſe Relief: the next Stanza is call'd, The Temptation; and on quite another Subject, tho incorporated into one under that general Title of The Paſſionate Pilgrim: the next Stanza is call'd, Faſt and Looſe, and ſtill on another Subject: the next Stanza, tho join'd as the reſt as part of the ſame Poem, is on a Subject vaſtly different from that of the former Stanza, and is call'd, The Sweet Provocation: the ſame holds good of the next, which is call'd, The Conſtant Vow.

I might go on with the reſt of them, which confound the Reader, and very much injure the Poet, by palming on his Memory ſuch abſurd Incoherences, as none but ſuch a wiſe Editor cou'd ever have ſtumbled on.

Again, the Poems are not only in that Book thus ridiculouſly blended together in a prepoſterous Mixture, but ſome of them are lame and imperfect; to inſtance in one, which is here call'd, The Paſſionate Shepherd. The Anſwer to that, in the Book we mention, is not above ſix or ſeven Lines; and here it is as long and as beautiful as the Shepherd's Addreſs, nay, in my opinion much better.

Tho Love and its Effects are often happily enough touch'd in many of theſe Poems, yet I muſt confeſs that it is but too viſible, that Petrarch had a little infected his way of thinking on that Subject: yet who-ever can admire Mr. Cowley's Miſtreſs, has a thouſand times more Cauſe of Admiration of our Shakeſpear, in his Love Verſes; becauſe he has ſometimes ſuch Touches of Nature as will make amends for thoſe Points, thoſe Epigrammatica Acumina, which are not, or ever can be, the Product of a Soul truly touch'd with the Paſſion of Love.

The Poem of Venus and Adonis has been much admir'd, ſince it has of late come to be known to the Curious, and there are a great many very beautiful Images and Lines in it. Bion, one of the Minor Greek Poets, has wrote on the ſame Subject, with this difference: The Britiſh Bard has taken more of the Story in; that is, he has given us a Draught of the laſt Scenes of the amorous Eſſays of the Paſſion of Venus on the Youth, as well as of his Death, and her Lamentations upon it; whereas the Edyllium of Bion only laments his Death. However, this furniſhes us with an Opportunity of making a better Compariſon betwixt our Poet and the Antients, than that which Mr. Hales of Eton, my Lord Falkland and the reſt, took in oppoſition to Ben. Johnſon. I the more willingly do

do this, becauſe the right honourable the Earl of Winchelſea has tranſlated this very Piece with a great deal of Addreſs, which I ſhall here give you as I find it in Print.

The firſt Edyllium of Bion, On the Death of ADONIS.

Tranſlated by the Right Honourable the Earl of Winchelſea.

MOURN all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!
Riſe wretched Venus, and to Mourning turn
The Tyrian Robes thy beauteous Limbs adorn:
Thy panting Boſom beat in wild Deſpair,
And pierce with thy Complaints the yielding Air.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

Ah! how his Breaſt ſeems lovely to the Sight!
The Tusk that wounded him is not ſo white.
The ſparkling Luſtre now forſakes his Eyes,
And from his Lips the rich Carnation flies;
The charming Youth lies breathleſs on the Plain,
And Cytherea's Kiſſes are in vain.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

Tho wide the Wound upon his Thigh appears,
The tender Goddeſs' Breaſt a larger bears.
Cloſe by his Side his faithful Dogs attend,
And howling o'er the Corps, the Skies they rend.
The Mountain Nymphs their ſad Diſtraction ſhow,
But Venus' Griefs no Limits will allow.
Bare-footed to the Deſart ſhe repairs,
With Looks diſorder'd, and neglected Hair,
And her ſoft Fleſh the cruel Brambles tear.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

The

The Rocks and Floods lament his hapleſs Fate,
Adonis, ſtill Adonis, they repeat.
The Flowers a univerſal Sorrow ſhew,
And weep his Fall in pearly Drops of Dew.
But Venus o'er the pathleſs Mountain flies,
And Hills and Vallies eccho to her Cries.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

Who can the Cyprian Queen's ſad Story know,
Without lamenting her diſaſtrous Woe?
With Arms out-ſtretch'd ſhe graſps the fleeting Air,
And cries, Adonis ſtay! ſtay, lovely Fair!
At length I've found thee! fly not my Embrace,
My glowing Kiſs ſhall warm thy bloodleſs Face.
With eager Lips I'll draw thy parting Breath,
Receive thy Soul, and ſuck thy Love in Death.
This farewel Kiſs I never will reſign,
And tho you leave me, that ſhall ſtill be mine.
Far off you fly Adonis, and muſt go
To viſit the remorſleſs King below.
But as a Goddeſs far more wretched, I
Immortally am curs'd, and cannot die.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

The Queen of Love aſſumes a widow'd State,
And round her little Loves unactive wait!
She blames thee, too raſh Youth! alone to dare
Encounter ſavage Beaſts, himſelf ſo fair.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

As many Tears fair Venus' Eyes ſupply
As Drops of Blood fell from Adonis' Thigh;
From which ſucceſſively were ſeen to riſe
From Blood the Roſe, from Tears Anemonies.
Mourn all ye Loves! the fair Adonis dies!
The lovely Youth in Death's Embraces lies!

Fair Cytherea, from the Woods retire;
No longer there lament your loſt Deſire.

The Nuptial Bed for your cold Love prepare,
Who looks (as ſleeping) charming ſtill, and fair.
On golden Bolſters raiſe his heavy Head,
So let him lie tho pale his Looks, and dead!
In his rich Garments lay him gently down,
The ſame that us'd thy happy Nights to crown.
Let Flow'rs and Garlands o'er the Corps be ſpread;
But they, ſince he's no more, will quickly fade.
With fragrant Eſſences perfume the Air,
Since he is gone, who was all ſweet, and fair.
Now deckt in Purple ſoft Adonis lies;
The little Loves attend with weeping Eyes,
And ſtrive by different Ways their Grief to ſhow,
This tramples on his Dart, that breaks his Bow;
A third i'th' Air his uſeleſs Quiver throws;
A fourth th' embroider'd Slipper wou'd unlooſe.
In golden Cups another Water bears,
One waſhes off the Blood his Thigh beſmears.
Another beats officiouſly the Air,
And with ſoft Pinions fanns the breathleſs Fair.
All Hymen's Torches on the Threſhold lie
Extinguiſh'd, and the Marriage Garland by.
Hymen's no longer ſung, but all around
Adonis is become the mournful Sound.
The pitying Graces in the Conſort move,
And mourn th' unhappy Cytherea's Love.
Her boundleſs Grief the fatal Siſters ſhare,
Endeavour to recall the beauteous Fair,
But cruel Proſerpine is deaf to Prayer.

I need not tranſcribe that of Shakeſpear, ſince by turning to the Page you may find it. The particular Complaint of Venus in Bion begins,

——Μέγον Ἄδωνι,

Δύστοτμε μέγον Ἄδωνι, &c.

The Similies in Shakeſpear are generally very good, as that,

Ev'n as an empty Eagle ſharp by Faſt,
Tires with her Beak on Feathers, Fleſh, and Bone, &c.

And that in the next Stanza but one.

Look

Look how a Bird lies tangled in a Net,
So faſten'd, &c.

But it wou'd be tedious to refer to all the Similies, ſince there is ſcarce a Page but has one or more very well adapted, to the heightning of the Subject.

Venus's Speeches to Adonis, allowing now and then for ſome Petrarchiſms, are natural and pathetick enough, expreſſing her Eagerneſs of Deſire.

Oh! Pity, 'ga n ſhe cry, flint-hearted Boy, &c.

The Deſcription of the Horſe of Adonis, and all that paſſes from the Jennet's coming out of the Coppice, is very lively; her Speech to him likewiſe.

Oh! faireſt Mover on this mortal Round! &c.

And her Reply to him.

What canſt thou talk (quoth ſhe) haſt thou a Tongue?

Her Deſcription of the Terrors of the Boar, and her Diſſuaſions from hunting are very good. But ſhe ſeems ſomething too long and particular in her Perſuaſion to his courſing or hunting the timerous Hare. Shakeſpear was at leaſt a young Poet when he wrote this, it being as he tells his Patron in his Billet Dedicatory his firſt Eſſay; I ſuppoſe he means in this Kind, for certainly ſome of his Plays were wrote before it, being infinitely leſs perfect in the Diction and Verſification. Her chiding of Death, expreſſes that Terror in lively Colours.

Beſides the Similies and pathetick Speeches, there are ſcatter'd up and down ſome Topics well expreſs'd, as

On Love.

Love is a Spirit all compact of Fire,
Not groſs to ſink, but light, and will aſpire.

And,

On Love and Luſt.

Call it not Love, for Love to Heaven is fled,
Since ſweating Luſt on Earth uſurps his Name, &c.

On

There is alſo ſomething fine on the Power of Love.

The next Poem is upon the Rape of Lucrece by Tarquin. I have ventur'd to make this Edition differ from the former; becauſe thoſe few Notes that us'd to be printed with it, are very childiſh, and ſuperfluous, and doubtleſs not deſign'd to be committed to the Preſs by the Author; they being only to point out in Proſe to the Reader, what he has before his Eye in Verſe. This Poem in my Opinion is much inferior to the former, tho a much better Subject for a Poem. Lucrece is too talkative and of too wanton a Fancy for one in her Condition, and of her Temper; yet there are many good Lines, and ſome very good Topics, tho a little too far ſpread; as thoſe of Night, Opportunity, and Time.

Oh! Comfort-killing Night! Image of Hell,
Dim Regiſter, and Notary of Shame, &c.

And,

Oh! Opportunity, thy Guilt is great!
'Tis thou, that execut'ſt the Traitor's Treaſon, &c.

And,

Miſhapen Time, Copeſmate of ugly Night,
Swift ſubtle Poſt, Carrier of griſly Care, &c.

Theſe, tho they expreſs a great many Properties and Effects of the Topics, are yet too curious and too long to entertain a Lady in ſo deſperate a Condition as Lucrece was: and the ſame will hold good of ſeveral things, before ſhe gives herſelf the fatal Wound.

There are ſome other common Places in this Poem, worth minding: As of the Avaritious, tho brought in by way of Simile.

Thoſe that much covet, are of Gain ſo fond,
That oft they have not that which they poſſeſs, &c.

Which is the Senſe of this Latin Saying, Tam deeſt avaro quod habet, quam quod non habet. And on the ſame Subject.

The aged Man that coffers up his Gold, &c.

There are two Verſes very like this of Claudian:

Regis ad Exemplum totus componitur Orbis.

For Princes are the Glaſs, the School, the Book,
Where Subjects Eyes do learn, do read, do look.

I urge not this to charge him with Plagiariſm, but only to ſhew that if the Similitude of Thought may be a Proof of his having read the Claſſics, as well as the finding no ſuch, an Argument that he had not; theſe and various other Inſtances, which I might give from both his Poems and Plays, wou'd prove that he was not ſo unacquainted with them, as ſome Gentlemen wou'd perſuade us. There are in this Poem, as well as in the former, a great many fine Similes.

There is beſides in this Poem, I think, a Proof of his knowing Virgil; for he has painted Sinon, as Virgil has done before him. I do not mean totidem Verbis, but has given him the ſame Character, and ſo plainly, that this is viſibly taken from that.

All that I have to ſay of the Miſcellaneous Poems, is, that they are generally Epigrams, and thoſe perfect in their kind, according to the beſt Rules that have been drawn from the Practice of the Ancients, by Scaliger, Lillius Giraldus, Minturnus, Robertellus, Gorræus, Poſſevinus, Pontanus, Raderus, Donatus, Voſſius, and Vavaſſor the Jeſuit; at leaſt as far as they agree: but it is not to be ſuppos'd, that I ſhould give you here all, that has been ſaid of this ſort of Poeſy by all theſe Authors; for that would it ſelf make a Book in Folio: I ſhall therefore here only give you ſome conciſe Rules for this and ſome other Parts of the leſſer Poetry, on which Shakeſpear has touch'd in theſe Poems; for he has ſomething Paſtoral in ſome, Elegiac in others, Lyric in others, and Epigrammatic in moſt. And when the general Heads of Art are put down in all theſe, it will be no hard matter to form a right Judgment on the ſeveral Performances.

I ſhall begin with thoſe excellent Rules in the preſent Duke of Buckingham's Eſſay on Poetry; of which he ſays juſtly:

'Tis not a flaſh of Fancy, which ſometimes
Dazling our Minds, ſets off the ſlighteſt Rhymes;
Bright as a Blaze, yet in a Moment done:
True Wit is everlaſting, as the Sun;
Which, tho ſometimes behind a Cloud retir'd,
Breaks out again, and is by all admir'd.

Number,

Number, and Rhyme, and that harmonious Sound,
Which never does the Ear with harſhneſs wound,
Are very neceſſary, yet but vulgar Arts;
For all in vain theſe ſuperficial Parts
Contribute to the Structure of the whole,
Without a Genius too; for that's the SOUL:
A Spirit, which inſpires the Work throughout,
As that of Nature moves the World about;
A Heat, that glows in every Word that's writ;
'Tis ſomething of Divine, and more than Wit:
It ſelf unſeen, yet all things by it ſhown;
Deſcribing all Men, but deſcrib'd by none.

As all is Dullneſs, where the Fancy's bad,
So without Judgment Fancy is but mad.
And Judgment has a boundleſs Influence,
Not only in the Choice of Words, but Senſe,
But on the World, on Manners, and on Men,
Fancy is but the Feather of the Pen:
Reaſon is that ſubſtantial uſeful Part,
Which gains the Head, while t'other wins the Heart.

Firſt then of Songs, which now ſo much abound:
Without his Song, no Fop is to be found;
A moſt offenſive Weapon, which he draws
On all he meets, againſt Apollo's Laws.
Tho nothing ſeems more eaſy, yet no part
Of Poetry requires a nicer Art.
For as in Rows of richeſt Pearl there lies
Many a Blemiſh, which eſcapes our Eyes,
The leaſt of which Defects is plainly ſhown,
In ſome ſmall Ring, and brings the Value down;
So Songs ſhou'd be to juſt Perfection wrought,
Yet where can we ſee one without a Fault?
Exact Propriety of Words, and Thought,
Expreſſion eaſy, and the Fancy high;
Yet this not ſeem to creep, nor that to fly;
No Words tranſpos'd, but in ſuch Order all,
As tho hard wrought, may ſeem by Chance to fall.

Next Elegy, of ſweet but ſolemn Voice,
And of a Subject grave exacts the Choice.
The praiſe of Valour, Beauty, Wit contains,
And there too oft deſpairing Love complains.

Their greateſt Fault, who in this kind have writ,
Is not defect of Words, or want of Wit.
But ſhould this Muſe harmonious Numbers yield,
* And every Couplet be with Fancy fill'd;
If yet a juſt Coherence be not made
Between each Thought, and the whole Model laid
So right, that every Step may higher riſe,
Like goodly Mountains, till they reach the Skies;
Trifles like ſuch perhaps of late have paſt,
And may be lik'd a while, but never laſt.
'Tis Epigram, 'tis Point, 'tis what you will;
But not an Elegy, nor writ with Skill,
No Panegyric, nor a Cooper's-Hill.

A higher Flight, and of a happier Force,
Are † Odes, the Muſes moſt unruly Horſe;
That bounds ſo fierce, the Rider has no Reſt,
But foams at Mouth, and moves like one poſſeſt.
The Poets here muſt be indeed inſpir'd
With Fury too, as well as Fancy fir'd.
Cowley might boaſt to have perform'd his Part,
Had he with Nature join'd the Rules of Art:
But ill Expreſſion gives ſometimes Allay
To that rich Fancy that can ne'er decay;
Tho all appear in Heat and Fury done,
The Language ſtill muſt ſoft and eaſy run.
Theſe Laws may ſeem a little too ſevere,
But Judgment yields, and ‡ Fancy governs here,
And makes the Work much eaſier than it ſeems.

I ſhall

* Tho this be an admirable Obſervation, yet I am afraid it will never pleaſe ſome of our late Writers of Poems, who have nothing but a Company of Lines put together without any Deſign; and yet they have gone down with our Fautors of the Muſes, as good Payment, and meritorious of Reward, as well as Reputation.

† Pindarics.

‡ My Lord here does not mean, that Judgment entirely leaves the Rule to Fancy in this Poem; for that wou'd be a direct Contradiction to what his Grace has ſaid before, and make the writing at all about it ſuperfluous. For indeed there is no ſort of Poem that leaves ſo arbitrary a Sway to Fancy; becauſe that wou'd be to put that ſort of Poem quite out of any Teſt of Excellence, than which there can be no greater Abſurdity in any manner of Writing. Beſides, in Pindaric Poems the happy Tranſitions and Digreſſions, and the natural Return to the Subject, contains an Art peculiar to it ſelf, and which cannot be done without a Maſtery of Judgment. And this is the Excellence of Pindar himſelf, but what a few or none of our modern Gentlemen ever think of. If they fill a Sheet or two of Paper with ſome irregular Rhymes, and various Numbers, they immediately entitle it a Pindaric Poem. Not that I deny the Poet the ſame Liberty in Engliſh, which Pindar himſelf took in Greek; but I wou'd not have him imagine, that it is in this particular that his Excellence is diſtinguiſh'd from all their Lyric Poets, who took a leſs Liberty, or rather Licenſe of Verſe. I know the ingenious Mr. Congreve has attempted

I ſhall only add a few Words of the Epigram, which his Grace has not touch'd upon.

Vavaſſor defines it in his Treatiſe on this Subject, thus: An Epigram is a ſhort Copy of Verſes, with Beauty and Point, treating of one only thing, and concluding with a more beautiful Point. It is defin'd much to this purpoſe by another Author—An Epigram is a ſhort and ſimple Poem, deducing ſomething of ſome one Thing, Perſon and Fact.

So that its Parts (ſays Vavaſſor) are but two, the expreſſing or reciting the Subject, and the Concluſion; and its Beauties are Brevity, and Acumen, which I term Point.

As to the Length of an Epigram, the Number of Verſes are not agreed on among the Critics. Some ſay it muſt not exceed two Lines, others allow four at moſt; aſſerting, that all above that Number are Excreſcency and vicious. But ſince in Catullus we ſometimes find above fifty Verſes, we may excuſe our ſelves for not yielding our Aſſent to their Dogmatic Rule. 'Tis true, that Martial but once in all his Epigrams reaches to twenty ſix Lines, and another Time to twenty, confining himſelf in all his other Poems to five or ſix Diſtichs; ſo that we ſhould (ſays the Jeſuit) rather keep within the Compaſs, that Martial by his Practice preſcrib'd, than venture to the larger Number of Catullus. But ſince Catullus has by all been prefer'd to the latter, we have no Reaſon to prefer the Practice of Martial to his.

The way to attain Brevity, is, not to aim at many things in the whole Epigram; then to expreſs even that little as conciſely as poſſible, and in ſuch Words, that, to extend it into more, wou'd enervate and looſe the Force and Strength of the Thought, and the Point, or Acumen.

The next Quality is Beauty, that is, an exact and harmonious Formation of the Whole, and the apt Agreement of all the Parts of the Poem from the Beginning to the End, with a certain ſort of Sweetneſs, as of a natural Colour, without any Fucus on the one hand, and yet without any thing attempted to prove a Regularity of the Numbers of Pindar; but I am afraid there is too much of Fancy and Imagination in it. Horace I am ſure, in the ſecond Ode of his fourtth Book, tells us of Pindar,

---

——Numeriſque fertur
Lege ſolutis.

And Mr. Cowley, who ſeems perfectly acquainted with this Author, and who made him his Study for ſome Time, is of another Mind; for thus he ſays in his Preface to his Pindarics.

And laſtly (which were enough for my Purpoſe) we muſt conſider that our Ears are Strangers to the Muſick of his Numbers, which ſometimes (eſpecially in his Songs and Odes) almoſt without any thing elſe makes an excellent Poet. For tho the Grammarians and Criticks have labour'd to reduce his Verſes into regular Feet, and Meaſures (as they have alſo thoſe of the Greek and Latin Comedies) yet in effect they are little better than Proſe to our Ears.

I have ſeen a Pindaric in Engliſh, which is not yet publiſh'd, call'd, The Female Reign, which, if I am not much deceiv'd, has come cloſer to the fine Tranſitions and Returns of Pindar to the Subject, than I have before ſeen in our Language.

low

low and mean on the other; and tho it be plain and rude Nature, yet not a mere ruſtic Simplicity, void of all Art, but that which is agreeable to a Court-Converſation, and the Language of the Polite. The Beauty of the Epigram muſt always be accompanied with Sweetneſs: And this varies according to the Subject. If that be delicate, ſoft, tender, amorous, &c. thoſe Qualities will ariſe from the well expreſſing the Nature of the Subject, that will give Beauty and Sweetneſs. In the Language, we ought rather to avoid that which is harſh, or an Enemy to Sweetneſs, than to ſtudy too much to find out that which may help and increaſe it. The Point is, what the Epigrammatical Critics ſtand much upon, which is chiefly in the Concluſion, by ending with ſomething unexpected, or biting.

All things are the allow'd Subject of the Epigram; as long as they are treated of with Brevity, Point, and Beauty.

How far Shakeſpear has excell'd in this Way, is plain from his Poems before us; but this muſt be allow'd him, that much of the Beauty and Sweetneſs of Expreſſion, which is ſo much contended for, is loſt by the Injury of Time, and the great Change of our Language ſince his Time; and yet there is a wonderful Smoothneſs in many of them, that makes the Blood dance to his Numbers.

This Abridgement of the Rules of this ſort of Poetry muſt ſerve for this time, ſince I have already run out beyond the Bounds preſcrib'd. I may hereafter be a little more accurate on this Head, if ever there be any Proſpect, that our great Men will grow weary of Trifles and Gawds, to uſe one of Shakeſpear's Words, and have the Reliſh of Art, and good Poetry, and good Senſe.

THE

THE TABLE.

VENUS and Adonis Pag. 5
Tarquin and Lucrece 7
The Glory of Beauty 177
Injurious Time 179
True Admiration 181
The Force of Love 182
The Beauty of Nature 183
Love's Cruelty ibid.
Youthful Glory 185
Good Admonition 186
Quick Prevention 187
Magazine of Beauty 188
An Ivitation to Marriage 189
Falſe Belief 191
A Temptation 192
Faſt and Looſe ibid.
True Content 193
A baſhful Lover ibid.
Strong Conceit 194
A ſweet Provocation ibid.
A conſtant Vow 195
The Exchange ibid.
A Diſconſolation 196
Cruel Deceit 197
The unconſtant Lover 198
The Benefit of Friendſhip 199
Friendly Concord 200
Inhumanity 201
A Congratulation ibid.
Loſs and Gain 203
Fooliſh Diſdain 204
Antient Antipathy ibid.
Beauty's Valuation. 205
Melancholy Thoughts ibid.
Love's Loſs 206
Love's Relief 207
Unanimity 208
Loth to depart 209
A Maſter-piece 210
Happineſs in Content 211
A dutiful Meſſage ibid.
Go and come quickly 212
Two faithful Friends 213
Careleſs Neglect 214
Stout Reſolution ibid.
A Duel 215
Love-ſick 216
Love's Labour loſt ibid.
Wholeſome Counſel 218
Sat fuiſſe 220
A living Monument ibid.
Familiarity breeds Contempt 221
Patiens armatus ibid.
A Valediction 222
Nil magnis Invidia 223
Love-ſick 224
The Picture of true Love 225
In Praiſe of his Love ibid.

The TABLE

A Resignation 227
Sympathizing Love 228
A Request to his scornful Love 230
A Lover's Affection, tho his Love prove unconstant 232
Complaint for his Lover's Absence 234
An Invocation to his Muse 235
Constant Affection 236
Amazement 238
A Lover's Excuse for his long Absence 239
A Complaint 240
Self-Flattery of her Beauty 241
A Trial of Love's Constancy 242
A good Construction of his Love's Unkindness 244
Error in Opinion ibid.
On the Receipt of a Table-Book from his Mistress. 245
A Vow ibid.
Love's Safety 246
An Intreaty for her Acceptance ibid.
Upon her playing on the Virginals 247
Immoderate Lust ibid.
In praise of her Beauty, tho black 248
Unkind Abuse 250
Love-Suit 251
His Heart wounded by her Eye 252
A Protestation. 253
An Allusion 254
Life and Death 255
A Consideration of Death ibid.
Immoderate Passion 256
Love's powerful Subtilty ibid.
Retaliation 258
Sun-Set 259
A Monument to Fame 260
Perjury 261
The Tale of Cephalus and Procris 262
Cupid's Treachery 264
That Menelaus was the Cause of his own Wrongs. 265
Mars and Venus 267
The History how the Minotaur was begot 268
The Tale of Dedalus 270
Achilles's Concealment 273
A Lover's Complaint 274
The Epistle of Paris to Helen 284
Helen to Paris 304
The Passionate Shepherd to his Love 317
The Nymph's Reply to the Shepherd 318
Another of the same Nature 319
Threnes 323

FINIS.

SEP 29 1930